THE TRADE REVIEW

AND

INTERCOLONIAL JOURNAL OF COMMERCE

FOR 1868.

VOLUME IV.

A Weekly Commercial and Financial Journal, Published in Montreal every Friday.

Price $2 per Annum, Invariably in Advance.

THE TRADE REVIEW for 1868, contains, in addition to articles on general commercial and financial topics, contributed by some of the ablest writers in Canada, and the record of events bearing on the trade of the country, reports of the Wholesale Markets of Montreal, Hamilton, Toronto, St John, Halifax and other leading points in the Dominion, with wholesale price lists of Groceries, Wines, Spirits, and liquors, Hardware, Drugs, Oils, Paints, soap and Candles, Leather, Boots and Shoes, Produce, Furs; prices of Grain daily; latest quotations of Bank, Railway, Mining, Government, and other Securities, both here and in London; a weekly report of the state of the Money Market, with quotations of Sterling Exchange here and in New York, price of Gold, U. S. Currency, Silver, &c, &c; officials statement of Banks and Railways; list of new Bankrupts each week; business announcements of the leading merchants and manufacturers in the Dominion; all of which information is especially valuable to country merchants doing business with importers and manufacturers.

To advertisers, the TRADE REVIEW, from its extensive circulation alike East and West, offers advantages superior to those of any other Journal in Canada, as there is not a town or village in this country where the English is understood, to which it does not find its way.

All communications to be addressed to the

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 50 cts. per bottle.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

It is a most delightful Hair Dressing.
It eradicates scurf and dandruff
It keeps the hair rich, soft and glossy.
It prevents hair turning gray and falling off.
It restores hair upon prematurely bald heads.

This is just what Lyon's Kathairon will do. It is pretty. It is cheap. durable. It is literally sold by the car-load, and yet its almost increasing, until there is hardly a country store that does not keep it, or a family that does not use it.

The public are respectfully informed that

W. J. BARRIE,

Photographic Artist, (late of London,) is now in Peterborough, and is prepared to execute work in every style belonging to the Art, as well as can be done in any other Gallery in the New Dominion. Having fitted his rooms as a first-class Gallery should be, and procured the latest improvements, he cannot fail to give satisfaction. Pictures taken from the extra fourth size down to the smallest that are required for Lockets or Rings. Likenesses of deceased friends carefully copied and enlarged, and finished in "India Ink," if desired. Carte De Visite, either full length, half figure or Vignette, taken in a most superior manner. Ambrotypes fitted to cases, cards or mats as desired. A beautiful variety of Picture Frames, Cases, Albums, &c &c. always on hand, which will be sold cheap. First-class Pictures taken in all sorts of weather. All work done with neatness and despatch. Remember the place, in Mr T Chamberlain & Son's New Building, corner of Hunter and Water streets. Entrance on Hunter street.

A call is respectfully solicited.

SUGAR-COATED.

A SAFE and reliable remedy in all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary people, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

J. H GIBSON, M. D., Dunham, C. E.
C. E. COTTON, M. D., Cowansville.
CHARLES BROWN, M. D., Cowansville.

JACOB'S RHEUHATIC LIQUID

Is an internal as well as an external remedy, and is the only one that always gives entire satisfaction, and all who once use it will never consent to change it for any other.

We have not space to enumerate the virtues accorded to it by thousands who have used it, and voluntarily testify to its merits. Buy a bottle and satisfy yourself that it is the best remedy ever offered.

THE BEST Toilet Hair Dressing ever discovered. It effectually cleanses the scalp, prevents the Hair from falling or turning prematurely grey, and when the follicles and glands are not destroyed, will produce a new and luxuriant growth of hair where it has already disappeared.

It is the cheapest, as well as the best, being only 25 cents for a large bottle. Buy it, try it, you'll like it and recommend it to your friends.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentleman:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1859.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensible article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for Americus, Wells, Fargo's and Harnden's Express.

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. SEELY."

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and hunters, should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook, Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co. over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

"Jes' so!"—"Exactly!"—Solon Shingle said they were there "every time." If he felt "cowley" in the morning, he took Plantation bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he lacked appetite, was weak, languid or unusually oppressed, he took Plantation bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins square and firm.

Few persons want any better authority; but as some may, just read the following:

"• • • I owe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.

H. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y."

"• • • I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. • • The Plantation Bitters have cured me.

REV. C. A. MILLWOOD, New York City.

"• • • I had lost all appetite—was so weak and enervated I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. • • • The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.

JAMES HEIMENWAY, St. Louis, Mo."

"• • • The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They act like a charm.

C. C. MOORE, 254 Broadway, N. Y."

Mrs. O. M. DEVOE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." We have received over a hundred reams of such certificates, but no advertisement is so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some support from parties who do not care what they sell. Be on your guard. See our private stamp over the cork.

PRESIDENT—W. H. Scott, Esq.
SOLICITORS—Weller & Hatton.
MANAGING DIRECTOR—H. C. Rogers.
TREASURER—John Burnham.
SECRETARY—Edg. Pearce.

This Company is organized for the purpose of developing the mineral resources of the west half of lot number Twenty in Concession A, in the Township of Galway, County of Peterborough, in the Province of Ontario and Dominion of Canada, and for the purpose of mining, smelting and otherwise preparing for market, the ores of all kinds of metals and minerals, together with the acquisition, employment, and disposal of all lands, mines, or ores, or granting to others the right to mine, smelt, or prepare for market, the ores of all metals and minerals that may be found of advatage to the interests of the Company.

The already acquired property of the Company, the west half of Lot Twenty, Concession A, Galway, is extremely rich in Lead, Iron Sulphate of Barytes, and Silver, quantities of each of which have already been taken by the promoters of the Company off this portion of the lot, which from the assays of Dr. Otway, show the following favorable results: Sulphur 23 per cent, Lead 77 per cent, Silver in Lead 16oz. 13dwt. 8grs., to the Ton, proving beyond a doubt the great value of the property. The original owners of the property have already spent about one thousand dollars in opening up the mineral veins that intersect the Lot, and in pushing an adit or tunnel through a hill upon the property.

The property is situated on the Bobcaygeon Road, about 12 miles from Bobcaygeon, at which place communication can easily be obtained to Lindsay or Peterborough, thence by the P. H. L. and B. Railway to Port Hope Ore or goods can thus be transferred at all seasons from the property to Port Hope, or vice versa at a cost not exceeding $5 per ton.

The original Proprietors have already conveyed the property to the Rev. Mark Burnham, of Ashburnham, in trust to be reconveyed by him to the Company when organized.

The Trustee of the Company has a perfect title to the said parcel of land so that no delay need occur in commencing operations, and an immediate return on the capital invested may be anticipated.

CANCERS CURED!

By a new, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay is required, until the cure is complete. The moment a cancer is discovered, it should be cured, as it will cost less and is more speedily cured than when of longer standing, and there is nothing to gain, and everything to lose by delay. What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, eye-lid or elsewhere, or small wart or sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given to parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. No money required in advance, and none until the cure is complete.

AYER'S
Sarsaparilla

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

And for the speedy cure of the following complaints:

CARLISLE, Ind., 6th June, 1866.

J. C. AYER & Co. Gents: I find it my duty to acknowledge what your Sarsaparilla has done for me. Having inherited a Scrofulous constitution, I have suffered from it in various ways for years. Sometimes it breaks out in Ulcers on my hands and arms; sometimes it turns inward and distresses me at the stomach. Two years ago it broke out on my head and covered my scalp and ears with sores, which was painful and loathsome beyond description. I tried many medicines and several physicians, but without much relief from any thing. In fact, the disorder grew worse. At length I was rejoiced to read in the Gospel Messenger that you had prepared an Alterative (Sarsaparilla), for I knew from your reputation that any thing you made must be good. I sent to Greencastle and got it, and used it till it cured me. I took it, as you advise, in small doses of a teaspoonful over a month, and used almost three bottles. New and healthy skin soon began to form under the scab, which after a while fell off. My skin is now clear, and I know by my feelings that the disease has gone from my system. You can well believe that I feel what I am saying when I tell you that I hold you to be one of the apostles of the age, and remain ever gratefully, Yours,

ALFRED B. TALLEY.

St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Dropsy.

Dr. Robert M. Preble writes from Salem, N. Y., 12th Sept., 1866, that he has cured an inveterate case of Dropsy, which threatened to terminate fatally, by the purgative use of our Sarsaparilla, and also a dangerous Malignant Erysipelas by large doses of the same; says he cures the common Erysipelas by it constantly.

Bronchocele, Goitre or Swelled Neck.

Zebulon Sloan of Prospect, Texas, writes: "Three bottles of your Sarsaparilla cured me from a Goitre—a hideous swelling on the neck, which I had suffered from over two years."

Leucorrhœa or Whites, Ovarian Tumor, Uterine Ulceration, Female Diseases.

Dr. J. B. S. Channing, of New York City, writes: "I most cheerfully comply with the request of your agent in saying I have found your Sarsaparilla a most excellent alterative in the numerous complaints for which we employ such a remedy, but especially in Female Diseases of the Scrofulous diathesis. I have cured many inveterate cases of Leucorrhœa by it, and some where the complaint was caused by ulceration of the uterus. The ulceration itself was soon cured. Nothing within my knowledge equals it for these female derangements."

Edward S. Marrow, of Newberry, Ala., writes, "A dangerous ovarian tumor on one of the females in my family, which had defied all the remedies we could employ, has at length been completely cured by your Extract of Sarsaparilla. Our physician thought nothing but extirpation could afford relief, but he advised the trial of your Sarsaparilla as the last resort before cutting, and it proved effectual. After taking your remedy eight weeks no symptom of the disease remains."

Syphilis and Mercurial Disease.

NEW ORLEANS, 20th August, 1866.

Dr. J. C. AYER: Sir, I cheerfully comply with the request of your agent, and report to you some of the effects I have realized with your Sarsaparilla.

I have cured with it, in my practice, most of the complaints for which it is recommended, and have found its effects truly wonderful in the cure of Venereal and Mercurial Disease. One of my patients had Syphilitic ulcers in his throat, which were possessing his palate and the top of his mouth. Your Sarsaparilla, steadily taken, cured him in five weeks. Another was attacked by secondary symptoms in his nose, and the ulceration had eaten away a considerable part of it, so that I believe the disorder would soon reach his brain and kill him. But it yielded to my administrations of your Sarsaparilla; the ulcers healed, and he is well again, but of course without some disfiguration to his face. A woman who had been treated for the same disorder by mercury was suffering from like poison in her bones. They had become so sensitive to the weather that on a damp day she suffered excruciating pain in her joints and bones. She, too, was cured entirely by your Sarsaparilla in a few weeks. I know from its formula, which your agent gave me, that this Preparation from your laboratory must be a great remedy; consequently, these truly remarkable results with it have not surprised me.

Fraternally yours, G. V. LARIMER, M. D.

Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint.

INDEPENDENCE, Preston Co., Va., 6th July, 1866.

Dr. J. C. AYER: Sir, I have been afflicted with a painful chronic Rheumatism for a long time, which baffled the skill of physicians, and stuck to me in spite of all the remedies I could find, until I tried your Sarsaparilla. One bottle cured me in two weeks, and restored my general health so much that I am far better than before I was attacked. I think it a wonderful medicine. J. FERAN.

Jules V. Guichell, of St. Louis, writes: "I have been afflicted for years with an affection of the Liver, which destroyed my health. I tried every thing, and every thing failed to relieve me; and I have been a broken-down man for some years from no other cause than derangement of the Liver. My beloved pastor, the Rev. Mr. Espy, advised me to try your Sarsaparilla, because he said he knew you, and any thing you made must be good. I sent to Commerce and got it, and used it till it cured me. I took it, as you advise, in small doses of a teaspoonful over a month, and used almost three bottles. New and healthy skin soon began to form under the scab, which after a while fell off. My skin is now clear, and I know by my feelings that the disease has gone from my system. You can well believe that I feel what I am saying when I tell you that I hold you to be one of the apostles of the age, and remain ever gratefully, Yours,

Scirrhus, Cancer Tumors, Enlargement, Ulceration, Caries and Exfoliation of the Bones.

A great variety of cases have been reported to us where cures of these formidable complaints have resulted from the use of this remedy, but our space here will not admit them. Some of these may be found in our American Almanac, which the agents below named are pleased to furnish gratis to all who call for them.

Dyspepsia, Heart Disease, Fits, Epilepsy, Melancholy, Neuralgia

Many remarkable cures of these affections have been made by the alterative power of this medicine. It stimulates the vital functions into vigorous action, and thus overcomes disorders which would be supposed beyond its reach. Such a remedy has long been required by the people, and we are confident that this will do for them all that medicine can do.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the Relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced Stages of the Disease.

This is a remedy so universally known to surpass any other for the cure of throat and lung complaints, that it is useless here to publish the evidence of its virtues. Its unrivalled excellence for coughs and colds, and its truly wonderful cures of pulmonary disease, have made it known throughout the civilized nations of the earth. Few are the communities, or even families, among them who have not some personal experience of its effects—some living trophy in their midst of its victory over the subtle and dangerous disorders of the throat and lungs. As all know the dreadful fatality of these diseases, and as they know, too, the effects of this remedy, we need not do more than to assure them that it has now all the virtues that it did have when making the cures which have won so strongly upon the confidence of mankind.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold in Peterboro by Ormond & Gilmour, A. W. Kempt, and Wm. Coulter. In Keene by A. Campbell, Campbell McNeil & Co., C. Britton, Lindsay, and all Medicine Dealers.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY IN CANADA.

MESSRS. Y. & O.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for [illegible] and did; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. Several to the village as die about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq., Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once, which I felt through my whole system: at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was afflicted with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

CAUTION.

THE public are hereby cautioned to beware of purchasing Colored and Russian Mink for Canada Mink. The Canada is superior to any in the world, and is therefore the most valuable. This has induced wholesale dealers to imitate our Canada Mink, not only by tattooing Russian, but also by coloring United States Mink. The Canada costs more than double that of any other country, which enables dealers to make a large profit on the spurious article. Those buying Furs in Montreal or other places should beware least they get the inferior article for which they will no doubt have to pay full prices. Take care, therefore, for I have been shown articles purchased as genuine in Montreal, which I can certify were colored and of inferior quality.

Those who buy any article of my own manufacture, I will warrant to be genuine, of best quality, and best workmanship, and at lower prices than any wholesale dealer will supply the same article.

A call is respectfully solicited.

Poetry.

RICH AND POOR.

I saw a poor man enter where
The worshippers of God were met,
His garments cheap and worn threadbare,
Yet all was tidy neat and clean—
I saw him take a lonely seat,
And worship at the Saviour's feet.

I saw, hard by, a family
Dress'd out in satin, silk and gold;
Their look was haughty, proud and high,
Their garb was very stern and bold—
They scarcely deigned to look that way
So poor was he, so rich were they

I look again by faith ahead,
And see the great white throne on high
I saw the living and the dead,
All hastening to their destiny;
The rich and poor were in that host,
And some were saved and some were lost.

I saw the man who years ago
Was dressed in tinsel, silk and gold;
But oh, how changed! how full of woe!
What an wish did his looks unfold!
His lofty airs were fled and gone,
He stood a wretch, unsaved, undone.

I saw the poor man clad in white,
Stand with the glorious seraphim;
Angels that glow in realms of light,
Were not ashamed to be with him—
Oh, who would not prefer to be
A sinner saved, though poor as he?

Selections.

VICTOR EMMANUEL AND PIUS IX

(From the Aberdeen Free Press.)

The House of Savoy has lately been raised to the throne of what may practically be regarded as united Italy. There were other ruling families in the peninsula, but that of Savoy was preferred for this high dignity, and deservedly so—for who ventured in 1848 to draw the sword for Italian unity and independence but Charles Albert of Savoy? His attempt failed indeed, but the Italians learned a lesson which they did not forget. The idea of unity and independence had been revived within the Peninsula; it had to be cherished in secret for a time, but it was not allowed to die; and Italy, with one small exception, together with the Islands of Sardinia and Sicily, now form the dominions of King Victor Emmanuel of the House of Savoy. But now, when this goodly result has been reached, it would almost seem as if this prince had resolved, through foolhardy obstinacy, or silly superstition, to let this magnificent kingdom slip through his fingers. The Italian Government has in good truth difficulties enough to face, and the king is represented by some as being the greatest difficulty of all. Menabrea has had no sinecure since he accepted the post of Chief of the Cabinet, and the following sentences will go some length, at least in explaining the adverse vote of the Chamber of Deputies, and the difficulty he has experienced in forming a new government. In the course of his speech on the 18th of December, he stated that Rome could be gained only by moral, not violent means—that the Italians must behave decently, and submit to the laws of their country—that they would thus inspire confidence in foreign governments, and procure the withdrawal of every foreign soldier from Italy. Having thus, in words at least, brought the temporal power of the Pope face to face and alone with this moral Kingdom of Italy, he asked this very pertinent question (we translate from the leading Florence journal)—"Shall we go to attack it (the temporal power?) Certainly not! It will come to us of its own accord." After further explaining his opinion, and the advantages which, as he believed, would certainly result from following the course he proposed, the following scene took place:—

Should any one regard the words I lately uttered as not orthodox, it will be sufficient for me to remind you of the celebrated letter of St. Catherine of Siena—(bursts of laughter and interruptions from the Opposition).

The President—or Speaker, as we should say—(violently ringing his bell)—Gentlemen will judge when they have heard the letter; meantime, please to keep silence. Even a sainted lady may have spoken some words in politics.

Menabrea—I am exceedingly surprised that the mention of a sainted lady should have excited the laughter of the House. Gentlemen will know better than I do, that this lady is one of the most illustrious of Italy, and that her letters are a glory to Italian literature. • • • • Well, St. Catherine of Siena, in her famous letter to Pope Gregory XI, after having argued with great acuteness on the uselessness of the Temporal Power, finishes thus:—"Better, therefore, to let go the hold of things temporal than of things spiritual." This I say for the purpose of satisfying consciences.

We have no controversy with the Italian Premier in reference to his veneration for the saints of his calendar. But it does seem silly to provoke the laughter of the sceptics of the Opposition, by referring to a woman who lived five centuries ago, and who, for her peculiar mode of life, was canonized soon after her death. It may be quite true that she wrote in a bold style to Pope Gregory XI., who was induced to put an end to the Babylonian captivity, as it has been called, of the Papacy, by quitting Avignon, and taking up his residence in Rome. It may be quite true that she gave him sound advice on the question of the Temporal Power. But surely, to rest the case in any measure on a single sentence of such a woman of a past age, showed but little political wisdom on the part of Menabrea, considering the present state of Italian feeling. The sentence quoted sounds favourable to the desires of Italian patriots; but they do not need to go five centuries back to find a stronger support than that of a weak woman. The woman is a saint, but so is Gregory I., who wrote to a somewhat enlightened and advanced bishop of France, that he lost his good opinion of him when he heard that he had taught some of his friends Latin grammar, and that he had regarded it as something like blasphemy for him, who was a bishop, to read even the best works of Pagan authors. And the best educated Italians, whatever side of political opinion they may profess to adhere to, will hardly accept it as a compliment from General Menabrea that he should quote a chance impression of a woman of five hundred years ago, as sufficient to satisfy and to bind their consciences in reference to the great question they have to face and settle—the question on which the future of Italy depends.

It may be quite true—indeed, we believe it is true—that the Temporal Power cannot, for the present at least be overthrown by violent means. It is true, to take the example cited by Menabrea, that Pope Pius VII. maintained and retained the Temporal Power in spite of Napoleon I., when he was at the height of his power. It is true that the latter planted his cannon against the Palace of the Quirinal—that he carried Pius a prisoner to Savona, and subjected him there to a most unbecoming and strict surveillance—that he transferred him from Savona to his own palace of Fontainbleau, and used the strength of his eloquence, the sharpness of his own mind, the plausible subtlety of his logic—yea, and the undignified outbreaks of his vile temper—to induce the aged Pontiff to renounce the Temporal Power. But, though French troops occupied his temporal domain, and French governors exercised rule in his stead, and French harpies preyed on the property of his subjects—though, in short, the whole substance of the temporal power had been torn from him by rude violence, the aged priest clung to the name and the malleable right of temporal power;—and he returned to Rome in triumph, while Napoleon was shut up a prisoner, first in Elba and afterwards in St. Helena.

But if the obstinacy of a Pope conducted him to victory, the obstinacy of the house of Savoy has some times proved fatal. Beside the case of Pius VII., referred to above, we could place the case of Charles Emmanuel of Savoy. He was a better man than Victor Emmanuel, King of Italy. His reign fell in evil days. The armies of Republican France had marched victoriously through Northern Italy, overturning and setting up after their own pleasure. The nobility of Piedmont discovered the weak point of the young French general who was carrying everything before him, and, by well-timed words of flattery, managed to procure for their king and country more favourable terms than fell to the lot of most of the countries conquered by France in those days. But Charles Emmanuel was too quiet for the times. He was a religious man—devotedly attached to the Pope; and though an offensive and defensive league with Republican France was the only means whereby he could hope to retain his throne and palace in Turin—we do not say that even that would have been sufficient to maintain him in his kingly seat—we scarcely believe it would, considering the character and deeds of the men who then directed affairs in Paris—Charles could never bring himself to conclude such an alliance. And the Pope was the great difficulty. He might have been induced to draw his sword against all of his old friends—even against Austria—but to put himself in such a position as might one day compel him either to break faith, or to take his stand with the open enemies of the Pope, was too much for him. And the result was that, in 1798, he was compelled by the soldiers of France to quit his government and his country together.

Few would blame Charles Emmanuel for having refused to join France on France's terms. But it may appear to some that the house of Savoy has a weak point toward Rome. And if Charles Emmanuel suffered heavily because he allowed the maxims of his own blind religious belief to regulate his policy with those who believed only in money, and sensual enjoyment, it is possible that Victor Emmanuel may suffer as severely, if he blindly follows the example of his ancestor, who closed the past, and began the present century, as King of Sardinia. It has been frequently asserted that Victor Emmanuel is superstitiously attached to Rome, and things wear such an appearance at present. When the chief in whom the King reposes his confidence at this critical moment can quote in the Italian Chamber of Deputies—for the purpose of calming consciences, and of gaining to his support, men who care as little for the saints of the Roman Calendar, as the demons of the French Revolution cared for the pious men and women whom they brought down to a grave of misery—a sentence of a Roman Catholic lady who lived so long ago, Italian patriots who live in the Peninsula, and the friends of Italian unity and independence everywhere, will think that the sacred business in which they feel so deep an interest, has not been committed to the fittest hands, or to the safest keeping. We are not speaking of the conduct of the Government in reference to the late Garibaldian movement—Garibaldi is now an obstacle rather than a help to Italian unity independence But is Victor Emmanuel bound, or not, by the traditions of the past, and is superstitious veneration, for, and attachment to the Papal See?—And is he losing or not?—is he throwing away, or not, the one chance that has offered for so many centuries, of making Italy one and independent? The friends and supporters of the princes who lately held away in Italy in so large numbers, have not yet made up their minds to bear the loss which has fallen on them without hope of remedy or recovery. The red-hot Republicans are neither few nor unenfluential. It requires great caution and prudence to guide the vessel of the newly formed kingdom along the course of safety: Is Victor Emmanuel guiding it along that course?—If anything like a revolution should take place—if Victor Emmanuel should be compelled to quit Florence—alas! for the Italian kingdom! And for how long!

Young people, when once dyed in pleasure and vanity, will scarcely take any other color.

TALMUDIC PROVERBS.

Even when the gates of prayer are shut in heaven, those of tears are open.—When the righteous dies, it is the earth that loses. The last jewel will always be a jewel, but the possessor who has lost it—well may he weep. Life is a passing shadow, says the Scripture. Is it the shadow of a tower, or a tree? A shadow that prevails for a while? No; it is the shadow of a bird in its flight:—away flies the bird and there is neither bird or shadow.—Repent one day before death. The reward of good works is like dates: sweet and ripening late.—Love yourself, honor her more than yourself. Whosoever lives unmarried, lives without joy, without comfort, without blessing. If thy wife is small, bend down to her and whisper into her ear. He who forsakes the love of his youth, God's altar weeps for him. He who marries for money, his children shall be a curse to him. The house that does not open to the poor opens to the physicians. Let the honor of thy neighbour be to thee like thine own. Rather be thrown into a fiery furnace than bring any one to public shame.—Iron breaks the stone, fire melts iron, water extinguishes fire, the clouds drink up the water, a storm drives away the clouds, man withstands the storm, fear unmans even wine dispels fear, sleep drives away wine, and death sweeps all away—even sleep. But Solomon the Wise says: Charity saves from death. Four shall not enter Paradise; the scoffer, the liar, the hypocrite, and the slanderer. To slander is to murder. When the thief has an opportunity for stealing, he considers himself an honest man. If thy friends agree in calling thee an ass, go and get a halter around thee. Thy friend has a friend, and thy friend's friend has a friend; be discreet. The dog sticks to you on account of the crumbs in your pocket. The camel wanted to have horns, and they took away his ears. The soldiers fight, and the kings are the heroes. The thief invokes God while he breaks into the house. After the thief runs the thief; after the beggar, poverty. When the ox is down, many are the butchers. Descend a step in choosing a wife, mount a step in choosing a friend. If there is anything bad about you, say it yourself. Were it not for the existence of passions, no one would build a house, marry a wife beget children, or do any work. The world could not well get on without perfumers and without tanners; but woe unto the tanner, well to the perfumer! No man is to be made responsible for words which he utters in his grief. One eats, another says grace. He who is ashamed will not easily commit sin. There is a great difference between him who is ashamed before his own self, and him who is only ashamed before others. It is a good sign in man to be capable of being ashamed. One contrition in man's heart is better than many flagellations.—Quarterly Review.

LEAP YEAR REGULATIONS.

We have already defined the extraordinary privileges accorded to the fair sex during the period of leap year, in a matrimonial relation, and it may be right to intimate what the subordinate sex have a right to expect and require, before yielding to the importunities of their fair admirers. An eligible youth of good family, who has arrived at the proper age, is determined to "come out," and enumerate the following list of excellencies which he hopes to discover in the one who succeeds in captivating his affections:—She must possess beauty, or its equivalent in currency; a sweet and forgiving disposition, and when one cheek is kissed turn the other, (that is, if the right man is kissing.) She may eat chew gum, or wear long dresses on the street; nor frequent sewing circles; nor go about begging for charitable purposes; nor read the paper first in the morning; nor trade off her husband's clothes to wandering Italians for flower vases; nor borrow money from his pocket while he sleeps; she must believe in sudden attacks of chills and make allowances for the effects on the nervous system; when her "old bear," comes home from "a few friends" rather affectionate she must not take advantage of his state, and wheedle him into trips to watering places; and above all, on such occasions she may not put specac into the coffee she prescribes for his "poor head;" she must not sit up for him when he happens to be detained to a late hour on his committee; but when he does return tired and chilly, she will be expected to roll over to the other side, and give him her warm place; all proposals must be accompanied with satisfactory evidence of the proposer to support a husband in the style in which he has been accustomed.

A TRUSTING CUSTOMER.—A week or two since, a decently dressed elderly man called at the shop of our townsman, Mr. Muirhead, jeweller and watchmaker, Buchanan street, and quietly asked if his watch was ready, or in other words, if it had been repaired. As Mr. Muirhead had no remembrance at the moment of having done business with the man, he asked in turn when he had left the article. "O," said the other, "I didna' leave it in the shop, for ye were over bye in Nelson street when ye got it." Says Mr. Muirhead, "That must have been a long time ago, then, for we left Nelson street in 1838—that is seventeen years since." "But I left wi' ye for a' that," said the other. He was then asked for the name and number of the watch, which he described to a nicety, and on opening the repository, it was found safe and sound. Exactly twenty-one years have passed since Duncan handed it in for repair, yet he called for it at the end of that period as coolly as if he had only left it the preceeding week. Duncan's account is: "Ye see I'm a sawyer to my trade, and I gaed ower to America to see how things were looking, for I kent the watch would be safe till I cam' back, but I staid a wee thocht langer than I intended."—Glasgow Chronicle.

GARIBALDI V. PRIESTHOOD.

General Garibaldi has recently transmitted the subjoined letter to a friend in France:—

Caprera, Dec. 31, 1867.

"MY VERY DEAR M. DE ——,

"Thanks for the works which our mutual friend Pellerino has been good enough to transmit to me. I shall read them with great interest, like all which comes from you.

"Why attempt a solution by force which would have come of itself? you ask of me. Well, my worthy friend, I am of a contrary opinion. To wait till the Papacy operates its own destruction is to commit an error, and France pays to-day for the credulity of which she was guilty in '89.—America and England place themselves upon their religious liberties: the first did certainly escape national assassination at the hands of the Papist rioters of New York and other States; but the second has a gloomy task before it in clearing away the clouds of Pessimism.

"Shall we be simple enough to believe that the priests would put an end to themselves to oblige humanity? Thistles and all harmful weeds propagate themselves with more fecundity and less trouble than any useful plants. I know you say, 'Liberty of conscience, liberty for all opinions,' and I repeat the cry; only it must be in the mouth of honest men! Does anybody believe in liberty for vipers, for crocodiles, for thieves and assassins? and what is the priest but the assassin of the free soul—far more mischievous than the assassin of the the body? France, who for good and evil must influence so vastly the destinies of the world—do you think France was morally less advanced or more seventy-five years back, when she proclaimed to humanity—divided by the accordotal tricks—the sublime principle of fraternity, with rational religion, and the One Supreme Being for its basis? France was then in the apogee of her influence; but, thanks to the pestilential germ of priestcraft which she spared, she stands now robbed of a century's growth in the splendid career of progress and freedom to which her high destinies call her.—Priestcraft and Bonapartism, which openly, now-a-day, take hands to keep each other up, give me out as the enemy of France.—That is as much as saying I am an enemy to fruit because I hate slugs. Yes! I avow I do hate evil, hate corruption, of which these pests are the emblem. But, France! Ah, my thousand friends in France, they will not let me stoop so low as to justify myself against that calumny.—I will say something more. It would be very wrong to think that the absence of French contributions to the Italian enterprise was a proof of French ill-will. No, my countrymen have too much intelligence not to distinguish between the despot who insults us and the noble nation which he gags. Certainly, when the Italians reflect that the duties on your export good pay the Pope's soldiers, I think they do well not to go much by 'lists of contributors.'

"I accept your pleasant augury of seeing me shortly in France. Truly, I should return with a filial love to my ancient land of exile, where I met a hospitality so cordial and generous. But you must be well persuaded that this will only happen when you have turned those 'black points' white which now deface your fair land.

"I grow older faster than my age, and I confess the condition of my country hastens life downwards. But I never despair of her future; above all, with friends as devoted and noble as you.

"I embrace you with all affection, and am for life, yours devotedly, SENSE.—The late Earl Stanhope, in one of his admirable addresses gave the following curious calculation:—Every professed, inveterate, and incurable snuff-taker at a moderate computation, takes one pinch in ten minutes. Every pinch, with the agreeable ceremony of blowing and wiping the nose, and other incidental circumstances consumes a minute and a half. One minute and a half out of every ten, allowing sixteen hours to a snuff-taking day, amounts to two hours and twenty-four minutes out of every natural day, or one day out of ten. One day out of every ten, amounts to thirty-six days and a half in a year. Hence if we suppose the practice to be persisted in forty-years, two entire years of a snuff taker's life will be dedicated to tickling his nose, and two more to blowing it! If the expense of snuff, snuff-boxes, and handkerchiefs be taken into consideration, it will be found that this luxury encroaches as much, on the income of the snuff taker as it does on his time; and that by the proper application of the time and money thus lost to the public, a fund might be constituted for the discharge of the national debt."

"G. GARIBALDI."

He that would be well spoken of, must not speak ill of others.

True sensibility leads us to overcome our feelings for the good of others.

The things you can safely put off until to-morrow, are idleness and vice.

Cruel people are the greatest lovers of mercy, avaricious people of generosity, and proud people of humility—in others.

Frequent disappointments teach us to mistrust our own inclinations, and shriek even the vows our hearts may prompt.

Keep doing—always doing. Wishing, dreaming, intending, murmuring, talking, sighing and repining, are idle and profitless employments.

In the assurance of strength there is strength; and they are the weakest, however strong, who have no faith in themselves or their powers.

Looking to others for our standard happiness is a sure way to be miserable. Our business is with our own hearts and our own motives.

Almost every heart possesses some one deep mastery, some one powerful feeling, which has its harmonious connection with a partical scene,

The Church in Fine Linen, and the Land in Sackcloth.

It may be too daring in us to lift the veil which conceals the unrivelled beauties of Government which Dr. Manning eulogizes as "the most irreproachable government on earth," and which has been set up by Providence in the centre of Europe as a model government to be followed by all the nations of the world. Nevertheless, we shall lift the veil and let men see what is underneath it. Let us, in imagination, transport ourselves to Rome. Let us ascend the tower of the Capitol and look around thence. Is there another such wreck on the face of the earth as is here under our eyes? We venture to affirm there is not. Taking into account the conditions, in some degree, of this territory,—the concentration of power, the accumulation of capital, the refinement of manners, in short, the abundance of all that is opposed to the brutish existence entailed and developed which were here to be beheld; and then contrast it with what it is now—a waste, howling wilderness, where ruins, ruins, ruins, and the very earth itself, is crumbled in ruin, we are warranted in maintaining that there is not to be found, in all the globe, a reversal so complete, a spectacle so hideous, and a catastrophe so appalling as that on which we are now gazing. Here still are the gloomy arches, of "the purple Apennine." Here still is the noble river, rolling through a desert, where of old time its "yellow waves" watered an Eden. Here still is the vast circuit of plain where towns by hundreds had their seat, and where now nothing remains but ruins, the lair of the fox and the haunt of the brigand. And here still is the cloudless sky. These the Papacy has spared simply because it could not destroy them. But what, besides, has it spared? How it spared liberty?—let the terror-stricken city at our feet, with its dungeons and groaning captives, make answer! Has it spared intelligence?—why, here not one hundred can read. Has it spared virtue or happiness?—all it has remorselessly trampled in! And here are the red cardinals flitting about in this scene of woe.

Surely there is no need that one should arise from the dead to bear witness against the Pope's Government. The stones of the field cry out against it. A wilderness where once was a garden, ruins where once were busy and prosperous cities, barbarism where there was civilization, testify with unmistakable distinctness that the influence of the Papacy is only evil, and that continually. These show that from generation to generation the Papal Government has, systematically, perseveringly, and unchangeably, warred against man and all man's interests.—Exchange.

The Heel of Rome on the Quebec Legislature.

Our readers must have seen, in the telegraphic reports of Parliamentary proceeding, that there was a bill before the Lower House to enable the Sisters of Charity of the General Hospital, of Montreal, to sell their property and buy other property; but what these Sisters of Charity were, or what property they had to sell, was a puzzle to many. We are frequently asked for copies of all bills before the House, but in vain; and, if what we hear concerning this one be true, the reason for such reticence toward the press will be plain enough. These Sisters of Charity may be our Grey Nuns, and the property they have to sell, that exceedingly valuable one comprising nearly the whole of Pointe à Callières, bordering on the Port of Montreal, where it joins the Lachine canal: or they may be the nuns of the Hotel Dieu holding another equally valuable city property, and the bill, it is said leaves them free to invest the proceeds without any of the usual restraints placed on common sites. Thus they may buy, with the price of this single property, three or four entire townships of wild lands; or they may secure properties all round the out-skirts of this city, and, as it grows in population, become as wealthy as Trinity Church, New York. Incorporated communities, which never die, are justly counted so exceedingly dangerous in the matter of amassing property, that it has been customary carefully to limit the amount they may require and hold; but this Bill, it is said, manifests no such care.

We further learn that some of our Township members, none of whom, it appears, had the courage to oppose it openly, demonstrated privately; and the French members themselves, when thus appealed to, acknowledged the dangerous and improper character of the Bill, but asked, "What can we do? we must pass it"—That is it. Every one sees that legislation is bad, but the power behind Parliament, and which legislates for it, lets that body know that they "must pass it." THE HEEL OF ROME IS ON THE QUEBEC LEGISLATURE.

This is one of the first fruits that we expected from the system of Confederation devised at Quebec; and we little doubt that just such acts are to be multiplied till Lower Canada is as extensively owned by ecclesiastical corporations of the Church of Rome as Italy or Spain or Mexico have been, and till a bloody revolution will be required here, just as in those countries, to emancipate the soul from the grasp of the church. And our poor, weak, easy-going Legislature allow, will put a protest, the foundations to be laid for this ecclesiastical ownership!

There is an English-speaking member for Montreal, and there are several for the Townships; but we hear no manly exposure of the danger we are incurring by these acts, nor protest against them from any quarter. All seem to be fascinated or paralyzed, whilst the anaconda is twining fold after fold of his body around them, and shrieking them over with courtesy and praise, in order to make them go down the more easily.

It is not, however, in behalf of the English population of Lower Canada solely, or even chiefly, that we oppose such legislation. The French Canadians, being the majority, have a still greater interest in the matter than English Canadians; and it is strange indeed that none of them have the courage to oppose legislation which most of all them must know to be exceedingly wrong in principle, as well as exceedingly dangerous and injurious in its ultimate effects on the country and people.—Witness.

HORRIBLE ACCIDENT.—While a young girl of fourteen years of age was gathering chips in Mr. Valin's wood-yard, St. Roch's, on Saturday afternoon, she thoughtlessly darted forward to pick up a block of wood from under the descending axe of one of the laborers. While in the act of grasping the piece of wood, she received the full blow of the axe on her shoulder, being literally nearly cut in two. She was immediately carried to her home and medical assistance procured, but although every means were resorted to towards alleviating her sufferings, the case was pronounced hopeless. The poor little sufferer was still alive at a late hour on Saturday. No blame whatever can be attached to the axeman, who is apparently beside himself with grief at the unhappy accident.—Quebec Chronicle.

DENOMINATIONAL GRANTS.

The disputed question is at length settled for a season. The grants are to be continued one year and a half longer, and then to cease. This is to be the last grant. The Government have acted thoughtfully in not cutting off the grants all at once. To some of the colleges this would have resulted in closed doors, but giving them a year so as to arrange matters, those denominations that desire to continue their colleges will have time to provide for the new state of independence, or, perhaps they will find some way of continuing the secular work they have been doing in connection with the university; we could not desire to see any of the colleges go down entirely, nor do we think that any of them will go down. The Presbyterians will put forth an effort to keep up Queens, and the friends of Victoria will not be behind if they so determine. We have no reason to fear for Catholic Colleges. The church is rich, wealthy in fact; she can give of her means to propogate her own religious tenets; if not, let them get an education along side of other citizens of our great Dominion in the peoples' schools or colleges. $32000 dollars added to the Grammar School fund would enable assistant teachers to be employed in almost all our principal Grammar Schools, and then the work of those colleges could in a great degree be done at home by merely attending and paying the University Examinations, at least for two years.

AT WASHINGTON

Our friends across the lines are getting very warm. The tight times that are being felt do not appear to quiet them.

They have had lively times lately at Washington. The President appointed Gen. Thomas to take Mr. Staunton's place.—Staunton refused to give up. Thomas threatened to use force to compel him. Mr. Staunton applied to Congress for a warrant to arrest Thomas, and the officers of the law were sent in search of the Secretary of the War Office. If Thomas should use force to drive Staunton from the office, what a state things would come to. A great people the Yankees are!!

On the 21st instant, the Senate received information of Mr. Stanton's dismissal, and passed a resolution that the President had not the power to do so. On the 22nd, Gen. Thomas was arrested, on affidavit of Secretary Staunton, for a violation of the tenure of Office Act, neither Staunton nor Thomas will obey, and the result is looked for with considerable anxiety.

A committee of 7 to 2, have agreed to impeach President Johnston on charges of high crimes and misdemeanors. Mr. Brooks, Democrat of New York, made a speech, in which he said: "We have been long in the work of revolution, long has the country been agitated in the throes of revolution, but we are now approaching the last and final stage of it. We are traversing over and over again the days of Cromwell and of Charles I. Charles II., and we are traversing over and over again all the scenes of the French revolution. If you proceed to depose the President by violence, if you throw him out of office other than by impeachment, I tell you in behalf of thousands, and millions of the people, that we will never submit, so help me God, never, never submit."

The despatches say that the streets are full of all sorts of rumors, some to the effect that armed men are on their way from Maryland to support the President, should a clash of arms occur. Parties must calm down or another revolution will be the result.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.—Several enquiries have reached us relative to the legal charges for stamping weights and measures. For the satisfaction of all we will give the law on the matter. The words of the Act are:—"Every Inspector may demand and receive ten cents, and no more, for every weight or measure he marks or stamps." It will be for parties interested to settle the matter of the right to charge for stamping a yard measure at ¼, ½, ¼ and 1 yard lengths.

THE WEATHER.—There has been an unprecedented heavy fall of snow during the last two or three days. The highways are completely blocked up, owing to the high winds that accompanied. That very remarkable man, the oldest inhabitant, scarcely remembers so severe a winter as this has been, and certainly there has not been such a fall of snow in many years. It is said that the snow is so deep in the back woods that considerable lumbering operations have been stopped, at least for a time. There was no mail here on Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday—trains were snowed up.

We have allowed Mr. Carroll space this week, to put himself right with the Editor of the Review. we regret that those quondam friends have become so violently opposed to each other. We request the combatants to become reconciled and end the matter, it is becoming very personal.

THE TOWNSEND FAMILY, now on their return tour through Canada, will visit Peterboro' next week, and give three entertainments in the Music Hall, on Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings. For particulars see advertisement.

Mr. John Doran, the defeated candidate for the Ontario Legislature in Dundas county, escaped the payment of his printing bill, by taking advantage of the law. Mr. Doran, however, is getting notoriety for it. The printers are passing him round.

At a meeting lately held in Toronto to settle a life income of the late Bishop Strachan, £400 a year fell to the Dioceses of Huron and Ontario each. We suppose that £100 remains to the Diocese of Toronto also.

REUNION.—Remember the Reunion of the Grammar School Literary Association on Friday evening, 6th March, in the Music Hall. The programme is a very good one, and should ensure a full house.

An Honest Rector and the Reward of his Honesty.

Exchanges say that there have been several fires of late in Kingston, caused by the greediness of the Rector, who seeks to possess himself of certain valuable property which was never intended to be his, and rather than allow him to get it the parties appear determined to burn it, and thus also cheat the Rector. Thus like begets its like. A petition has been presented to the Legislature, signed by 1400 inhabitants of Kingston, praying that body to interfere and pass an act to prevent the Rector from perpetrating the injustice he contemplates.

"By Letters Patent, dated in January, 1821, this plot, being at the time Crown Lands, distinct from the Rectorial Lands and Clergy Reserves, was granted by the Crown to the Venerable Archdeacon Stuart, George H. Markland and John Macaulay, upon certain trusts, namely, to ratify all leases or agreements for leases, that were then subsisting, and to lease the residue for a term not exceeding twenty-one years, with the usual convenant as to renewal. The grant contained a proviso that when a Parsonage or Rectory was established and an incumbent appointed to it, the trustees or their successors should convey the land to such incumbent and his successors 'for ever as a sole corporation and for the same Uses and upon the same Trusts as were therein before mentioned and expressed.' That the original trustees made leases to various parties who covenanted to erect substantial buildings of brick and stone, the lessors agreeing to pay or these buildings their full value by arbitration, or to grant fresh leases on terms to be agreed upon. Under these leases some of the most valuable buildings and shops in Kingston were erected. That in the year 1836 a parsonage was constituted and the Venerable Archdeacon Stuart, one of the trustees, inducted thereto, he receiving a deed in the terms of the patent. That the Archdeacon renewed leases previously granted and leased the remaining portion of the lot on similar terms, the lessees agreeing to erect valuable buildings thereon. That such buildings have been erected; but that a new Incumbent having taken Archdeacon Stuart's place he refuses "to recognize or be bound by the said covenants for payment for improvements or for renewals, and declines to treat with the present tenants for fresh leases except on the basis that all improvements are to be considered the property of the Rector and reckoned as such in computing the amount of rent to be paid." Thus robbing the tenants of the property built by them."

That Question of Fact.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—I am not satisfied that Queen's College was in existence, or that it began its operation, before King's College for the following reasons:—

First, King's College was established by Royal Charter in the 7th Year of the reign of His Majesty King George IV., say 1827; that it had a Council, President and Bursar; that Dr. Strachan received for 12 years prior to 1840, £250 stg. annually as President; that upwards of £31,000 during the said period were expended on U. C. College; that upwards of £82,000 were received on account of sales of land; and yet the Review says, "King's College was not in existence nor in operation."

Second, I find that a Provincial Act was passed in the third year of the reign of Her Majesty incorporating certain persons therein named, under the name of the "University of King-ton," which Act was afterwards disallowed by Her Majesty. That upon the petition of the aforesaid persons, she was pleased to incorporate them by Royal Letters Patent, dated 16th October in the 5th year of Her reign, under the name and style of "Queen's College at Kingston." That in 1846 another Act was passed transferring to Queen's College the estates, rights and liabilities which were of the University of Kingston. As late as 1856, I find from a return of the Principal of Queen's College, that a building and ground suitable for college purposes had been purchased by the trustees for £6,000.

Will our friend having all the information tell us when Queen's College began operations? There is some confusion about the exact year that the charter of King's College was dated Dr. Strachan gives his ecclesiastical chart for 1827. The statute of 13 Vic. Cap. 32, in the margin it reads, "Royal Charter of 15 March, 1828, cited;" and then the first reliable notice of the existence of the charter was given by the Governor at the opening of Parliament, 15 March, 1839. But I was in error in saying 1828, it was dated 1837. I cheerfully yield the point that there are others that know something about the history of Canada besides myself; and if my friend will "own up" that King's College was in existence and legal operations before Queen's College I will put him down as one.

I am, Sir,

Thomas Wesley Poole and his Funny Vindication.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR:—Having been absent from home for some time, I had not till recently an opportunity of noticing an article in the Review of the 24th ult., evidently written by my friend, Thos. Wesley, and purporting to be a "Vindication" of his conduct in accepting the office of Auditor, although in the employment of the Council during the year previous. Friend Wesley (pardon the abbreviation, I would style him Editor were it not that his employer persists in denying him the privilege of appropriating the title) assumes an air of injured innocence in his so-called Vindication, and holds himself up to the gaze of his readers as a martyr to public duty. This is a sort of strategy frequently resorted to by persons of his calibre and principles or want of principle, when they find themselves hard-pressed straight, try its use, and by a falsification of facts and a dexterous use of words they frequently succeed in diverting attention from the real point at issue. It is probable that Thos. Wesley has succeeded in quieting his conscience with regard to the impropriety, considering the circumstances in which he was placed, of taking the Auditors oath of office for the year 1866. The task, doubtless, was not a difficult one, as his conscience—if he ever possessed such an article—appears to be of a flexible and accommodating character. But he must be asserted, indeed, or he must presume immensely on the ignorance and credulity of his readers if he imagines that he has convinced them that he has not acted an exceedingly culpable part in this matter. True, he exclaims, vociferously, that his "honor" and "truthfulness" have not been compromised by his conduct. The honor and truthfulness of some men cannot be effected by their actions however apprehensible, for the simple but obvious reason that they possess neither. There is little danger that men noted for these admirable qualities will run the risk of sullying their reputations by conduct such as friend Wesley feels called upon to answer for. He has become remarkable for the peculiar and original notions he is known to entertain in regard to what is, or is not honorable and truthful. In fact he is quite ahead of the times on these questions in this country. He should emigrate at once to Abyssinia. A brilliant future would no doubt open to him in that country. How those gentlemen, the Shoboes, would admire his practical interpretation of the terms "honorable" and "truthful." But, as it is quite impossible to induce him to make honor and truth as interpreted in this country the rule of his conduct, I cannot hope to convince him of the grave impropriety of which he has been guilty. I, wish, however, to submit the particulars to the public again, and in doing so will merely state facts without any desire to color or distort. Indeed were I so inclined it would be superfluous, as the naked truth is quite bad enough.

In order that the whole case may be clearly comprehended and that the flimsy and contemptable subterfuge through which Thomas Wesley has attempted to creep out of the difficulty may be detected, I will again give the Auditor's declaration in full:—

"I, A. B, having been appointed to the office of Auditor for the Municipal Corporation of Peterboro, do hereby promise and declare that I will faithfully perform the duties of such office, according to the best of my judgement and ability and I do solemly declare, that I had not directly or indirectly any share or interest whatever in any contract or employment with by or on behalf of such Municipal Corporation, during the year proceeding my appointment, and that I have not any contract or employment (except that of Auditor) for the ensuing year."

The above is the form as contained in the consolidated statutes of U. C., page 362, s. c. 173, and again re-enacted in the Municipal Act of 1866, page 195, sec. 181, and the same form will be found correctly copied in the late edition of Harrison's Municipal Manual. It is hardly necessary to say, therefore, that no other form is legal, and that it is the form of declaration made and subscribed by persons appointed to the office of Auditor previous to 1866; and notwithstanding his equivocation and affected indignation, is the form of declaration made and subscribed by Thos. Wesley Poole, for the years 1866 and 1867. Barring this individual, it can hardly be doubted that there is not in the whole Dominion a sane man who, after a careful perusal of the above declaration, could arrive at any other conclusion than that it is clearly and especially the object to exclude from the office of Auditor in any year all persons who had an interest, however trifling or remote, in any contract or employment on behalf of the corporation, during the previous year. But what will be thought of the man who, although directly employed by the corporation in 1867, accepts the office of Auditor in 1866, swallowing the oath of course, and has the brazen impudence to argue in the face of a discriminating public that it was all right? The declaration is as explicit as any of the ten commandments. The e is no ambiguity about it; the framers expressed their meaning in language which any man can understand. It was evidently their opinion that no man should have the privilege of auditing accounts in which he was interested, hence the clearness and strength of the language used in framing the declaration. Will Thos. Wesley persist in stating that he was justified in taking that oath of office? Do not, my dear fellow; be advised for your good, if you persist you will only succeed in bringing yourself to grief. Rely on it, you cannot gull the public in this matter. Own up, and let yourself down as easy as you can, and there may be an end of the affair, if not the end is not yet. But I have lost sight of the petty subterfuge, the very small gimlet hole through which Thomas Wesley hoped to creep out of the difficulty. It is this:—In the old edition of Harrison's Municipal Manual a misprint occurs in the declaration of office for Auditors. The word have instead of had appears in the seventh line of the form and after the words "I do solemnly declare that I." It is well known that very many errors occur in the work referred to, and clearly this is one of them, otherwise the most important part of the declaration, in fact the very essence of it, would be rendered mere nonsense. A parallel would be for a farmer to say, "I have no oats to feed my horses during last week," or a for a printer to say, "I have no ink to print with last week," or in the case of a merchant, "I have no sugar to sell my customers last week." Thomas Wesley says, referring to the declarations made by himself and Co. Auditor for 1866 "Both are precisely similar and were copied from the municipal act then in force, as laid down in Harrison's Municipal Manual, and read as follows."

Here he gives the declaration, but introduces the word have instead of had into the seventh line. Now, I charge friend Wesley with deliberate falsehood, and with an impudent and brazen attempt to deceive the public in alleging that the form of declaration given by him is with the above declaration is to be found in the municipal act as he alleges, as in force in 1866, or in fact in the act as in force at any time. I charge him further with wilful and deliberate falsehood in stating that the declaration as originally prepared by J. J. Hall, Esq., contained the word have instead of had as alleged by him. It is true that a close scrutiny reveals the fact that the declaration as originally written by Mr. Hall, bear slight evidence of having been tampered with, and that it has been attempted to change the word had into have, but it is also true that they still read as they should, with the word had not have, as legibly as the clear, bold hand of John J. Hall could make them. Will Thomas Wesley stand up for his veracity, his truthfulness and his honor in this matter? As often as he has attacked me, I have convicted him of falsehood, in fact, driven him to the wall, and his practices has been to skulk away whining like a whipped cur. Will he affect the indignation game this time and allow the case to go by default. He is deeply seriously involved, will he, can he, defend himself? We shall see.

Admitting for the sake of argument that the declaration as written by Mr Hall, contained the word have instead of had, as alleged by friend Wesley, would alter his position a little perhaps but it is like jumping out of the fire into the frying pan. It must be borne in mind that the only authority for the attempted innovation on the Auditor's oath, as prescribed by statute, is a misprint in copying the Municipal Act into the old edition of Harrison's Manual Now, an intelligent reader need hardly be informed that the Municipal Manual, old or new would not be admitted in any court as evidence of what is law or what is not, and that the only test on this point would be the statutes and the statutes alone. It follows, therefore, that if the declaration of office which Thos. Wesley alleges he made and subscribed is not in accordance with the statutes, that he was not legally qualified to audit the accounts of the County in 1866, that his pretended audit was an imposition, and that the money received by him was received and—if the pretence that he had made a legal audit, which under the circumstances, would not be the case But this is not the position in which friend Wesley finds himself. I hold that the declaration made by him is strictly in accordance with the statutes; but that as he held the office of superintendent of schools for the year previous he committed a grave error, and involved himself seriously in making it. Section 421 is imperative, and in reading it one cannot help pitying the unfortunate wight who comes under its supervision. The willful and corrupt making of any false statement in any declaration required or authorized by this act shall be a misdemeanor punishable as willful and corrupt perjury." Hard on friend Wesley, is it, not. He was superintendent of schools for 1865, but made a solemn declaration to the contrary in the month of January following. Friend Wesley says that:—

"In regard to the other duties performed by the writer, the accusation is equally groundless Mr. Carroll and the County Council are well aware that any services the writer may render them during a session, are not by appointment or contract, and that there is nothing in these relations to the Council to prevent the taking of the declaration required of an Auditor."

Yes, but after making the declaration for 1867, a person having a due regard for the Oath, would hesitate before entering into any employment, or placing himself in a position to receive money from the corporation for services rendered in any other capacity than that of Auditor. Yet Thomas Wesley acted as ministerial clerk throughout the year, and with his own hand entered himself on the pay list for $2 a day. But he argues that the services rendered were not by appointment or contract. It may, pray what right had he to claim and receive payment for those services? Who authorized him to do so? Do you persist in stating this is all right, does it not look like levying black mail on members of the County Council. John J. Hall, Esq., the other Auditor, although able and willing at all times to render the Council any services they might require, but yet received no such perquisite, and why should Thomas Wesley receive $50.00 or $60.00 to which evidently he is not legally entitled. Friend Wesley complains in doleful and lugubrious terms that I hate him, now this is strong, quite strong, and very unfair towards me. Had he received me of entertaining towards him a feeling of thorough contempt; I mingled with pity, he would be nearer the mark, and in regard to a large majority of those who know him as well; into him! nonsense, who could have such a creature as him. All men are not born with the same qualities of head and heart, some are high minded, noble, generous and truthful, from the cradle; while others are tre cherous and base, and wretchedly false as the Father of lies himself Now, however much one may despise and detest a character of the latter description, it would be wrong to hate him, it is his misfortune to be what he is but he can't help it.

I hope, therefore, that Thos Wesley will dismiss from his mind all the ridiculous notion that I "hate him." Indeed I hope that no ill feeling will arise between us on account of the attacks which he has from time to time made on me. I must candidly admit that he has often afforded me a good deal of amusement—read side-splitting merriment. His contortions, when caught, as he always is, like a rat in a trap, are very amusing; and I am sure that he duly appreciates my efforts to contribute to his comfort, and to develope the wonderful qualities of head and heart, and amazing regard for honor and truth of which he believes himself to be possessed. Now, friend Wesley, I hope you will have the courtesy to rec ognize the kindly feelings which I have all along shown, and for the future be a little more amiable and good natured.

I am, &c.,
JOHN CARROLL.

DENOMINATIONAL GRANTS.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—In all the controversy respecting grants to Colleges, the friends of Victoria and Queen's Colleges have advocated the continuance of three grants, on the score of their being open to the public and free from any tests or proselyting tendencies. That, in fact, when an analysis is made it appears that other denominations are more largely benefitted than those establishing the Colleges. That Victoria and Queen's Colleges are open to the public and free from any test whatever in the secular department, I fully believe; and I also believe that every student entering either College is in no danger whatever of his religious convictions being interfered with. It is not upon any assumption of the kind that the opposition is offered, but upon the broad general principle that Government has nothing to do with denominational institutions, so long as they do not infringe upon any right of the people. I have shown from quotations that Victoria College has been and is still held by the Methodist body as a denominational necessity. Queen's College at its establishment and now is no less a necessity for the body it belongs to. At its establishment the greater part of the Presbyterian body was in connection with the Church of Scotland. They submitted quietly and long to the taunts and insults of the dominant party in Canada, till these culminated in the memorable attack of Mr. Hagerman on Mr. Morris in the House of Assembly, when the latter was merely urging a question of right, that Presbyterians in Canada should enjoy an equal position with Episcopalians in respect of endowments. That attack roused the Covenanter fire, still existing in the breast of Scotia's sons; and one soul seemed to animate the people throughout the land, that Presbyterians should and would have their rights in a British colony. So large a body coming out with such zeal and power hastened the secularizing of the clergy reserves, although when latterly enjoying a share of the spoil wrenched from the monopolists, they began to feel and to say that the people should now leave well alone.

In the outburst of indignation against the outrageous conduct in the Archdeacon of York procuring the charter for the College, none were louder than the Presbyterians of Canada at that time. Long and loud were the clamours for its liberation; and when the legislature passed an Act, in 1837, to amend the charter of King's College, Mr. Morris, as the authorized agent for the Scotch Church, applied through Lord Glenelg, then Secretary of State for the colonies to the British government, praying that the royal assent should be withheld from the Act until a professorship of divinity should be appointed for the students of that church. This application was dated June 27, 1837. A letter dated 9th March, 1838, from the Commission of the Synod of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, to the Lieutenant Governor, on the subject of a professorship of divinity for the Church of Scotland, and a reply to that letter from the Governor's Secretary, were all laid before the council of King's College on the 22nd July, 1839. All efforts to amend the charter to satisfy the country were unavailing till the famous Act of 1849. The Methodists despairing of any amelioration in King's College, in 1839 established their Upper Canada Academy, afterwards Victoria College; and the Presbyterians finding all attempts to make the usurpers release their grip of the National College vain, in 1841 established theirs at Kingston Politicians and statesmen still kept hammering at the doors of King's College, and when John A Macdonald proposed by the bill of 1867, named after him, to liberalize King's College by dividing the endowment among the 4 large sects, it will not sound strange now a days that the friends of Queen's College, as well as many of the Methodists, voted for the division. Fortunately the Free Church movement, four years before the introduction of this bill, embraced a large majority of the Presbyterians, who with a goodly number of Methodists voted against the measure for division, and thereby saved the country from a disgrace and a calamity. The efforts of John A. McDonald and the Presbyterians in connection with the Church of Scotland, combined with the portion of the Methodists who fell in with the conference measure of subdivision, to destroy the existance of a noble national institution, attest how intensely keen they advocated denominational institutions. They seemed to care nothing for any institution of a national character, all their aim was the advancement of "our College." And now, forsooth, they come out and labor to show that their Colleges are entitled to public endowments on the ground of their being open to the public, that a large portion of the work they do is educating the youth of other denominations. Not only so, but since 1860 they have been lecturing, writing, laboring and lobbying to destroy the people's College—calling it a "monopoly," a "stone quarry" an institution that has lowered the standard of education so much, that going through a course there is a mere farce; in fact, nothing is too bad to say against the Toronto University and College. Such conduct is in striking contrast with that of these same bodies in the early history of the College. Their aim then was to free King's College from denominational influence and control, to make it what was intended by the Home Government, a Provincial Institution for the benefit of the people. The oft repeated assertion that the majority of the people are in favor of denominational colleges, is not correct. Never was there a better time to test that question than at the election of 1867. An overwhelming majority then voted nay, directly upon this very question. Nothing then prevented the students at Queen's or Victoria Colleges from being educated at the Toronto University but the love for a sectarian college of their own.

Peterborough, 21st Feb. 1868.

The following minutes of the Board of Directors of Upper Canada Bible Society were sent us with a request to publish them.

UPPER CANADA BIBLE SOCIETY.

Minute adopted by the Board of Directors, at a meeting held on the 14th January, 1868, and ordered to be printed and transmitted to the Branch Societies.

The attention of the Board of Directors has been specially called to the subject of the circulation of copies of the Scriptures with the metrical version of the Psalms in use in Scotland, and as they find some misunderstanding prevails in regard to their practice in reference to this, they beg to present the following statement, for the information and guidance of the Branch Societies:—

1. The Upper Canada Bible Society has, as its first article declares, "The same object in view as the British and Foreign Bible Society, that is, the circulation of the Bible, without note or comment." It differs from the Parent Society only in this respect, that its special field is Upper Canada; and it therefore becomes its chief duty to adapt its operations to the peculiar wants of this country. By its second article it engages to aim at a union of every Bible Society in this Province, and to concentrate the operations of all the friends of Bible circulation throughout the field of its labours in this good work.

2. In accordance with its first article, the Upper Canada Bible Society keeps in stock, and expends its funds in circulating, and in supplying at cost prices, no other copies of the Scriptures than those obtained from the British and Foreign Bible Society.

3. In the Rules recommended by the Upper Canada Bible Society for adoption by its Branches, Art VIII recommends that the whole of the subscriptions and donations shall be applied to the purchase of Bibles and Testaments from the Upper Canada Bible Society for free distribution or sale at a reduced price; or remitted for the general purposes of the Society, in co-operation with the parent institution. While, however, the Upper Canada Bible Society recommends certain rules for adoption by its Branches, it has always, within its limitation, left to them the same liberty with regard to their stock, and the apportionment of their funds, which they so generously enjoy in reference to the voluntary contribution of funds; and the wisdom of this course is confirmed by experience.

4. It has been the practice of the Branches heretofore to remit their funds to the Upper Canada Bible Society, for the following objects:

1st. In payment for Bibles ordered, for sale or free distribution within their own locality.

2nd. In free grant to the Upper Canada Bible Society for the maintenance of Agents and Colporteurs, and the distribution of the Scriptures by means of these and other agencies, either as free gifts or at reduced prices, throughout Upper Canada.

3rd. To the British and Foreign Bible Society both in free grant, and for special purposes, such as the Crimean Bible Fund, the New Bible House Fund, &c.; and,

4th. To the Montreal Bible Society, the American Bible Society, or such other kindred Societies as the Branches select in the free appropriation of their own auxiliary funds.

5. It has been found by the experience of the Society's Agents and Colporteurs, that in certain districts of Canada, chiefly settled from Scotland and the North of Ireland, an earnest desire is felt for copies of the Scripture with the Scottish metrical version of the Psalms; and it has been represented to the Board by its Colporteurs, that in some large and recently settled districts peculiarly in need of their labors, few copies can be sold, unless accompanied with the metrical psalm-ody. To meet this difficulty, the friends of Bible circulation in some of the districts referred to, have undertaken to raise a special fund, which they expected on Bibles of this class, and set apart all moneys derived from their sale in renewing the stock. The Board of Directors has also made arrangements with the Upper Canada Religious Tract and Book Society, by which that Society undertakes the supply of all orders from the Branches for such Bibles, and receives and accounts for all funds transmitted for their purchase. The Tract or Book Society has also undertaken to supply and circulate such Bibles, in the settlements where they are specially called for, through the Agency of Upper Canada Bible Society Colporteurs, at its own expense. And to animate the people throughout the land, that Presbyterians should and would have their rights in a British colony. So large a body coming out with such zeal and power hastened the secularizing of the clergy reserves, although when latterly enjoying a share of the spoil wrenched from the monopolists, they began to feel and to say that the people should now leave well alone.

In the outburst of indignation against the outrageous conduct in the Archdeacon of York procuring the charter for the College, none were louder than the Presbyterians of Canada at that time. Long and loud were the clamours for its liberation; and when the legislature passed an Act, in 1837, to amend the charter of King's College, Mr. Morris, as the authorized agent for the Scotch Church, applied through Lord Glenelg, then Secretary of State for the colonies to the British government, praying that the royal assent should be withheld from the Act until a professorship of divinity should be appointed for the students of that church. This application was dated June 27, 1837. A letter dated 9th March, 1838, from the Commission of the Synod of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, to the Lieutenant Governor, on the subject of a professorship of divinity for the Church of Scotland, and a reply to that letter from the Governor's Secretary, were all laid before the council of King's College on the 22nd July, 1839. All efforts to amend the charter to satisfy the country were unavailing till the famous Act of 1849. The Methodists despairing of any amelioration in King's College, in 1839 established their Upper Canada Academy, afterwards Victoria College; and the Presbyterians finding all attempts to make the usurpers release their grip of the National College vain, in 1841 established theirs at

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and safe. Administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

The Great English Remedy.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition, but a safe and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorised Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It clears out the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

VERY NATURAL.

When a person has proved an article and found it good, and answering the purpose for which it is intended he will not readily abandon it for one of doubtful reputation or concerning which he knows nothing. We are led to make these remarks owing to the course always pursued by those who have used that celebrated and truly valuable horse-medicine known as "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy"—all are so well pleased with it that they will not use any other; many have waited several weeks until the agent could obtain a new supply. There is nothing equal to it as condition Medicine, or for any complaint affecting the wind of horses.

STARTLING NEWS!

THE subscriber, who has for some time past been keeping cool, allowing the enormous amount of gas, with which the Dry Goods and Clothing atmosphere has been impregnated, to escape—in order to prevent explosion—now begs to inform his many customers, and the public generally, that owing to the increase in the GENTLEMEN'S CLOTHING DEPARTMENT, which occupies nearly all his premises—from top to bottom—and is still increasing, he has been compelled to CLOSE UP THE LADIES' DEPARTMENT in the meantime; and this being the case, he has thought it his duty—plainly, calmly and truthfully—to inform his patrons of the fact; as also to inform them, one and all, that

ON THE SECOND DAY OF MARCH NEXT
he will commence

SELLING OFF

the whole of his varied stock of

LADIES' GOODS,

Comprising Prints, Cobourgs, Delaines, Ginghams, Ribbons, Parasols, Muslins, with a great many other varieties in this department too numerous to mention.

The Goods will all be marked in plain figures, at such unprecedented low prices as can not fail to command sales in every case, when they are carefully and impartially examined; say at 75 cents in the Dollar on former prices, and without any humbug or puffing, on this the public may rest satisfied. As it is the determination of the subscriber to go very extensively into the Clothing Business in the Spring, the Ladies' Goods must be sold off to make room.

To all those who really wish BARGAINS, the subscriber would say—they will find if they call early that there is no puffing in the establishment, but stubborn facts.

In addition to the above which is specially intended for the LADIES, he would say to his numerous

GENTLEMEN CUSTOMERS

That, not only is his stock of READY MADE CLOTHING—large and varied, but his stock of Tweeds—English, Scotch and Canadian, is also extensive, and will be greatly increased during the Spring. He would also say, that having a first class Cutter on the premises (MR. JAMES MEMZIES) he is prepared to make suits to order to those who may wish them, at very low rates, and when the cloth is bought on the premises, there will be NO CHARGE FOR CUTTING.

Just received, 200 pieces CANADIAN TWEEDS, made to order expressly for the establishment.

Also, FELT HATS of all varieties, comprising, Planters, Opera, Peabody, and many other Styles.

To one and all, both great and small,
I'll in conclusion say—
Economy is no disgrace
When used in any way.

No better plan, go where you can,
With truth, can any say,
Is offered the economical,
Than buying goods of F. Lemay.

If this you doubt, please do come out,
And do not prejudiced be,
Give him fair play, just in this way—
Judge not until you see.

CHANCERY SALE.

TO BE SOLD pursuant to an order for sale made by the Court of Chancery for Ontario, in the matter of HUTCHINSON FIFE, a Lunatic, by

PUBLIC AUCTION,

By the undersigned Local Master of the said Court or his Clerk, at the Court House, in the Town of Peterborough,

On TUESDAY, the THIRD Day of March, 1868,

At Twelve o'clock noon, in two Lots, the following valuable farm property, to wit:

PARCEL ONE.

The west half of Lot number twenty-eight, in the second concession of the Township of Otonabee, in the County of Peterborough, one hundred acres more or less. There is a never failing spring of water and about forty acres principally of hardwood on the north side, the remainder of the lot is cleared.

PARCEL TWO.

The west half of Lot number twenty-seven, in the second concession of Otonabee, aforesaid. There are about fifteen acres of standing hardwood. The remainder is cleared with buildings on it. The main road from Peterborough to Norwood runs past the south side of this lot.

The above two parcels comprise the well known farm of Mr. Hutchinson Fife, and the land is of excellent quality.

TERMS.—Ten per cent down, an additional ten per cent in one month from the day of sale with interest. The residue may remain on mortgage for a term of years bearing interest at seven per cent per annum. The vendor to have a reserved bid on each parcel. The remaining conditions are the standing conditions of the Court.

Further particulars and conditions of sale may be had gratis at the law office of T. M. Fairbairn, Esq., from James Fife, Esq., Westwood, and at the office of the said Master.

Dated this 29th day of January, A. D., 1868.

DR. COLBY'S ANTI-COSTIVE & TONIC PILLS

SUGAR-COATED.

ARE a safe and reliable remedy in all instances of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary people, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they always exactly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

MRS. WINSLOW'S
SOOTHING SYRUP!
FOR CHILDREN TEETHING,

GREATLY facilitates the process of teething by softening the gums, reducing all inflammation—will allay ALL PAIN and spasmodic action, and is

SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Depend upon it, mothers, it will give rest to yourselves, and

Relief and Health to your Infants.

We have put up and sold this article for years, and CAN SAY IN CONFIDENCE AND TRUTH of it what we have never been able to say of any other medicine—NEVER HAS IT FAILED IN A SINGLE INSTANCE TO EFFECT A CURE, when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak of terms of commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "WHAT WE DO KNOW" after years of experience, AND PLEDGE OUR REPUTATION FOR THE FULFILMENT OF WHAT WE HERE DECLARE. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper.

Sold by druggists throughout the world.

Price, only 25 Cents per Bottle.

PRESIDENT—W. H. Scott, Esq.
SOLICITORS—Weller & Hatton.
MANAGING DIRECTOR—H. C. Rogers.
TREASURER—John Burnham.
SECRETARY—Edg. Pearce.

This Company is organized for the purpose of developing the mineral resources of the west half of lot number Twenty in Concession A, in the Township of Galway, County of Peterborough, in the Province of Ontario and Dominion of Canada, and for the purpose of mining, smelting, and otherwise preparing for market, the ores of all kinds of metals and minerals, together with the acquisition, employment, and disposal of all lands, mines, or ores, or granting to others the right to mine, smelt, or prepare for market, the ores of all metals and minerals that may be found of advantage to the interests of the Company.

The already acquired property of the Company, the west half of Lot Twenty, Concession A, Galway, is extremely rich in Lead, Iron Sulphate of Baryte, and Silver, quantities of each of which have already been taken by the promoters of the Company off this portion of the lot, which from the assays of Dr. Oxway, show the following favorable results; Sulphur 23 per cent, Lead 77 per cent, Silver in Lead 16oz. 12dwt. 8grs., to the Ton, proving beyond a doubt the great value of the property. The original owners of the property have already spent about one thousand dollars in opening up the mineral veins that intersect the Lot, and in pushing an adit or tunnel through a hill upon the property.

The property is situated on the Bobcaygeon Road, about 12 miles from Bobcaygeon, at which place communication can easily be obtained to Lindsay or Peterborough, thence by the P. H. L. and B. Railway to Port Hope. Ore or goods can thus be transferred at all seasons from the property to Port Hope, or vice versa at a cost not exceeding $5 per ton.

The original Proprietors have already conveyed the property to the Rev. Mark Burnham, of Ashburnham, in trust to be reconveyed by him to the Company when organized.

The Trustee of the Company has a perfect title to the said parcel of land so that no delay need occur in commencing operations, and an immediate return on the capital invested may be anticipated.

CANCERS CURED!

By a new, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay is required, until the cure is complete. The moment a cancer is discovered, it should be cured, as it will cost less and is more speedily cured than when of longer standing, and there is nothing to gain, and everything to lose by delay. What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, eye-lid or elsewhere, or small wart or sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given to parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. No money required in advance, and none until the cure is complete.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS.

Are you sick, feeble, and complaining? Are you out of order, and your system deranged? Are you suffering from indigestion? These symptoms are often the precursors of more serious illness. Some form of ailment is prowling upon you, and you should be prepared for it promptly. Take Ayer's Pills, and arouse out the diseased humor that is corrupting your blood, and let the fresh current of health purify the whole system. They stimulate the digestion of the body into vigorous action, and cause the food to nourish. They relieve the bowels from the dangerous impurities which breed disease. A mild cathartic counteracts in the body, and expels its morbid secretions. Thus, if not relieved, sound organs and the healthy organic powers are soon impaired, and the foundations of future disease are laid. Nature demands help, and must have it, or suffering and disease will follow. While in this condition, exposed to the contagion of epidemics, protect yourself with Ayer's Pills, and no fear disturbs the natural action of the system, and with it the buoyant feeling of health again. What is true and so apparent in this trivial and common complaint, is also true in many of the deep-seated and dangerous distempers. The same properties effect equally them. Cleansed by timely use of these and components of the natural functions of the body, they are regulated, and many of them surely, cured by the same means. Those who know the virtues of these Pills, will neglect in employ them when suffering from the disorders they cure.

Sufferers from lurking physicians in some of the principal cities, and from other well known public persons.

From a Forwarding Merchant of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1866.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the purgers of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of obstinate sores upon her hands and feet that had proved incurable for years. Her mother has been long grievously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and in her hair. After one child was cured, the other tried your Pills, and they have cured her.

ASA HOSKINSON.

As a Family Purge.

From Dr. E. W. Carlton, Alton, Indiana.

Your Pills are the prince of purges. Their excellent qualities surpass any cathartic we possess. They are mild, but very certain and effectual in their action on the bowels, which makes them invaluable to us in the daily treatment of disease.

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach.

From Dr. Edward Bayd, Baltimore.

DEAR SIR, AYER: I cannot answer you what complaints I have cured with your Pills better than to say all that use your cured with a purgative medicine. I place great dependence on an effectual cathartic in my daily contact with disease, and believing as I do that your Pills afford us the best we have, I of course value them highly.

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 1, 1866.

DR. J. C. AYER, Sir: I have been repeatedly cured of the worst headache any body can have by a dose or two of your Pills. It seems to arise from a foul stomach, which they cleanse at once.

Yours with great respect, ED. W. PERRIN,
Clerk of Monongahela Clarion.

Bilious Disorders—Liver Complaints.

From Dr. Theodore Bell, of New York City.

Not only are your Pills admirably adapted to their purpose as an aperient, but I find their beneficial effects upon the Liver very marked indeed. They have in my practice proved more effectual for the cure of bilious complaints than any one remedy I can mention. I sincerely believe that we have at length a purgative which is worthy the confidence of the profession and the people.

Washington, D. C., 7th Feb., 1866.

SIR: I have used your Pills in my general hospital practice ever since you made them, and cannot hesitate to say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are admirable remedy for derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of bilious character so obstinate that it did not readily yield to them. Fraternally yours, ALONZO BALL, M. D.,
Physician of the Marine Hospital.

Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Colic, Worms.

From Dr. J. G. Green, of Chicago.

Your Pills have had a long trial in my practice, and I hold them in esteem as one of the best aperients I have ever found. Their alterative effect upon the liver makes them an excellent remedy, when given in small doses for bilious dysentery and diarrhœa. Their sugar-coating makes them very acceptable and convenient for the use of women and children.

Dyspepsia, Impurity of the Blood.

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in sickness. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood, they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

WARSAW, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Oct. 24, 1865.

DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M. D.

Constipation, Costiveness, Suppression, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Dropsy, Paralysis, Piles, &c.

From Dr. J. P. Vaughn, Montreal, Canada.

Too much cannot be said of your Pills for the cure of costiveness. If others of our fraternity have found them as efficacious as I have, they should join me in proclaiming it for the benefit of the multitudes who suffer from that complaint, which, although bad enough in itself, is the progenitor of others that are worse. I believe costiveness to originate in the liver, but your Pills affect that organ and cure the disease.

From Mrs. E. Sweet, Physician and Midwife, Boston.

I find one or two large doses of your Pills, taken at the proper time, are excellent promotives of the natural secretions when wholly or partially suppressed, and also very effectual to cleanse the stomach and bowels. They are so much the best physic we have that I recommend no other to my patients.

From the Rev. Dr. Hawkes, of the Methodist Epis. Church.

PULASKI HOUSE, Savannah, Ga., Jan. 6, 1866.

HONORED SIR: I should be ungrateful for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not report my case to you. A cold settled in my limbs and brought on excruciating neuralgic pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians, the disease grew worse and worse, until by the advice of your excellent agent in Baltimore, Dr. Mackenzie, I tried your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure. By perseverig in the use of them, I am now entirely well.

SENATE CHAMBER, Baton Rouge, La., 5 Dec. 1866.

DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured, by your Pills, of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years. VINCENT SLIDELL.

☞ Most of the Pills in market contain Mercury, which, although a valuable remedy in skilful hands, is dangerous in a public pill, from the dreadful consequences that frequently follow its incautious use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

Price, 25 cents per Box, or 5 Boxes for $1.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold in Peterboro by Ormond & Gilmour, A. W. Kempt, and Wm. Coulter. In Keene by A. Campbell, Campbell McNeil & Co., C. Britton, Lindsay, and all Medicine Dealers.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY IN CANADA.

MESSRS. Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did me no good. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours. While there I saw Esq., Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once, which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

CAUTION.

THE public are hereby cautioned to beware of purchasing Colored and Russian Musk for Canada Mink. The Canada is superior to any in the world, and is therefore the most valuable. This has induced wholesale dealers in [illegible] to imitate the Canada Mink, by coloring Russian, but also by coloring United States Mink. The Canada costs more than double that of any other country, which enables dealers to make a large profit on the spurious article. Those buying Furs in Montreal or other places should beware least they get the inferior article for which they will no doubt have to pay full prices. Take care, therefore, for I have been shown articles purchased as genuine in Montreal, which I can certify were colored and of inferior quality.

Those who buy any article of my own manufacture, I will warrant to be genuine, of best quality, and best workmanship, and at lower prices than any wholesale dealer will supply the same article.

A call is respectfully solicited.

Poetry.

IT IS SO!

I've seen many a girl
Who would marry a churl,
Providing he'd plenty of gold,
And vowed live to repent
When the money was spent,
When she found that her heart had been sold,
It is so! it is so!
You may smile if you like,
But it's so!

I've known many a lass
Who would thoughtlessly pass
Whole hours promenading the street,
While her mother would scrub
All the while at the tub,
Never minding the cold or the heat,
It is so! it is so!
You may smile if you like,
But it's so!

There is many a man
Who will "dress" if he can,
No matter how empty his purse,
And his tailor may look
When he settles his book,
But his patron has vanished, or worse,
It is so! it is so!
You may smile if you like,
But it's so!

I know people so nice,
They will fast in a trice,
If you mention hard labor to them,
Yet their parents were poor,
And were found to endure
Many hardships life's current to stem,
It is so! it is so!
You may smile if you like,
But it's so.

There are many about
With face "long drawn out,"
Who will prate to the harm of a laugh,
Yet they'll cheat all the week,
Though Sundays quite meek;
To my mind they're too pious by half,
It is so! it is so!
You may smile if you like,
But it's so.

Selections.

The Queen's Visit to the Lake of Killarney.

"We rowed first round Innisfallen Island and some way up the Lower Lake.—The view was magnificent. We had a slight shower, which alarmed us all, from the mist which overhung the mountains; but it suddenly cleared away and became very fine and very hot. At a quarter to one we landed at the foot of the beautiful hill of Glena, where, on a small sloping lawn, there is a very pretty cottage. We walked about, though it was overpowering-ly hot, to see some of the splendid views. The trees are beautiful—oak, birch, arbutus, holly, yew—all growing down to the water's edge, intermixed with heather.—The hills, rising abruptly from the lake, are completely wooded, which gives them a different character to those in Scotland, though they often reminded me of the dear Highlands. We returned to the little cottage where the quantity of midges and the smell of peat made us think of Alt na-Giuthasach. Close to our right as we were going, we stopped under the splendid hill of the Eagle's Nest to hear the echo of a bugle; the sound of which, though blown near by, was not heard. We had to get out near the Weir Bridge to let the empty boats be pulled up by the men. The sun had come out and lit up the really magnificent scenery splendidly; but it was most oppressively hot. We wound along till we entered the Upper Lake, which opened upon us with all its high hills—the highest—the Reeks, 3,400 feet high—and its islands and points covered with trees) with yews, making a beautiful foreground. We turned into a very small bay or creek, where we got out and walked a short way in the shade, and up to where a tent was placed, just opposite a water all called Derrycon-ochy, a lovely spot, but terribly infested with midges. In the tent we had tea, fruit, ice, cakes and everything tastefully arranged. We just took some tea, which was very refreshing in the great heat of this relaxing climate. The vegetation is quite that of a jungle—ferns of all kinds and shrubs and trees,—all springing up luxuriantly. We entered our boats and went back the same way we came, admiring greatly the beauty of the scenery; and this time went down the rapids in the boat. No boats, except our own had followed us beyond the rapids. But below them there were a great many, and the scene was very animated and the people very noisy and enthusiastic. The Irish always give that peculiar shrill shriek—unlike anything one ever hears anywhere else."

From this volume of familiar journalizing the public will obtain a knowledge of many of those little details of family life which show how like the royal house is to other English houses. Thus they will learn that nearly all members of the royal family are known amongst each other by pet names; the crown princess of Prussia is called Vicky, the Prince of Wales, Bertie, the Duke of Edinburgh, Affie, and Princess Christian, Leechen. We find by these confessions that contrary to the common belief, the Queen was a poor sailor, generally ill at sea, while the Prince, though not a good sailor, contrived to keep pretty well.

Peace is the evening star of the soul, as virtue is its sun, and the two are never far apart.

Out of one hundred persons about five score don't behave as well as they require other people to do.

THE PAPAL ZOUAVES.

The hundred and fifty Lower Canadian Recruits which recently left Canada for Rome are exciting much attention. This wholesale immigration of young men is not calculated to do the country much good. Many of the detachment already on its way to Rome have their military trainings at schools supported at the expense of the State, and have drawn bounties, we suppose, like other graduates. Our government is bound to take this into serious consideration. Of course we cannot prevent individuals from going to other parts of the world, but we should be able to put a stop to the enlistment in this country of soldiers for service under a foreign government.—Our young men are being recruited in hundreds, and are sent off in large bodies. It is true that the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act do not apply as there is no war, but there must be some way of meeting a case such as this is. Austria, the most pliant of Roman Catholic countries, has forbidden the enlistment within its borders of soldiers for the Papal service. Spain offered to send a legion to Rome, but Napoleon, the saviour of the Papal Government, the most devoted son of the church, would not allow the Spaniards to be sent. With these precedents before us it cannot be considered improper to check an exodus from Canada. The quarrel between the people of Italy and the Roman Government is a political one, and it is not expedient for us, while paying so much money to induce immigration, to permit the counteraction of our efforts by individuals in our midst, whose position gives them unusual means of influencing the young men of this country.

Very strange stories have been told by returned crusaders, of the treatment they received while upholding the cause of the Roman government. One of these disgusted individuals has written to the Montreal Witness to this effect:—

"Happy the recruit who has money with him, and bears a noble name! for the Zouaves are expected to be rich and noble, the plebian in that corps is an outcast, and must live on his three cents a day. "How much do you receive from home a month?" is a question very often asked. If you say nothing,—you are considered as nobody; the officers look upon you with contempt, and say, 'Another who had no soup at home." On the contrary, the noble and rich man, when found out, is invited to dine with the Colonel and keeps company with the elite of the battalion. How disappointed we were the next day, when at nine o'clock—our first meal—we marched to the kitchen to receive a scanty dish of soup, and daily loaf of bread, two pounds for the day! Disillusion begins; no officer visits us; no friendly word welcomes us. Volunteers for a cause represented as so holy, we had expected to meet friends and brothers; we are received with contempt and diffidence. "Are you rich? Are you noble?" These are the only words addressed to us."

A letter lately appeared in the London Times from a Worcester boy who ran away from home, and had some experience in Rome. It confirms the words of the Montreal reformed one.

"I did not like the living nor the people with whom I had to associate. Our first meal was at 10 a. m., and this consisted of soup and about two ounces of cooked meat. We had nothing else till 4 p. m., and then about a pound and a half of cooked potatoes, or rice, or maccaroni, varied most days, but no more meat; and nothing more till next day at 10 a. m. Nothing to drink allowed but water. We had three pounds of bread served out to us every day. Our bed was of straw, sewed up in some bagging, and we had a rug to cover us. I did not dare to take off my clothes for fear they would be stolen. I did not take off my boots even, all the time I was there, and my feet were swollen and sore in consequence. The money pay given to us was equal to 7d a week."

Murphy vs. St Clair.

A certain gentleman of the Milesian persuasion, who has achieved some little newspaper notoriety in this country, and whose name was Murphy, for some reason or other, and much to the disgust of his brother Irishmen, changed his time honored name to "the more hifalutin" cognomen of St. Clair.

Every one knows how it hurts an Irishman's feelings to see a brother Irishman go back on the old sod, and you may be sure that he got many a sharp rap over the change of name.

Some time during the war, our hero was stopping at the Tremont House, as was also a dashing young Irish Officer of our army. They chanced to be together at dinner, and Major J., who always goes in for a joke, whether at his own expense or some one's else, thought the opportunity was too good to be lost, so he sings out to the waiter:—

'Patrick.'

Pat came to him.

'Bring me a St. Clair,' said the Major, in his matter of fact way.

'A which, sir?' says Pat.

'A St. Clair, I said; don't you understand the American dialect?'

I at, sorely bothered, scratched his head, and replied—

'Shure, Amerika is a quare country; but I never heard such a thing axed for before at all, sure.'

'Well, Patrick,' quoth our joker, with the air of one about to impart useful knowledge. 'It's a potato I want. We used to call them murphies at home, but I believe the polite name for them in this country is St. Clair.'

The Major hit hard this time, at least for the owner of the polite name, who left the table amidst the unrestrained roars of the company who understood and fully appreciated the joke; and it is believed he has since gone back to his old name.

Why is it dangerous to add an inch to a man's stature? Because if you give him an inch he'll take a knoll.

The Abyssinian Expedition.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

The Times and its correspondents take a very discouraging view of the prospects in Abyssinia. The commissariat and transport do not get ahead of the fighting force, and have a hard struggle to keep it living on from day to day, from hand to mouth. One correspondent says: We have absorbed six months in digging and eating our path to Senafe, sixty miles from Annesley Bay, as Magdala is distant about 300 miles from Annesley, we shall swallow up exactly two years and a half before we shall open the real business of the campaign before the walls of Magdala.

The Times remarks that though in some respects the enterprise is easier than was expected, there is not much in the Abyssinian campaign which can be viewed with satisfaction. The preparations are on the side of cumbrousness. It is to be hoped that there is still time to remedy this defect, and that the Commander-in-Chief, aided as he is by some of the best officers in the service, will take these measures for prompt and decisive movements without which the end of the expedition seems to recede indefinitely into the future.

The Post says that the letters from Abyssinia published yesterday tell the old story of "How not to do it." On a small scale, and with much less excuse, we are apparently repeating in Abyssinia the terrible blunders which cost us so dearly thirteen years ago in the Crimea.

The Daily News thinks in some respect the scene in Abyssinia has been Balaklava over again. There has not been the disorder, but there has been the same inefficiency of labor, through neglect in availing ourselves of the resources of science. None could have worked better or harder with the means at their disposal than the officers and men actually on the spot. But the authorities in India and at home, whose business it was to have foreseen what would first of all be needed, and to have supplied it, cannot be freed from blame.

The Star remarks that Sir Robert Napier is evidently a man with a will of his own, and that, perhaps, in the first virtue in any general. Theodore has not a very high opinion of our ability to do him harm, but he was probably not prepared for the tactics of a general like Sir Robert Napier advancing from stage to stage with perfect deliberation, taking his stores along with him, and approaching the heart of the kingdom slowly, but as surely as the lapse of the months or the growing of the corn. Theodore contemned the telescope which Col. Merewether sent him as a present; he will now have an opportunity of studying the telescope mode of warfare; for the advance of the British army will compare to nothing so aptly as the gradual drawing out of an immense telescope, whose thickest part will be at Annesley Bay and the thin end at Magdala.

Last winter we suggested the experiment of packing snow upon winter wheat by rolling it down with a common hand roller; but it was rather late in the season to be of any practical use at the time. This hint was taken from reading an account of an accidental experiment of the kind. A man having occasion to haul wood one winter, across his neighbor's field of winter wheat, he engaged to pay him whatever damage it might do to the wheat, presuming that more or less damage would accrue. The road was staked out so that it could be accurately distinguished at harvest time. But there was no need of stakes for all through the season the wheat upon the track was a whole head and shoulders above any other part of the field and the yield of grain was proportionately larger. The difference was so marked that it seemed impossible that it should have been the result of the little manure dropped upon the track as the teams were passing, and the cause of the difference was regarded as a mystery. It is well known that snow well packed will resist the spring thaws and remain on the ground much longer than snow left as it falls, and that it is early bare ground in the spring that injures the wheat. Hence the suggestion to take opportunities when the snow is adrift enough to pack well and roll it down on fields of winter wheat. It is certain that it will cause the snow to remain on the ground longer, and hold the soil more firmly in its place and protect the roots of the grain from some of the early freezings and thawings, which are supposed to be the chief cause of winter killing.—Wisconsin Farmer.

A correspondent of the Wisconsin Farmer who milks about twenty cows, gives his experience with patent churns. He says there are a number of different patents going through the country that will churn butter, or rather grease, in three minutes. I had one in my cellar this summer that I tried three times. It brought the butter each time in less than three minutes, but the butter would not have sold for more than ten cents per pound when the same churned with the old dash churn, that required thirty or forty minutes churning, would sell readily for thirty cents. So if any of your readers should want a churn, I should advise them not to buy a three minute one.

Ex-Governor Boctwell, of Massachutts, does not think much of agricultural colleges, but would have educated scientific men sent out every summer among the farmers to make observations, and then visit the country in winter and point out to the farmers their mistakes.

A new grass is springing up in the Southern States. It appears to be a dwarf clover, is very thick set, covering the earth with a beautiful carpet of green. It is much relished by cattle, and is a complete exterminator of Bermuda, joit, sedge, and other grasses. In Middle Georgia it is very abundant, and is attracting much attention.

HONOUR YOUR VOCATION.

I never like to hear a man disprise the vocation to which he is called. It is not a good and wholesome sign. Men are perpetually making mistakes in regard to their pursuits in life, and a man may perceive that if he had had an opportunity, and could have followed this or that occupation he would, as he is organized, have been more in harmony with his work; but a man might as well repine because he is not a Frenchman, or an Italian, and is an Anglo-Saxon, as mourn over his lot. When a man is born, it is done with, and he cannot help it. You have got to be what you are. And as a man has been educated, or he must pursue his. And to murmur at his occupation, and look wistfully at something else, and spend his time thinking what he would like to, and to cover that other pursuit with his imagination and make fancied flowers grow upon it, and see abundant and varied fruit hanging from its boughs, while making his own business as barren and hateful as possible by associating it with dust and wet, and inexorable necessity, and rising in the morning to say, "Must I go to work again to-day?" and going home at night to curse the day's work—that is unmanly and mean for a man that God has endowed with the many faculties of his mind on purpose that he may clothe his tasks with fancy, and plan them with variety, and fill them with blessings. I love to see some sturdy smith, or laborious mason, or carpenter, or deliver in the soil, who, although he perceives that there are occupations that would have given him a larger sphere, and more agreeable results, yet honours and dignifies his vocation, and makes every man that comes after him a better man, because he has left with his pursuit an honourable name.—*H. Charge of Murder.

A girl named Elizabeth Gage, at present a servant in a respectable family in Kingston, has lately appeared much troubled in mind, and on the 18th instant had the following statement written out, which she acknowledged before Mr. Creighton, the Police Magistrate of Kingston. The following is a copy of the statement:—

Kingston, Feb. 18, 1868.

I, Elizabeth Gage, lived in Montreal about four months ago, with Mrs. Hooper. I think the name of the street is Wellington street, two streets from the Main street; and while living there Mrs. Hooper gave me some coffee to grind for her supper's breakfast, but it did not look like coffee; it looked like black peas. After I had poured boiling water on it, I gave it to Mrs. Hooper to put milk and sugar to it. After she had done so she brought it to me to give it to him, which I did; and at that time he seemed to me quite well. After breakfast he went to bed again, and in the afternoon, about four o'clock, Mrs. Hooper told me to go up stairs and see what was the matter with him. When I got to him he was stretched on the bed. I went and told Mrs. Hooper, and she said "don't say a word about it," and I promised her I would not. Mrs. Hooper got me to help her to dig a hole in the back yard, and to help her to put him in a box and bury him in the hole in the yard, and level it up again. She also offered me money not to tell any one.

This is all I know, and it is a true statement.

Elizabeth Gage, her X mark.

Mr. Creighton forwarwarded information to the Chief of Police here, which was received here yesterday. He caused inquiries to be made and Mrs Hooper was found in a house answering to the description given by the girl, Gage. She was taken into custody, and on the charge being stated to her, denied all knowledge of any such transaction as that given in the statement. The girl Gage will probably be examined this afternoon.—Montreal Herald, Tuesday.

CONFEDERATION.

This new form of Government under which we find ourselves, is not working so pleasantly as we were led to believe it would before adoption. The serious opposition offered by the Provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, especially the latter, lead to the belief that very serious difficulties will yet arise. It has been hinted in the Provincial papers that but few of the members from the above Provinces will return to Ottawa. A deputation it is said will proceed to England (if it has not gone) to attempt the dissolution of the union. It is affirmed that members of the disaffected Provinces, who acted and concurred in the Quebec resolutions upon which Confederation was based, acted more upon their personal responsibility than as accredited agents for their respective Provinces, and as no such power as that which they then exercised was delegated to them, consequently the people are not legally bound by what they did at Quebec in the fall of 1866. No one reading the public papers but will be struck with the numerous extracts from the press of the Eastern Provinces of hostility to, and discontent with Confederation, as well as determined efforts to dissolve the connection.

The Imperial Act proceeds with the announcement that "the Provinces of Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick have expressed their desire to be federally united into one dominion," and upon this desire thus expressed solemnizes the union under that of "The British American Act of 1867." The Legislature of Nova Scotia has recently passed resolutions concerning the Union, and seeking to be released from the operations of the Act. The Attorney General reported an address to the Queen embodying the repeal resolutions, which was passed. Whether the dissatisfied colonists will succeed in procuring the bill of divorce or not remains to be seen, but one thing is plain, that it is very uncomfortable to get along with companions who dislike you and seek dissolution of partnership.

We in Upper Canada have looked upon Confederation as something of which we could not speak positively, as it was untried. What we could comprehend of it we considered as favorable. The long struggle we had with Lower Canada for securing good local measures made us often sigh for some such measure as we saw Confederation would confer, viz.: sole control of our local matters. Confederation was long looked upon as a cure for the difficulties we labored under by our union with Lower Canada in regard to our local legislation. The interference of the Lower Canada party in our purely sectional measures has long been felt a very great annoyance, and frequent attempts have been made for dissolution of the union. The notables who originated the British American League thought they saw a way of escape from the union they disliked through Confederation and adopted it as a sine qua non to their views. At various times our politicians have advocated this measure as a cure to all the ills of the body politic, and now that we have the desired boon, if boon it is, we find it is not acceptable to all. There is no doubt but it will prove advantageous to us in Upper Canada, in the control we shall have of our local measures, which is manifest from the debates we have had in the Ontario Legislature.—At the same time it is a question worth considering whether we are not to pay somewhat dearly for our privilege. It is true, we feel that when only political freedom is concerned we are willing to have it even should it cost us a "large sum." The Country, as a whole, has been content to receive the measure, hoping it was for the best; at the same time it cannot be denied that a large portion of the people have received confederation with a sullen acquiescence, feeling that in carrying the measure a violence has been done to their views of self-government in asking them to accept the new form of government proposed without their assent. As Reformers, we cannot get rid of the conviction that the authors of confederation committed a grave mistake in not submitting the measure to a vote of the people. The effects of that mistake are appearing in the Maritime Provinces, and may yet lead to serious consequences. Why the Reform members of the Quebec Convention should have been guilty of so serious an offence against one of the fundamental principles of responsible government is passing strange. We can only account for it by their resort to a measure of expediency, thinking the benefit to be obtained so great, that they were justified in doing evil that good may come. No such a flagrant act upon the liberties of the people has been attempted for a long time, and never has a people said less than have Canadians against the perpetration of the injustice. Possibly the malcontents below are, while opposing Confederation, standing in their own light and working against their own interests, but the conviction that the people had not a say in the matter, has doubtless much to do in instigating their present attempts for repeal. The history of the world abounds with instances of the folly and serious consequences of coercing a people to accept a new form of political existence whether they approve of it or otherwise.—We need go no further than our own country. In 1840 the Imperial Parliament, without the assent of the parties concerned united Upper and Lower Canada by the Union Act. The latter growled and grumbled loud and long against the measure, but finding subsequently that by concentrated action she could sway the government to suit herself, she came by degrees to be content with the new order of things. Upper Canada, on the contrary, was delighted with the Union, benefitted largely by it; but in proportion as her neighbor became pleased, she became dissatisfied, till matters assumed so serious an aspect that separation or confederation must be adopted to cure the evils of domestic strife. Confederation seemed the most natural, agreeable and beneficial, and our legislators, without our advice or instructions, adopted it as a remedy for our troubles.

Whilst Upper and Lower Canada have subsequently assented to this new measure, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia have entered a protest against it. Their election last year proved that the measure was not agreeable to them. They had not the same difficulties as we had to contend with—were free and independent—and when the arbitrary and high-handed measure of forcing them into a confederation with other Provinces, larger but burdened with debt, we need not wonder at the resistance they offer to the new state of things, and their determination to appeal against their absorption into the union. We believe their attempts will be unsuccessful, but we may lay our account with much disagreeable work in legislating for a dissatisfied and unwilling people.

OUR LOCAL MEMBER.

Our Parliamentary reports last week brought us the announcement that the Member for the West Riding of the County of Peterborough had at last broken silence in the Legislature Hall. And on what occasion was it think you, gentle reader, that he rose to speak for his constituents; was it when the debates were going on upon the amendments to the Municipal or Assessments Acts?—matters that most intimately concern directly every voter in the Riding, and matters that he must be familiar with from his connection with the Township and County Councils; or was it when the opening up of the wild Lands—free grants, or the sale of wild lands and timber were under discussion— measures which he gave promise to in his printed address to his constituents? Oh no; he was mum while these important matters were being debated; but when the Government announced its intention of paying but one grant more of aid to Denominational Colleges from the public purse, up jumps our impulsive member like a jack in the box and protests strongly against the policy of the government in discontinuing the grants. The first thing that struck us in reading the notice of this zealous protest of Mr. Carnegie, was that he was more influenced by selfish and sectarian considerations than by those of public and general utility. A man that can be all alive when his church is in danger of losing a grant of money from the public chest—what it never should have had—and so indifferent when measures affecting the entire Riding, that his voice is not heard for or against any good or bad proposal, is certainly unworthy of being a legislator. We write in no spirit of political opposition or personal antipathy towards Mr. Carnegie—quite the reverse—but we do repeat that his conduct lays him open to the suspicion of acting as we have described.

The action of the government in discontinuing these grants will be approved of despite of all the virtuous indignation of mendicants of government aid for sectarian purposes.

Late news from England informs us that Lord Derby has given place to Mr. Disraeli as Prime Minister of Great Britain. It is said that the latter is not popular with his party, but a man who has made so conspicuous a mark by the force of his individual determination, and who has risen from a humble origin to the highest position of dignity and power, need not fear the opposition of those who may choose to offer resistance to his rule.

We learn with some degree of interest that a party in the Church of England is anxious to embrace the Wesleyans in their communion. They begin now to discover that Mr. Wesley was ill-used by the Church, and they now propose as amends for that ill treatment to receive his followers into holy Mother Church. While many Wesleyans may feel flattered by these proposals, we believe that a very large portion of that body will not thoughtlessly throw away their independence to be swallowed up in a church at present so full of ritualism and incongruities in the lack of power to expel heretical prelates from her communion. Such a step would be a retrograde movement indeed, and will, we feel convinced, not be taken.

Don't forget the Reunion of the Grammar School Literary Society, in the Music Hall, on Friday evening.

Yesterday our good Town was the scene of one of those occurrences, termed "Fashionable Weddings." The high contracting parties were Malcolm Wilson, Esq., son of Judge J. Wilson, and Miss Ham, step-daughter of R. Richardson, Esq., Agent of the Bank of Montreal in Peterborough. The ceremony was performed in St. Johns Church by the Rev. J. W. B. Beck. The Church was crowded, large numbers of the scholars from the Union School taking the advantage of the occasion, rushed in to see the exciting scene. There was no lack of grown persons, male and female, who testified by their presence the interest they felt in the interesting ceremony. The bridegroom was attended by Mr. Kirchhoffer, jr., from Port Hope, Mr. Wright, from Brampton, Mr. Ritchie, of Montreal, and Mr. R. Dennistoun, jr., and the bride, who was very gaily attired and looked beautiful, was attended by five maids. She was given away by Mr. Richardson. We observed Judge J. Wilson and quite a number, male and female of our respectable citizens, witnessing the ceremony. The happy couple left yesterday evening on their wedding tour. We wish them every happiness and prosperity in their new relation.

FAIR BECOMES FOUL.—The Editor of the Review treated his readers last week to another piece of information on his own hook. He told them that "Fair Play" is some one not far from the Examiner Office. This is on a par with all he writes in reference to us, i. e., simply a false statement. "Fair Play" is an Inhabitant of Asphodel, and is not, nor never was in any way connected with the Examiner office; and we can truly say that if the Editor of the Review and his correspondents are so reckless as to make assertions without knowledge, which has been done in this instance, they deserve to be stigmatized in the strongest terms "Fair Play" could use. In regard to the motives charged against us, we treat those who would impugn them with perfect contempt, but we suppose that the writer writhes under the Carroll lash and tries to vent his spleen by spitting venom at his neighbors.

LITERARY CLUB.—This evening the subject, "Our Dominion," will be taken up by six members of the club, each person to discuss one of the following parts, viz:—Its Government, its People, its Commercial Resources, its Military Resources, its Educational Institutions, and its Future. The meeting will be open to the public. Doors open at 7½ p.m.; Chair taken at 8 o'clock.

On Tuesday evening next the third reunion of the series will be given in the Club's Room, over the Royal Canadian Bank.—Admission 12½ cents. The entertainment to commence at 8 o'clock.

The weather for the last ten days has been very cold and stormy. The "oldest inhabitant" finds a difficulty to remember such a winter as the present one for a continuance of cold and stormy weather. Last week we were without a mail for four days. The trains both east and west were all delayed by the snow drifts. We hear that several of the lumber shanties are obliged to suspend operations, owing to the great depth of the snow in the back country.

FAIR DAY.—On Tuesday last the regular quarterly fair was held. The business done at the fair proper, was very trifling. Only a few loads of grain and produce, and a few head of inferior cattle found their way to the Market. There were not so many people in Town as usual, owing doubtless to the severity of the weather, which was intensely cold. King Winter seems determined to hold his sway despite all efforts of Old Sol to the contrary, but yield he must, and that soon, or all past experience is at fault.

THE TOWNSEND FAMILY gave their first performance in the Music Hall, on Wednesday evening, to a full house. The programme for this evening will be Sheridan's play of "Pizarro, or the Invasion of Peru," and the farce of "My Neighbor's Wife." This will be the last night but one of their stay in town. The Company appear to be particular favorites with the theatre-going community.

TOWN COUNCIL.

The Council met on Monday night last. Present—His Worship the Mayor, Messrs. Cluxton, English, Kennedy, Helm, Doherty, Stevenson and J. H. Dixon.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

A communication from Mr. J. R. Benson, Inspector of weights and measures, was read by the Clerk.

Mr. B. complained that some of the low hucksters had altered their weights since he had before adjusted them, otherwise the weights of the respectable dealers are correct. He said that he was obliged to inspect the weights and measures twice a year, but receiving so little in the way of fees, he asked the Council to appropriate a sum for the inspection of weights and measures, or to make him some remuneration for his trouble. The communication was referred to a special committee composed of Messrs. English, Helm and Doherty.

The chairman of the Street and Bridge Committee read and handed in a report upon the state of the ice in the creek near Mr. Doherty's, which was received.

On motion of Mr. Cluxton, the special committee appointed to report upon the salaries of officers of the corporation was discharged, and a new one appointed consisting of Messrs. Burnham, Stevenson, Doherty, English, Kennedy and the mover.

The Clerk laid upon the table the Treasurer's abstract of the receipts and expenditure of the past year, which was ordered to be referred to the Auditors.

The return of the fines and fees in the Police Court was referred to the Committee on Finance.

The Clerk informed the Council that he had put out bills for tenders for plank and cedars. That he had received two tenders for plank and three for cedars.

An account from Adam Dobbin for $8 was referred to the Committee on Finance.

James McFadden sent in his resignation as constable, having purchased the Market Tolls. This resignation was accepted.

The Mayor was instructed to attend to suits in which the Town was a party, or to employ counsel therefor.

The Clerk was instructed, in connection with the committee on fire, to ascertain where he could procure two hundred feet of hose for the fire engine.

Mr. Stevenson introduced a By-law to amend By-law No. 155 in reference to the amount charged for Theatrical Exhibitions, which passed through its several readings.

The Council then adjourned for two weeks.

The Market Tolls were sold on Monday last, and realized $550, being $175 in excess of last year. The purchaser was Mr. Jas. McFadden.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—I am requested by the members of the Council of the Municipality of Burleigh, &c., to forward the enclosed contradiction for insertion. I also beg to state that the affair referred to was got up altogether without Mr. Carroll's knowledge. The articles were purchased by me without ever consulting him, and he knew nothing about the matter till a few hours before the presentation. In fact, up to the present time, Mr Carroll does not know the names of those who contributed to the purchase of the articles.

Yours truly,
EDWARD S. HALL.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—The attention of the undersigned having been directed to the following paragraph which appeared in the Peterborough Review some time ago, we beg, through your columns, to give it a flat and absolute contradiction. The paragraph in question is as follows:—

"We have never found it necessary to purchase articles of plate at our own expense, convey them to the desired locality in our own vehicle, and then get them presented to us by a few of our own creatures, in order to create a profound impression of our own popularity, which Mr. Carroll is alleged to have done by a member of his own council and one of his own local clique."

We are not aware who the member of council is from whom the Editor of the Review pretends to have obtained his information, but we declare solemnly and emphatically, each for himself, that we never made any such statement as that contained in the above paragraph, either to the Editor of the Review or to any one else, and we declare further that from our knowledge of the circumstances referred to, we have no hesitation in declaring the allegations contained in said paragraph to be false in every particular.

Denominational Grants.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—I read with much interest the debates in the Ontario Legislature last week on the subject I have been writing upon. The Government deserve the thanks of the country, especially of the friends of equal rights for the noble stand they have taken upon this vexed question—a course which I have no doubt will be sustained by the country, notwithstanding the assertions to the contrary of a few men such as Mr Beatty and Mr. Carnegie. In the able address of the Treasurer of Ontario in introducing the item of the last grant to these institutions in the estimates, he shows how impolitic as well as unjust it is to continue this relic of state churchism, in such a manner as no unbiassed reflecting individual can gainsay. He shows by reference to the census that considerably upwards of one-third of the population of Ontario do not participate in these grants; that many of the denominations included in this portion object from conscientious reasons to such grants being made, such as the Free Church, Episcopal and New Connexion Methodists, Baptists, Congregationalists and others. The total embraced in the above denominations is put down at 498,093. The four large denominations who are applicants for state aid number 891,096. To raise the sum apportioned for 7 colleges named in the Governor's message ($32,100) it would require a trifle over 3½ cents per head of the sects seeking aid, a trifling sum indeed to these large and wealthy denominations A family of ten persons paying annually but 35 cents to support their own college is a mere trifle, thereby averting the just charge of wrongfully compelling others of different views to assist in supporting other colleges than their own, for which they do not derive an equivalent, and preventing as well, an annual appeal to government for its aid. No government gives money to denominations but expects in return their support, and no church receiving assistance but pledges its freedom and independence thereby. Look at it as you will, it is a shallow policy in a country like Canada, made up of such a variety of sects, to continue so paltry a shred of state churchism as to subsidize a portion of the people at the expense of the rest. No intelligent and patriotic person, whatever may be his private views of what should be, can I think advocate that more than one-third of the community should be taxed to pay towards the support of the other portion's colleges. How could such conduct as that pursued by the friends of the grants be designated just, wise or patriotic? are legislators sent by the people simply to legislate for their individual or party claims? Has not our beloved country been brought almost to ruin by the contest of rival sectarian struggles? and will short-sighted, sanguine, selfish politicians expose the country anew to the perils of the past? We dread nothing of the sort, being fully assured that there is more good sense and patriotism in the land than to allow demagogues to have their ruinous way. The Government will be sustained, will be applauded for their noble and patriotic policy by the larger portion of the country, and all attempts made against them for their determination by these disappointed beggars will be as harmless as the threats of the writer in the Review or the "strong protests" of Mr. John Carnegie himself. Seven colleges in Upper Canada receiving between them a large sum annually from the public chest, and about as many more receiving nothing, and yet we are told that the present system is the best and cheapest. If so are not the higher claims of justice and equal rights ignored or lost sight of in the inordinate love of, and struggle for government pap?

Next week (D V.) I shall have something to say anent our noble Institution, the University of Toronto, including a few passages from my "scrap book" of its history from the commencement to the present time.

I am, sir,
Yours, &c,
J. E.

American Despatches.

WASHINGTON, Feb 28.—The Cabinet meeting to-day was of longer duration than usual. There is no doubt that a writ of quo warranto will be applied for by the Government, perhaps to-morrow, to compel Stanton to show cause why he retains possession of the War Department. The President, this evening, entertained the Judges of the Supreme Court, Attorney-General Stanberry, and a few others at dinner.

NEW YORK, Feb.—The Times' special says:—The Impeachment Committee have finally agreed that the specifications, five or six in number, shall relate solely to the violation of the tenure of office act in removing Mr. Stanton, the usurpation of authority in appointing a Secretary of war ad interim, an officer unknown to the law, and the attempt to use the military forces for his own purposes, based upon his alleged attempt to induce General Emory to obey orders direct from him, without transmission through the army headquarters as required by law. The committee will report on Saturday, and the vote will be taken on Monday.

NEW YORK, Feb. 29.—The Tribune's special says:—The articles of impeachment were reported by the sub-committee to the full committee to-day. One article has been added, making a strong point against the President in endeavouring to obtain possession of the Government money in the matter of requisitions, &c., for the War Department.

The World's special says: The Senate had an executive session to-day. An important resolution, offered by Senator Sumner, was principally under discussion. It proposed that they should hold no intercourse with the President, in view of the fact that the House of Representatives had declared in favour of his impeachment.

To-day, at noon, a double guard was placed at all entrances to the War department. Two commissioned officers were stationed inside the building. To-night a double line of troops encircles the building. This additional precaution is not explained.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—A caucus of Republican members of Congress was held at the Capitol last night, at which seventy five were present, to select managers to conduct the proposed trial, and Messrs. Thad. Stevens, B. F. Butler, Bingham, Boutwell Wilson, of Iowa, Williams, of Pa., and Logan were chosen. Business of an official character will probably be suspended between the President and Senate until the conclusion of his trial.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—The House this afternoon proceeded to vote on the articles of impeachment, one by one. They were severally adopted by a strict party vote, the first vote being—yeas, 125; nays, 41.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—Yesterday, the Secretary of State sent a telegram to Minister Bancroft, to which the following answer was received:—"BERLIN, March 1.—Treaty signed and mailed 22nd February, via England. It provides that emigration shall be free, and that naturalization changes nationality. Hasten the ratification. (Signed,) Bancroff."

SAN FRANCISCO, March 1.—Two slight shocks of earthquake were felt at Victoria yesterday.

AGUSTA, Me., March 1.—Our city was visited by quite an earthquake Saturday evening, which lasted several seconds.

WASHINGTON, February 29.—The vote on impeachment articles is fixed for Monday at four o'clock.

It has been decided to defer the application for the writ of quo warranto against Secretary Stanton until the early part of next week, so that all the papers can be maturely considered and properly prepared, that no exception can be taken. Mr. Stanton is by law allowed a month to respond; but it is thought he will not avail himself of the privilege.

WASHINGTON, February 29.—The articles of impeachment are reported. Six are based on the Treasurer-of-Office Bill, and four charge the President with conspiring to obtain possession of the War Department.

COBOURG GRAMMAR SCHOOL.

The following appeared in the Cobourg Sun, and shows what they think down there of Denominational Colleges:—

To the Honorable the Members of the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Ontario,—Assembled.

The memorial of the undersigned ratepayers of the Town of Cobourg and its vicinity, Respectfully sheweth,

That your memorialists have until the last year enjoyed the benefits of the County Grammar School, heretofore established in Cobourg. And that for some reason to your memorialists unsatisfactory, it assumed that the funds necessary, for the maintenance of it could not be raised from local sources—

That consequently in August last, the funds which should have been supplied from local sources; according to the Grammar School Act was provided by the Trustees of Victoria College, and the Grammar School has been re-opened under the auspices of, and in connection with Victoria College. And is now drawing public money as your memorialists believe illegally. That your Memorialists are led to this opinion by the fact that Victoria College is a Denominational Institution belonging to the Methodist Body of Canada, and cannot be regarded as a local institution of Cobourg, whereas the Law requires that the money on which the Government allowance is based, should be derived from local sources.

That the Preparatory School, formerly attached to Victoria College, having been amalgamated with the so-called County Grammar School, its teachers retained, and the site of the School transferred from the proper Building to suit the convenience of Victoria College Students—the practical result of the change has been to throw the whole superintendance of the School into the hands of the College Authorities altogether. A Board of Grammar School Trustees exists; and thus the Spirit of the Grammar School Act has been violated, to the advantage of one Denomination, and to the disadvantage of others, who do not choose to place their sons under such influence. That your Memorialists see no reason why, if this be allowed as a precedent, it should not be open to any other religious body, the Roman Catholics for example—to get into their hands the same control and influence over any County Grammar School, as Victoria College, undoubtedly exercises over our county Grammar School, and draw and expend the public money at their will.

Begging therefore, that enquiry be made into this matter, the public interests protected, and the spirit of the Grammar School Law vindicated in the premises, your Memorialists, as in duty bound will ever pray.

Cobourg, Pro. of Ont. Feb. 4th 1868.

Signed, H. Covert and others.

The amount of lumbering in Maine this winter is less than usual, but the weather and the travelling have been so favorable that all parties have been uncommonly successful, and the aggregate of logs cut will be quite large.

Hon. Mr. Dunkin, Quebec, has moved a series of resolutions, proposing an increase of 25 per cent. on the tavern licenses, pedlars' licenses, and billiard table licenses. The motion was carried.

Jacobs' Rheumatic Liquid Cures Frost Bites.

MR. MCNABB OF TEMPERANCE.—Mr. Alexander McNabb, Police Magistrate for the city of Toronto, delivered a temperance address at Goderich last week. He proposed to take the money accruing from the licenses, with which to erect and maintain an asylum for inebriates, in which they might be restored to sobriety, to their families, and to the country. He had proposed such a plan to a committee of the House, and they had received it very satisfactorily. In 1858, a committee of the House was appointed to inquire into the causes of the crimes committed, and it was clearly shown—even by the reports of bloated, hard-drinking gaolers, that the use of liquor had led to nearly every conviction. The country was, at present, ripe for a prohibitory liquor law. They should get up a great petition, and send the draft of a bill along with it. That would rouse the legislature to action (Applause.) Why did the temperance movement not meet with more success? The clergymen of the Roman Catholic Church will be announced" that will cause more talk than even the reception of Dr. Manning, or Dr. Newman, or Mr. Oakely did twenty years ago." Curiosity is naturally aroused respecting this eminent convert.

The population of China is known to be immense, but if they go on for a few years as at present, it will certainly be considerably diminished. In the last battle between the imperialists and the rebels—which compared with some of the fights which have preceded it was a mere skirmish—180,000 men are reported to have been left dead on the field.

EVERY BODY USES IT.—And all agree, that the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" is the best medicine for the instant and permanent removal of pain from the system, ever yet discovered. It acts as a general alterative, thereby removing the cause of the disease, and renovating the action of the system. For the purposes for which it is recommended, it has no equal. Truly it is a "good thing." Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

BRYAN'S WAFERS.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently sanitary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throat, and all Bronchial affections. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical. Sold by all medicine dealers, at 25 cts per box.

Contracts have been entered into for the construction of the great Masonic Temple at Philadelphia, to be built in five years, and to cost three-quarters of a million of dollars. The corner-stone is to be laid on St. John's day.

In the list of applications for English patents is one from John Chancerley Smythies, barrister at law, in respect of the invention of carrying passengers through the air by a steam blind or flying steam engine fitted with wings flapped by the action of the steam.

The Volunteers at Guelph were inspected recently by Lieut.-Col. Barrete, who informed them that they would be called out for 21 days before the middle of June, and receive 40 cents per diem, added to the allowances for home drill, and a bounty to five years old volunteers.

VERY NATURAL.

When a person has proved an article and found it good, and answering the purpose for which it is intended he will not readily abandon it for one of doubtful reputation or concerning which he knows nothing. We are led to make these remarks owing to the course always pursued by those who have used that celebrated and truly valuable horse medicine known as "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy"—all are so well pleased with it that they will not use any other; many have waited several weeks until the agent could obtain a new supply. There is nothing equal to it as condition Medicine, or for any complaint affecting the wind of horses.

Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurlbut & Co. is on each package.

Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., proprietors for the Canadas. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

Among the most important of modern Medical discoveries, stands

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER

As a Family Medicine, it is well and favorably known, relieving thousands from pains in the Side, Back and Head, Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Sprains, Bruises, Cramps in the Stomach, Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Bowel Complaints, Burns, Scalds, Frost-bites, &c. &c.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER

Has now been before the Public for a length of time, and wherever used is well liked, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction, where the Directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

We speak from experience in this matter, having tested it, thoroughly, and therefore those who are suffering from any of the complaints for which it is recommended may depend upon its being a Sovereign Remedy.

The astonishing efficacy of the Canadian Pain Destroyer, in curing the diseases for which it is recommended, and its wonderful success in subduing the tortuling pains of Rheumatism, and in relieving Nervous Affections, entitle it to a high rank in the list of remedies for these complaints. Orderers coming in from Medicine Dealers, in all parts of the Country for further supplies, andeach testifying as to the universal satisfaction it gives.

The Canadian Pain destroyer never fails to give immediate relief All Medicine dealers keep it. Physicians order and use it; and no family will be without it after once trying it. Price only Twenty-five cents per Bottle.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling cough, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and self-administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

Helmstreet's Inimitable Hair Coloring is not a dye. All instantaneous dyes are composed of lunar caustic, and more or less destroy the vitality and beauty of the hair. This is the original Hair Coloring, and has been growing in favor over twenty years. It restores gray hair to its original color by gradual absorption, in a most remarkable manner. It is also a beautiful hair dressing. Sold in two sizes 50 cents and $1 by all dealers.

STARTLING NEWS!

THE subscriber, who has for some time past been keeping cool, allowing the enormous amount of gas, with which the Dry Goods and Clothing atmosphere has been impregnated, to escape—in order to prevent explosion—now begs to inform his many customers, and the public generally, that owing to the increase in the GENTLEMEN'S CLOTHING DEPARTMENT, which occupies nearly all his premises—from top to bottom—and is still increasing, he has been compelled to CLOSE UP THE LADIES' DEPARTMENT in the meantime; and this being the case, he has thought it his duty—plainly, calmly and truthfully—to inform his patrons of the fact; as also to inform them, one and all, that

ON THE SECOND DAY OF MARCH NEXT
he will commence
SELLING OFF
the whole of his varied stock of
LADIES' GOODS,

Comprising Prints, Cobourgs, Delaines, Ginghams, Ribbons, Parasols, Muslins, with a great many other varieties in this department too numerous to mention.

The Goods will all be marked in plain figures, at such unprecedented low prices as can not fail to command sales in every case, when they are carefully and impartially examined; say at 75 cents in the Dollar on former prices, and without any humbug or puffing, on this the public may rest satisfied. As it is the determination of the subscriber to go very extensively into the Clothing Business in the Spring, the Ladies' Goods must be sold off to make room.

To all those who really wish BARGAINS, the subscriber would say—they will find if they call early that there is no puffing in the establishment, but stubborn facts.

In addition to the above which is specially intended for the LADIES, he would say to his numerous

GENTLEMEN CUSTOMERS

That, not only is his stock of READY MADE CLOTHING—large and varied, but his stock of Tweeds—English, Scotch and Canadian, is also extensive, and will be greatly increased during the Spring. He would also say, that having a first class Cutter on the premises (MR. JAMES MEMZIES) he is prepared to make suits to order to those who may wish them, at very low rates, and when the cloth is bought on the premises, there will be NO CHARGE FOR CUTTING.

Just received, 200 pieces CANADIAN TWEEDS, made to order expressly for the establishment.

Also, FELT HATS of all varieties, comprising, Planters, Opera, Peabody, and many other Styles.

To one and all, both great and small,
I'll in conclusion say—
Economy is no disgrace
When used in any way.

No better plan, go where you can,
With truth, can any say,
Is offered the economical,
Than buying goods of F. Lemay.

If this you doubt, please do come out,
And do not prejudiced be,
Give him fair play, just in this way—
Judge not until you see.

THE TRADE REVIEW
AND
INTERCOLONIAL JOURNAL OF COMMERCE
FOR 1868.
VOLUME IV.

A Weekly Commercial and Financial Journal, Published in Montreal every Friday.

Price $3 per Annum, Invariably in Advance.

THE TRADE REVIEW for 1868, contains, in addition to articles on general commercial and financial topics, contributed by some of the ablest writers in Canada, and the record of events bearing on the trade of the country, reports of the Wholesale Markets of Montreal, Hamilton, Toronto, St John, Halifax and other leading points in the Dominion, with wholesale price lists of Groceries, Wines, Spirits, and liquors, Hardware, Drugs, Oils, Paints, soap and Candles, Leather, Boots and Shoes, Produce, Furs; prices of Grain daily; latest quotations of Bank, Railway, Mining, Government, and other Securities, both here and in London; a weekly report of the state of the Money Market, with quotations of Sterling Exchange here and in New York, price of Gold, U. S. Currency, Silver, &c, &c; officials statement of Banks and Railways; list of new Bankrupts each week; business announcements of the leading merchants and manufacturers in the Dominion; all of which information is especially valuable to country merchants doing business with importers and manufacturers.

To advertisers, the TRADE REVIEW, from its extensive circulation alike East and West, offers advantages superior to those of any other Journal in Canada, as there is not a town or village in this country where the English is understood, to which it does not find its way.

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 50 cts. per bottle.

The Great English Remedy.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition, but a sure and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorised Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

SUGAR-COATED.

ARE a safe and reliable remedy in all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary people, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

J. H. GIBSON, M. D., Dunbarton, C. E.
C. E. COTTON, M. D., Cowansville.

SOOTHING SYRUP!

FOR CHILDREN TEETHING,

GREATLY facilitates the process of teething by softening the gums, reducing all inflammation—will allay ALL PAIN and spasmodic action, and is

SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Depend upon it, mothers, it will give rest to yourselves, and

Relief and Health to your Infants.

We have put up and sold this article for years, and CAN SAY IN CONFIDENCE AND TRUTH OF IT what we have never been able to say of any other medicine—NEVER HAS IT FAILED IN A SINGLE INSTANCE TO EFFECT A CURE, when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak of terms of commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "WHAT WE DO KNOW, after years of experience, and PLEDGE OUR REPUTATION FOR THE FULFILMENT OF WHAT WE HERE DECLARE. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper.

Sold by druggists throughout the world.

DIRECTORS—Hon. James Cockburn, (Speaker of the House of Commons of Canada.) Charles Perry, Esq., M. P., P. M. Grover, Esq., M. P., Henry Calcutt, Esq., H. C. Rogers, Esq., Col. A. T. H. Williams, M. P. P., John Burnham, Esq., Barrister, W. H. Scott, Esq., Mayor, Peterborough, J. Stephenson, Esq.

PRESIDENT—W. H. Scott, Esq.
SOLICITORS—Weller & Hatton.
MANAGING DIRECTOR—H. C. Rogers.
TREASURER—John Burnham.
SECRETARY—Eig. Pearse.

This Company is organized for the purpose of developing the mineral resources of the west half of lot number Twenty in Concession A, in the Township of Galway, County of Peterborough, in the Province of Ontario and Dominion of Canada, and for the purpose of mining, smelting and otherwise preparing for market, the ores of all kinds of metals and minerals, together with the acquisition, employment, and disposal of all lands mines, or ores, or granting to others the right to mine, smelt, or prepare for market, the ores of all metals and minerals that may be found of advatage to the interests of the Company.

The already acquired property of the Company, the west half of Lot Twenty, Concession A, Galway, is extremely rich in Lead, Iron Sulphate of Barytes, and Silver, quantities of each of which have already been taken by the promoters of the Company off this portion of the lot, which from the assays of Dr. Otway, show the following favorable results: Sulphur 23 per cent, Lead 17 per cent, Silver in Lead 180z 13dwt 8grs, to the Ton, proving beyond a doubt the great value of the property. The original owners of the property have already spent about one thousand dollars in opening up the mineral veins that intersect the Lot, and in pushing an adit or tunnel through a hill upon the property.

The property is situated on the Bobcaygeon Road, about 12 miles from Bobcaygeon, at which place communication can easily be obtained to Lindsay or Peterborough, thence by the P. H. L. and B. Railway to Port Hope. Ore or goods can thus be transferred at all seasons from the property to Port Hope, or vice versa at a cost not exceeding $5 per ton.

The original Proprietors ha e already conveyed the property to the Rev. Mark Burnham, of Ashburnham, in trust to be reconveyed by him to the Company when organized.

The Trustee of the Company has a perfect title to the said parcel of land so that no delay need occur in commencing operations, and an immediate return on the capital invested may be anticipated.

CANCERS CURED!

By a new, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay is required, until the cure is complete. The moment a cancer is discovered, it should be cured, as it will cost less and is more speedily cured than when of longer standing, and there is nothing to gain, and everything to lose by delay. What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, eye-lid or elsewhere, or small wart or sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given to parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. No money required in advance, and none until the cure is complete.

AYER'S
Sarsaparilla

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

And for the speedy cure of the following complaints: Scrofula and Scrofulous Affections, such as Tumors, Ulcers, Sores, Eruptions, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Blains, and all Skin Diseases.

OAKLAND, Ind., 8th June, 1866.

J. C. AYER & Co. Gents: I feel it my duty to acknowledge what your Sarsaparilla has done for me. Having inherited a Scrofulous infection, I have suffered from it in various ways for years. Sometimes it broke out in Ulcers on my hands and arms; sometimes it turned inward and distressed me at the stomach. Two years ago it broke out on my head and covered my scalp and ears with one sore, which was painful and loathsome beyond description. I tried many medicines and several physicians, but without much relief from any thing. In fact, the disorder grew worse. At length I was rejoiced to read in the Gospel Messenger that you had prepared an alterative (Sarsaparilla), for I knew from your reputation that any thing you made must be good. I sent to Cincinnati and got it, and used it till it cured me. I took it, as you advise, in small doses of a teaspoonful over a month, and used about three bottles. The sore and healthy skin soon began to form under the scab, which after a while fell off. My skin is now clear, and I know by my feelings that the disease has gone from my system. You can well believe that I feel what I am saying when I tell you, that I hold you to be one of the agencies of the age, and remain ever gratefully, Yours,

ALFRED R. TALLEY.

St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Dropsy.

Dr. Robert M. Preble writes from Salem, N. Y., 12th Sept., 1866, that he has cured an inveterate case of Dropsy, which threatened to terminate fatally, by the persevering use of our Sarsaparilla, and also a dangerous Malignant Erysipelas by large doses of the same; says he cures the common Erysipelas by it constantly.

Bronchocele, Goitre or Swelled Neck.

Reuben Sloan of Prospect, Texas, writes: "Three bottles of your Sarsaparilla cured me from a Goitre—a hideous swelling on the neck, which I had suffered from over two years."

Leucorrhœa or Whites, Ovarian Tumor, Uterine Ulceration, Female Diseases.

Dr. J. S. S. Channing, of New York City, writes, "I most cheerfully comply with the request of your agent in saying I have found your Sarsaparilla a most excellent alterative in the numerous complaints for which we employ such a remedy, but especially in Female Diseases of the Scrofulous diathesis. I have cured many in extensive cases of Leucorrhœa by it, and some where the complaint was caused by ulceration of the uterus. The ulceration itself was soon cured. Nothing within my knowledge equals it for these female derangements."

Edward B. Harrow, of Newbury, Ala., writes, "A dangerous ovarian tumor on one of the females in my family, which had defied all the remedies we could employ, has at length been completely cured by your Extract of Sarsaparilla. Our physician thought nothing but extirpation could afford relief, but he advised the trial of your Sarsaparilla as the last resort before cutting, and it proved effectual. After taking your remedy eight weeks no symptom of the disease remained."

Syphilis and Mercurial Disease.

NEW ORLEANS, 25th August, 1866.

DR. J. C. AYER: Sir, I cheerfully comply with the request of your agent, and report to you some of the effects I have realized with your Sarsaparilla.

I have cured with it, in my practice, most of the complaints for which it is recommended, and have found its effects truly wonderful in the cure of Venereal and Mercurial Disease. One of my patients had Syphilitic ulcers in his throat, which were consuming his palate and the top of his mouth. Your Sarsaparilla, steadily taken, cured him in five weeks. Another was attacked by secondary symptoms in his nose, and the ulceration had eaten away a considerable part of it, so that I believe the disorder would soon reach his brain and kill him. But it yielded to my administration of your Sarsaparilla; the ulcers healed, and he is well again, not a sore or pimple to show disfiguration to his face. A woman who had been treated for the same disorder by mercury was suffering from this poison in her bones. They had become so sensitive to the weather that on a damp day she suffered excruciating pain in her joints and bones. She, too, was cured entirely by your Sarsaparilla in a few weeks. I know from its formula, which your agent gave me, that this Preparation from your laboratory must be a great remedy; consequently, these truly remarkable results with it have not surprised me.

Fraternally yours, C. V. LARIMER, M. D.

Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint.

INDEPENDENCE, Preston Co., Va., 6th July, 1866.

DR. J. C. AYER: Sir, I have been afflicted with a painful chronic Rheumatism for a long time, which baffled the skill of physicians, and stuck to me in spite of all the remedies I could find, until I tried your Sarsaparilla. One bottle cured me in two weeks, and restored my general health so much that I am far better than before I was attacked. I think it a wonderful medicine. J. FRIAM.

Jules Y. Gutchell, of St. Louis, writes, "I have been afflicted for years with an affection of the Liver, which destroyed my health. I tried every thing, and every thing failed to relieve me; and I have been a broken-down man for some years from no other cause than derangement of the Liver. My beloved pastor, the Rev. Mr. Kopp, advised me to try your Sarsaparilla, because he said he knew you, and any thing you made was worth trying. By the blessing of God it has cured me, and has so purified my blood as to make a new man of me. I feel young again. The best that can be said of you is not half good enough."

Schirrus, Cancer Tumors, Enlargement, Ulceration, Caries and Exfoliation of the Bones.

A great variety of cases have been reported to us where cures of these formidable complaints have resulted from the use of this remedy, but our space here will not admit them. Some of them may be found in our American Almanac, which the agents below named are pleased to furnish gratis to all who call for them.

Dyspepsia, Heart Disease, Fits, Epilepsy, Melancholy, Neuralgia

Many remarkable cures of these affections have been made by the alterative power of this medicine. It stimulates the vital functions into vigorous action, and thus overcomes disorders which would be supposed beyond its reach. Such a remedy has long been required by the necessities of the people, and we are confident that this will do for them all that medicine can do.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the Relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced Stages of the Disease.

This is a remedy so universally known to surpass any other for the cure of throat and lung complaints, that it is useless here to publish the evidence of its virtues. Its unrivalled excellence for coughs and colds, and its truly wonderful cures of pulmonary disease, have made it known throughout the civilized nations of the earth. Few are the communities, or even families, among them who have not some personal experience of its effects—some living trophy in their midst of its victory over the subtle and dangerous disorders of the throat and lungs. As all know the dreadful fatality of these disorders, and as they know, too, the efficacy of this remedy, we need not do more than to assure them that it has now all the virtue that it did have when making the cures which have won so strongly upon the confidence of mankind.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold in Peterboro by Ormond & Gilmour, A. W. Kempt, and Wm Coulter. In Keene by A. Campbell, Campbell McNeil & Co., C. Britton, Lindsay, and all Medicine Dealers.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY IN CANADA.

MESSRS. Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq. Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve me cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once, which I felt through my whole system: at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

FURS! FURS!

CAUTION.

THE public are hereby cautioned to beware of purchasing Colored and Russian Mink for Canada Mink. The Canada is superior to any in the world, and is therefore the most valuable. This has induced wholesale dealers to imitate our Canada Mink, not only [illegible] ing Russian, but also by coloring United States Mink. The Canada costs more than double that of any other country, which enables dealers to make a large profit on the spurious article. Those buying Furs in Montreal or other places should beware least they get the inferior article for which they will no doubt have to pay full prices. Take care, therefore, for I have been shown articles purchased as genuine in Montreal, which I can certify were colored and of inferior quality.

Those who buy any article of my own manufacture, I will warrant to be genuine, of best quality, and best workmanship, and at lower prices than any wholesale dealer will supply the same article.

A call is respectfully solicited.

Poetry.

Punch on the Alabama Question.

An Original Poem for the Infant Minds of Master John and Miss Columbia.

How now, my dear children, it's always the way,
You can't be contented with innocent play;
But you wrangle and squabble, with tempers too high,
And then there's a scold, and a scuffle, and a cry.

What, are there no games you can take a delight in,
But sneering, and jibing, and scoffing, and fighting?
I'm weary of telling you, time and time,
That you're cousins, and therefore each quarrel's a crime.

John, do what she asks you, no angry replies,
You're older than she, and you should be more wise;
And Columbia, my dear, don't speak pettish and tart.
If he's surly sometimes, you've a place in his heart.

You two, well descended, well fed, and well taught,
You should set an example, yes, that's what you ought,
Remember how much on your conduct depends,
You're Christians and cousins—there, kiss and be friends.

Selections.

THE LOVER'S REVENGE.

BY DI FAIRFAX.

The facts obtained in the following story are strictly true. They were related to me by a gentleman who resided near the spot where they occurred, and who vouched for the accuracy. D. F.

One evening early in the rebellion, Laura Davis stood at the gate of her home on the banks of the Tennessee. The rays of the setting sun that flashed from the river, and illumined the pleasant plantation, lit up to glowing beauty her handsome face and dark, eager eyes, as she leaned forward to listen to the sound of approaching footsteps. In a moment a man appeared under the trees near the house, and she sprang forward to meet him.

"I am so glad to see you! that is, to see some one who can tell me the news. What has happened? Have the Yankees advanced?" she asked breathlessly.

"I do not know," he answered, with strange slowness in contrast with her impetuous words. "I have heard nothing since I last saw you."

"Have heard nothing!" she repeated contemptuously, "and you are a man and might have found out so easily! Joe Byrne, how can you stay at home so tamely, when your country calls on every man to defend her from these tyrants who would make us slaves!"

Byrne watched that handsome, defiant face with its burning eyes and scornful lips, and his dark features grew sinister with suppressed passion.

"And this is all your welcome!

You did not care to see me, only to see any one who could give you the gossip of the day.

"The gossip of the day!" she sneered. "You call the events that are occuring around us here gossip—you regard the great struggle before us perhaps as child's play?"

"No." he answered, "it is important enough, doubtless, but to me, Laura, even those questions are nothing compared to what lies nearest my heart."

"And what is that?"

"My love for you! Yes, Laura, I must urge my suit once more; tell me will you give me no hope?"

"And this was your errand here to-night!" she said scornfully.

"You come here to sigh about your own selfish hopes, when every man should think only of his country!"

"Your words are bitter, Laura. You will not listen to me, then?"

"No, Joe Byrne, neither now nor at any future time. I never loved you and now your indifference to your duty makes me——"

"Go on," he said, fiercely, as she paused.

—"Despise you!" And she turned haughtily away.

For a moment he looked at her, his arm contracted, his eyes blazing with anger; then he called her:

"Stay a moment Laura."

"Well?"

"Suppose I join the Confederate army, may I hope then you will be mine?"

"No," she answered, as she turned back. "I will make no promise even on those conditions; but though I will not marry you even then, I shall regard you as an honorable friend."

"A friend?" he repeated. "I do not want your friendship; I want your love—that or nothing."

"Then the sooner you leave me the better, I tell you I will never be yours but if you draw your sword to defend your country like a man, I will honor and respect you."

"But you will not marry me?"

"No! why ask so many times a useless question?"

"Then you love another!"

A deep flush swept up under Laura's dark skin, and for once her large eyes drooped. Her voice trembled as she replied:

"You have no right to ask."

"But I am answered," he said savagely."

"Your tell-tale confusion betrays your secret. I see that you scorn my love because you care for another man. I understand now why there is no hope for me, but I tell you Laura Davis, although I cannot make you love me, I will one day make you fear me. I am going to join the Union army."

Laura faced him, her eyes fairly blazing with scorn.

"What! recreant! traitor! you will betray your country and join her assassins!"

"I shall join the strongest force," he said, coolly. "I tell you, Laura, this fine plan of a Southern Confederacy will never succeed; the North is stronger and richer than the South; they will conquer you, and I shall be one of the conquerers."

Laura's face was white with anger.

"You are a coward!" she cried, indignantly. "Never insult me by contriving to speak to me again!"

"Never till you see me for mercy—never till you are in my power! I tell you I will have revenge for every insulting word you have uttered to-night. Until then farewell!"

He turned away, and Laura, with a burning desire to be a man and kill him on the spot, saw his powerful figure disappear down the winding path. She was an only child, indulged by her fond parents and obeyed by her slaves, until her haughty spirit could ill brook opposition or control. At the first breaking out of the rebellion she had espoused the Southern cause heart and soul, and was ready now to dare all or to die for what she mistakenly believed to be her country.

Byrne had been for a long time a suitor of hers, but Laura never liked him, although she did not know how entirely repugnant he was to her till chance threw her with a handsome young Kentuckian, and she learned with what intensity she could love.—This young man, Clarence Stuart, had spent but a few weeks under the same roof with Laura in the course of a Christmas pleasure trip, but in that brief time, impetuous in everything, she had given all her heart to the fair-haired, blue-eyed stranger.

Yet, ardently as she loved him, up to their last meeting Laura never knew whether her passion was returned or not. It is true, Clarence was very devoted to her, but he had learned in his northern education a grace of manner, and an ease of flattery, that, while to her it seemed to signify everything, might in reality mean nothing at all. Their last interview had been a very tender one. Laura blushed now when she thought of the one kiss he had pressed on her lips at parting. He had promised to come and see her in the spring. But since those pleasant days the rebellion had burst forth, and there was little time for pleasure trips or wooing.—Yes as the weeks passed away one after another, and she heard nothing from him, Laura's cheeks grew paler with a hidden anxiety, the cause of which no one suspected until Byrne touched upon it with his jealous question.

After that interview with Byrne, Laura saw him no more, though she heard that he had joined the northern army; nor did Clarence come to her. The weeks dragged away monotonously, except for the stirring news of victory and success that came to inspire the Southerners at home. Laura and her mother were alone now.—Mr. Davis, although past fifty, had gone forth to fight for his native State; and the days dragged away wearily to the two waiting women till the tide of war rolled near to their own door.

Then there was excitement enough. Union army was invading the State; and all around bands of bushwackers and guerrillas, the outskirts of the rival forces, were ravaging and destroying. Laura threw herself heart and soul into the contest. More than once her warnings saved rebel troops from destruction; and her home was a rendezvous for rebel conspirators. There was nothing she would not do to help on the cause; and many a daring trip of observation this slender girl made from which hardy man would have shrunk dismayed.

On one of these expeditions she had stolen down to reconnoitre a Union force. Through swamp and thicket she had made her way to the camp, and surprised at last the secret of its position. There it was, sheltered under a thick wood. She could see the white tents, and with practiced eye she estimated the numbers. Then, utterly worn out, she crouched under a tree for rest and brief refreshment, until darkness permitted her return. She was roused from a half doze by a step near her, and starting up beheld a Federal officer coming down a path towards the bush which concealed her. As her eyes rested upon his handsome face she grew deadly pale, and her heart almost ceased beating. Then, forgetting everything but her love, she started forward to meet him.

"Clarence Stuart!"

Hearing his name he turned towards the speaker, but did not recognize in that strange figure, with its short skirts and half military dress, the beauty of a year before.

"Did you call me?" he asked in some surprise.

"Yes. I am Laura Davis. Don't you remember me?"

A faint flush colored the young man's cheek, perchance at the remembrance of their parting.

"Miss Davis! How came you here?"

Laura's heart grew cold at the distant tone, and with a sudden remembrance of her position she faltered and trembled.

"Do you live near here?" he went on; "or have you lost your way?"

"No. I came out for a walk, that is all," she stammered.

"All?" he said curiously, his practised eye scanning her strange accoutrements. "This is a gloomy direction for a walk, Miss Laura. You wear an odd dress. Are you in the rebel army?"

Laura's cheeks flushed.

"I am with the South heart and soul, and you, Mr. Stuart—a Kentuckian—what right have you to wear a Yankee uniform?"

"I am in the Union army because I believe that to be the cause of the right and the truth," the young officer answered proudly. "But, Miss Davis, we will not discuss your views, except that I must insist on your explaining your errand here to my satisfaction."

"And if I refuse?"

"I should be sorry to incommode you, but I must do my duty."

"And that will be?"

"To detain you here until what information you may have acquired in your walk is valueless."

"And this what I have heard—that Yankees fight women!"

"Pardon me, Miss Davis, we do not fight them. But my time is precious, will you give me your word of honor not to tell where our camp is for twenty-four hours, or will you remain here a prisoner, for that length of time?"

Laura was a very proud woman. Although her heart was breaking at the cool indifference of the man, she would have died rather than betrayed her secret. And after a brief pause for thought, she decided it was best to give the required parole, rather than be subjected to the insult of an imprisonment. With rather a bad grace she signed the paper Clarence hastily prepared for her, and then turned to go.

"I hope you forgive my seeming rudeness," Clarence said, kindly; "and let us part friends."

"I have no friends among those who wear that uniform," she said, coldly.

"We may never meet again," he urged, gently. "You know I go to the hazard of battle; won't you shake hands?" and he held out his hand frankly.

Laura was very pale. Those half mournful words had gone to her heart; but mistaken as her patriotism was, it was dearer to her now than any earthly thing, and she answered, faintly:

"No, Clarence Stuart, I have sworn eternal hatred to your cause, and all concerned in it; henceforth we are strangers."

He bowed coldly, and with a heart full of anguish, Laura turned away.

If she had hated the Union cause before, from this time Laura detested it with tenfold bitterness, and threw herself even more recklessly than ever into the endeavor to befriend the rebels. All hope in life seemed to her to have fled from the time that she knew that Clarence Stuat no longer loved her, and was enrolled in the hostile army. Life had grown very indifferent to her. She exposed herself recklessly on all sorts of daring expeditions caring little if she lived or died, wishing often that she might be killed, if her death could serve her country.

All sorts of stories are told of her perilous adventures at this time. She soon gained the reputation of being the most faithful and successful spy in that region of country. It is even said that more than once, in a guerrilla skirmish, she carried a musket and fought with the best. An opportunity came very soon for very permanent usefulness to the rebel cause.

There had been a ferry near her house, but the boats were carried away by a raid of Union troops, and communication between the opposite banks of the river became difficult and dangerous. Laura at once resolved upon establishing a ferry that should run only for the benefit of her own friends. She sent for one of her slaves, an old man, whose feeble health had kept him faithful while others had fled.

"Pompey," she said, "you know these miserable Yankees have said you would be free if you would go with them, but I will make you really free if you will do as I ask you."

"Deed, missus, I se do anything missis wants, but don't send poor Pompey away."

"No, Pompey, I will not. I will make you free, but I will give you wages all the time, and you shall work for me."

"Tank de massis."

And then Laura went on to explain her plan. Pompey had a light canoe which had escaped destruction. In this he was to cross the river, and build for himself a hut in the bushes on the opposite bank; there he was to live, with his canoe concealed under the hill. When she summoned him with a blast on the plantation horn, he was to come over and take across those she placed in his care, or if called on his side by a peculiar whistle, he was to ferry over those who belonged to the rebel service.

Before many days this ferry was in successful operation, to the intense annoyance of some federal troops, who thus several times lost important captures. Laura heard of their wrath and vows of vengeance, but she laughed at their threats, and night after night, in storm or danger, went down to the river bank at the risk of her life.

At that time she had news again of her former lover Byrne. He was raiding through the country, the captain of a desperate band of outlaws and deserters, who made the Union name an excuse for every species of robbery and oppression. She only laughed at every warning, and continued her perilous enterprise.

One evening in late November, when it was cold and dark, a near storm threatening she wrapped her cloak around her and prepared for her evening's duty. Mrs. Davis, who viewed her daughter's whole course with terror, but knew her remonstrances were utterly useless, was so overcome with some recent stories of the near approach of the Union army, that she could not forbear one last appeal.

"Laura! Laura! don't go to-night!" she said. "It is cold and stormy. Oh! my darling child, don't go away!"

"I must, mother. I have reason to expect there will be fugitives escaping from the Yankee troops. I must be there to save them."

"But my dear daughter, Yankee troops are so near they may be there, too."

"I can't help it. Would you have me desert my friends for any paltry consideration of personal danger?"

"Yes, I would! Laura, I am an old woman. Your father is away, and I have no one but you. Do you not think you owe me some duty? My child! my child! stay with me this one night?"

For a moment Laura hesitated; but just at this she caught the sound of a shrill whistle.

"Hark! they are calling me now. I must go, mother. Kiss me, quick! Good-bye!"

She was away, darting down the path, out into the wild and stormy night. There was a full moon, so that the darkness was not very intense, although black clouds were hurrying across the heavens. Yet ever and anon these clouds would break away, and the clear, silver moonlight would stream out, illuminating the dark river, the tempest tossed trees and the group of soldiers on the bank.

Laura hastened to them, wondering who they could be. It was only when she stood among them, that, by the pale moonbeams, she caught sight of the glittering buttons of the Federal uniform and saw Joe Byrne's pale, sinister face scowling upon her.

"Yes, Laura Davis, I have come back," he said—"come back, as I told you I should, a conquerer. And you need not try to escape!" and he laid his heavy hand on her shoulder. "You are my prisoner now! Here, men, bind her hands."

"Traitor and coward!" cried Laura; "you come to fight a woman!"

"When a woman does a man's work, as you have done, she must take a man's punishment," he answered, as with a strong cord he fastened her hands together.

"Now, young lady, tell us where is the horn with which you summon over your black ally."

"I will not tell you."

"You refuse?"

"I do."

"You know the penalty of your obstinacy?"

"I shall not tell you where it is," she replied, calmly. "You may kill me, if you choose, but I will not betray my country as you have."

The fitful moonbeams lit up her handsome face, with its brilliant dark eyes and firm set lips. Byrne looked at her with craving eagerness, and then coming close to her whispered in her ear:

"Be mine, and you need not tell where the horn is; otherwise I cannot save you. Those men are inflamed with wine and blood; they are hungry for your life.—Last night you helped across the river the men who had tortured to death one of their comrades——" They have vowed vengeance——"

At this moment, one of the men who had been searching the bank cried out:

"Here, captain—here's the horn. I found it under a stone."

Laura grew a shade paler. "Don't use it!" she cried; "for God's sake don't hurt poor Pompey!"

And she turned away her head as she heard the long, echoing sound ring out on the night air.

A few moments of comparative silence, and the little canoe shot out from the opposite bank. As it came nearer, Laura could see the old negro's head white in the moonlight, with its thick, silvered wool.

"Captain Byrne, if you have the heart of a man, don't hurt the poor defenceless fellow. It was all my fault."

"It is too late!"

And indeed, at this second the sharp crack of a rifle cut the air. Laura saw the well known features of the faithful slave convulsed in mortal agony, as the oars dropped from his nerveless grasp. The soldiers were by him in an instant, and while some secured the boat, others tossed the still quivering body into the water.

"Let this be a warning to you," said Byrne. "Now be mine, or your punishment will be more horrible than you can guess"

"Never! Cowards who can kill a defenceless man and threaten a woman, I defy you all!"

And with a sudden bound, Laura freed herself from the clasp of the soldier who guarded her, and sprang up the bank.

"Quick! Catch her! Shoot her down!" cried Byrne hoarse with rage.

A volley of shots followed the flying figure, and with a convulsive spring she sank to the ground, the life-blood welling from a mortal wound. Yes, her lover's revenge was complete, and that brave though mistaken heart had ceased to beat.

'My friend,' said one man to another, 'I see your hair is getting quite gray.' 'Yes,' answred he, 'old father time has been sweeping up the years around me, and the dust settled on my head.'

A printer, meddling with the verdict of a coroner's jury, struck out a comma, after the word 'appoplexy,' making it read thus —'Deceased came to his death by excessive drinking, producing appoplexy in the minds of the jury.'

'No, Catharine,' said Patrick to his wife, 'you never catch a lie coming out of my mouth.' 'You may well say that,' replied Kate, 'they fly out so fast that nobody can catch 'em.'

Bridget, said a mistress to her Irish servant, where's the gridiron? An'sure, ma'am, I'e just after giving it to my sister's own cousin, O'Flaherty; the thing's so full of holes it's no good at all.

You had better ask for manners than money, said a finely-dressed gentleman to a beggar who asked for alms. I asked for what I thought you had the most of, was the cutting reply.

A lady having accidently broken a smelling bottle, her husband, who was very petulant said to her, 'I declare, my dear, everything that belongs to you is more or less broken. True, replied the lady, for even you are a little cracked.'

Jessie, said a staunch old Cameronian to his daughter, it's a very solemn thing to be married. 'I ken that weel, father,' replied the sensible lassie, but it's a great deal solemner not to be.

A Scotch duchess was present at a charity school questioning. 'What is the wife of a King?' she asked. 'A Queen,' was the answer. 'Of an Emperor?' 'An Empress' 'The wife of a duke?' 'A drake'

An itinerant lecturer, holding forth in a remote Scotch village, happened to make use of the word "phenomenon." Fancying, however, that the education of his hearers was not likely to have been such as to make them equal to 'hard words,' he proceeded to enlighted their understanding in the following style: 'But maybe, my freens, ye dunna ken what a phenomenon may be. Weel, then, I'll tell ye. Ye've seen a coo (cow.) Ye've seen an apple tree. Well, an apple tree's nae a phenomenon, neither is a coo; but gin ye see a coo ganging up the apple tree, tail topmost, to pu apples, that wad be a phenomenon.'

THE CLAIM OF Mrs. MACKENZIE.

Our readers are aware that during the late sitting of the Legislature of Ontario, on the motion of Mr. McKellar a committee was struck, to whom was referred the petition of the widow of the late Wm. Lyon Mackenzie, claiming certain sums due her late husband, which were recommended to be paid by a committee of the late Parliament of Upper Canada in 1835. In the report, the latter committee not only recommended that Mr. Mackenzie be paid the sums disbursed by him while on his mission to England on public matters, but also his wages during the period that he was illegally expelled from the House from 1832 to 1834. On the presentation of the report by Mr. McKellar, the chairman, he alluded to the important and disinterested services of Mr. Mackenzie to the country, and urged the appropriation of $4,000 to the sole use and benefit of his widow, not only as a slight acknowledgement of those services, but as a matter of justice and right to public men. The report evoked considerable of a discussion, some vindicating and others deprecating the appropriation, till finally the report was adopted by a narrow majority—the vote standing 35 to 31.

The name of Mackenzie is intimately associated with the rebellion of 1837–38; and one member gives as a reason for voting against the report, that many of his constituents having suffered trouble and hardship in consequence of the rebellion, if he voted for the grant, his people would give him the right about in going home. But where, we would ask, was the constituency or the neighborhood in Canada that did not suffer the sad effects of that rebellion. Many had to leave a snug home and endure the inconvenience of large bodies of men huddled together in sleighs and houses at an inclement season of the year. Many valuable lives were lost, much valuable property destroyed, business of every kind paralyzed, no specie payments, public and private credit destroyed, and the bulk of the people in utter dismay as to the end of the fearful drama. A reign of terror set in and continued for about a year, such as few not under it, at this distant period can realize. Mackenzie is blamed for all this, and many will yet affirm that he was the worst public man ever U. C. saw. It must be confessed, however, that these denouncers are either ignorant or so bigoted, that their prejudices obscure their judgment. Tried in the opinion of the unbiassed and enlightened, his public life and actions place him far ahead of any public man in Canada for patriotism and self-denying labors in securing the blessing of British Constitutional Government in this colony. Although detested by the ruling faction at the seat of government, never was a man so popular in the oldest, most populous and wealthiest county in the province. In 1828 he was returned to parliament for this county (York), but in 1831 was expelled for a supposed libel on the parliament, which appeared in his paper, the Colonial Advocate. He advocated, while in the House, nothing but what was constitutional, but in so doing he trod on the corns of many members of the Executive as well as of the House. He pleaded the cause of the people and the people sustained him. His expulsion took place on the 12th of December, a men also was held on January 2nd, 1832. Mr. Street a supporter of the Family Compact opposed him, but he receiving only one vote, out of 2,000 persons present, abandoned the hopeless contest. Mackenzie was triumphantly returned, and the electors in commemoration of the event presented him with a gold medal valued at $250. He entered York with a triumphal procession accompanied with 50 sleighs and over a thousand persons, one flag bore the inscription, "The Liberty of the Press," another, "Mackenzie and the People." No sooner had he entered the House than the tory party raised the question of his re-expulsion; some doubt existing about it, the debate was kept up all day and at 9 o'clock next morning it was decided to expel him a second time by a vote of 27 to 19. On the 30th January an election was held for a member for the County of York in place of the expelled member.—Messrs. Small and Washburn appeared as opponents to Mr. Mackenzie, but the vote stood at the close, Mackenzie, 628; Small, 96; Washburn, 23. Never in the history of this country has there been such determination of a constituency to elect a man as its representative, and never has a deliberative body of men used more arbitrary and unconstitutional means to reject a representative than did the majority of the Assembly at that day. But as in all similar cases, their attempts to crush an opponent only made him more popular, and created a sympathy for him as a martyr. Finding his repeated attempts to secure something like British rights in a British colony futile, he in concert with, and by the advice of his friends, decided upon laying their grievances before the King and Imperial Parliament. His opponents becoming so bitter had actually formed a design of taking his life, which was attempted but resulted only in a severe beating.—He finally went to England, had an interview with Lord Goderich, then Colonial Secretary, presented the petition he had brought signed by over 20,000 people, and laid before his Lordship the serious condition of public affairs in Canada. While in England he was again expelled from the House, but as an offset he had the satisfaction to witness the dismissal of the Attorney and Solicitor General for their conduct in illegally expelling him. Lord Goderich offered Mr. Mackenzie the half of the management of the post office worth about $7,500 a year, which Mr. Mackenzie with his characteristic disinterestedness declined. He advocated that the control of the post office and its emoluments should be in the hands of the provincial government, and those managing it should account for the revenue it produced. Shortly after his return the Town of York was created a City under its present name, and he was elected the first Mayor of the capital of U. C., and the first Mayor elected in the Province. Notwithstanding these temporary successes obtained over the ruling power, he and his party were reduced to the anamolous condition in a free country of a large majority being ruled by a miserable faction backed by vice regal concurrence, whose chief power lay in their reckless adoption of unconstitutional measures to carry their nefarious designs. All law and precedence were laid aside by them, and getting worse by their repeated success so aroused the bulk of the inhabitants of the country that the rebellion followed.—Had it not been for some unaccountable blunders on the part of the disaffected, they would have succeeded in crushing their opponents. It was fortunately otherwise and government, bad though it was at the time, prevailed in place of anarchy and all its evils. Mr. Mackenzie and his followers did as any other Britons would do in similar circumstances. No Tory party would have borne so long the deprival of their birthright in a British colony, and they that decry the course pursued by the Reformers of 1837, should sit down and carefully consider what they would have done under similar circumstances. The truth is that Mr. Mackenzie was head and shoulders above any politician and statesman in Canada at that period. He was far ahead of the times, yet every measure which he advocated then has been granted to us now. It was a fearful sacrifice to plunge the country into civil war to obtain rights that were guaranteed to every part of the British empire, but it seems it had to be made. It is like having to submit to a painful surgical operation to save the life of the body. The blessings of liberty and constitutional government which we enjoy to day in Canada were hastened by the unflinching, uncompromising conduct of Mackenzie. It is but a small acknowledgment indeed to give this public recognition of what the country owes to so sterling a man.

The observations of the Secretary, Hon. M. C. Cameron, during the debate, show how fearfully political prejudice will overcome the judgment of an intelligent man.—We cannot suppose that a Canadian in his position should have missed reading the life of, to him perhaps, this "detested" man, and yet he seems to have risen from the perusal with a full conviction that he was a wicked, troublesome, dangerous man. We blush to think that we have a member of the Government and Parliament of Ontario who would say that it is a question whether our present constitution was a boon!!! It is true he qualifies another form of Government with those all important ifs. It is a shame to have such a man holding such sentiments in our Government, and the sooner he gives place to a friend of our constitution the better.

UNITED STATES.

The arrangements for the impeachment of President Johnson are progressing. The articles are several, 9 or 10, but may be summed up in one or two: dismissing Mr. Stanton, and appointing Mr. Thomas. The senate has been constituted a court for the purpose and have taken the necessary oath to try him impartially. But the matter will not be so easily settled; there are some who think he had the right to dismiss Mr. Stanton, but perhaps had not the right to appoint Mr. Thomas in his stead. This will be a memorable trial in the history of our cousins. We fondly hope that they will act like men during the whole trial, and give the enemies of liberal government no cause for condemnation of their acts. At present it appears more of a political squabble than a desire to maintain the constitution.

AUCTION SALES.—Mr. A. McNeil will sell a valuable lot of farm stock, implements, &c., at the residence of Mr. Thos. Parrington, Downer's Corners, Otonabee, on Tuesday, 17th instant. He will also sell at the residence of Mr. Geo. Wood, lot 11, 1st concession of South Monaghan, on Monday, 23rd instant.

Persecution with a Vengeance.

WHO ARE THE FRIENDS OF THE BURLEIGH ROAD SETTLERS?

We have once and again informed our readers of the cause of so much attention to the Reeve of Burleigh ever since the general election. He differed from the editor of the Review in politics, and also from many of the magnates of his co-religionists. Mr. Carroll, and his father before him, have been reformers, and a Reform Government sent Mr. Carroll, as its agent to this part first.—Just before the last election contest, the editor of the Review, then Mr. Cargoll's intimate friend, called on Mr. Carroll and endeavored—first by flattery, then by threats—to induce or compel him to support the Combination. Mr. Carroll has given our readers the history of this already. The Editor of the Review next assumes the air of the Father of the Inquisition of the dark ages, and tells Mr. C. that if he does not do his bidding what the consequences will be. The poor political bigot next joins with the Clique in the celebrated Sunday politico, religious meeting, to crush the man who dared to think for himself in politics. All this persecution because, forsooth, Mr. Carroll chose to think for himself. But, to cap the climax, we have been informed on good authority that our Members have lent their aid to the same sort of work. They have tried their influence with the Government to get him removed from the Crown Land Agency, but failed; J. Sandfield would not lend himself to the Tory tactics of removing any man from office for falsely alleged action, indeed for any conscientious political course of action. Now comes the matter that concerns the people of Burleigh. We are told that, failing to get his removal, these same Representatives sought to prevent the Government undertaking any improvement on the Burleigh Road. These are the friends of liberty of thought and action; these are the friends of progress, and of the advancement of the interests of the back settlers. Men who have joined to crush the free action of their fellow citizen, and because there was too much of the spirit of independence and liberty to overcome, next turn their attention to his removal, failing in this they will injure a whole settlement, stop all public works, and let the settlers get out and man as best they can. What do Tories care if they can but punish an opponent? Will the settlers of Burleigh be able to appreciate the disinterested motives of the bigots who cannot allow every man to vote and act as his conscience directs, for fear of persecution. The tactics of John A. and of the old Post Master General have been improved on by their pupils, but there is too much old reform principles in J. Sandfield to be guilty of aiding in such dirty work.

IMPORTANT DECISION.

The corporation of Burleigh lately brought several actions against parties who had been cutting timber on road allowances.—The court of Queen's Bench has just decided that the timber on the road allowances belongs to the Municipality, and that trespass will be for the cutting. In one of the cases the cutting of three trees cost trespassers over £50. In another of the cases, where the trees were cut in the Northern Division of Burleigh, the Judge at the trial directed a non suit on the ground that the survey was illegal, but the court above has ordered a new trial for mis-direction. From this the court appears to hold that the survey of the Northern Division of Burleigh is legal. The Corporation in pressing these suits has now to put an end to the question of their right to the timber on the concession lines. A former decision declared that the Government had no right to order a resurvey of the whole Township, and in consequence an act was applied for to establish the resurvey. The application was not granted, the Government holding, we believe, that the matter of establishing a survey should be left to themselves. We understand that the Judges have decided that the corporation of Burleigh has a right to collect damages for timber cut on the road allowances in the Northern Division.

We understand that a protest has been entered against the election of Mr. D. R. Castiday, as councillor for Burleigh, and that by a man who is at present under contract to the Municipal Corporation of Burleigh, &c. Without giving our opinion in any way on the question of Mr. Castiday's right to the seat he occupies, we can see how disinterested the contractor is; he wishes, perhaps, to have a word and vote in settlement of his own accounts. There may be something to find fault with in a councillor living so far from the Municipality; but there is cause for fault-finding in most Municipalities, and if the Editor of the Review would spend as much time in searching after grievances at his ancient capital as he does in hunting up Cock and Bull stories from Burleigh, he would have reason to write as hard things of his friends as he has been wont to say in private of them. Very honest men get astray sometimes, and if all men are to be persecuted for their errors and maligned for ingratitude, we think the persecutors of Mr. Carroll would not get free.

RAILROAD ACCIDENT.—On Friday morning last, as the train from Port Hope to Lindsay was within about a mile and a half from Millbrook, through a broken rail the passenger car got off the track, and the coupling breaking, the car turned over completely down a bank about 20 feet. Our townsman, Mr. T. G. Hazlitt, was on board and got slightly bruised, we are glad to hear not seriously. All have great reason to be thankful that it did not happen at some place where the results would have been more serious.

THE NEW MILL.—We are glad to learn that Mr. Dickson's new building on his race has been leased for a long term and filled up with first-rate machinery, by the new firm of Munro & Dawson. Mr. Munro is long and favorably known to the community as a miller, and we augur for him a fair share of the "gristing" business of Peterborough. The new mill is christened the Ontario Mill. See advertisement in another column.

THE REUNION.—The Reunion in connection with the Grammar School Literary society came off last Friday evening, and was a complete success. The Hall was crowded, and the performances were all that could be desired, doing great credit to those who took part in them. They netted over $80.

Those who desire to take out tavern and saloon Licenses will remember that Mr. Forty is appointed by the government of Ontario to grant them. Mr. White is an officers of the Dominion, we believe.

THE QUARTER SESSIONS.

Owing to the continued indisposition of Judge Boucher, there was no County Court held on Tuesday. The Court of General Quarter Sessions was held by a Bench of Magistrates. Messrs. Chambers, Clanton, Edwards and White were present. Messrs. Clanton and Edwards presided, respectively. Only four cases came before the Court.

The first was an appeal against a conviction made by His Worship the Mayor of Peterborough, wherein Lewis McGregor was fined $50 and costs for selling liquor without License. The Jury gave a verdict for the Respondent, thereby sustaining the conviction. Mr. Dennistoun for Appellant, Mr. Hutton for Respondent.

The next case was a similar one, the same Appellant and Respondent, but the Jury came into Court and said there were no prospects of their agreeing. They were accordingly discharged.

Joseph Howard, an elderly looking man, was arraigned for stealing a quantity of firewood from Robert Renfrew, selling the wood and appropriating the money for his own use. It happened in evidence that the prisoner was employed by the Prosecutor, and authorized to dispose of wood only to certain parties named—that he had sold wood to others, received the money, and for which the Prosecutor affirmed he had made no returns. In reply the Prisoner stated that there was a running account between the Prosecutor and himself not yet settled. The Jury believing a doubt existed as to the case being bona fide larceny, rendered a verdict of not guilty.

Lambert Stevens pleaded guilty to assulting a woman, Mrs. Murray, in the Township of Dummer, and was fined one dollar and costs.

Maurice Cashman, who had been committed for not finding sureties to keep the peace, was discharged.

The Grand Jury reported favorably upon the condition of the Gaol and Court House, expressing however regret that so many insane persons were obliged to be confined in gaol for want of accommodation in the Lunatic Asylum.

At about 7 o'clock, the business having been got through with, the Court adjourned to the 2nd day of April next, at 11 a. m.

BELMONT COUNCIL.

Council met at Garrison's School House, on Saturday, 29th February. Present—P. Pearce, Esq., Reeve; Porter Preston, Esq., Messrs. A. W. Dafoe, and W. E. Young, Councillors.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

On motion of Mr. Preston, seconded by Mr. Dafoe, Mr. Romain's bill amounting to $21 29, for printing binding, &c., was ordered to be paid.

On motion of Mr. Young, seconded by Mr. Preston, the Auditors' report for 1867 was received and adopted.

Mr. J. S. W Ihanson reported that he had taken twenty saw logs off the 6th con. line, between lots 11 and 17, for which he agreed to pay 10 cents per log to the Municipality.

On motion of Mr. Dafoe, seconded by Mr. Preston, the clerk was instructed to get one hundred copies of the detailed statement of the auditors' report for 1867 printed.

On motion of Mr. Dafoe, seconded by Mr. Young, the clerk was instructed to get one hundred copies printed of a By-law, appointing Township officers for the year 1868.

On motion of Mr. Young, seconded by Mr. Dafoe, Mr. Joseph Doupe was heard before the council.

On motion of Mr. Dafoe, seconded by Mr. Preston, the collector was paid two dollars for expenses incurred in procuring legal advice, in regard to sale of personal property for taxes in arrear.

A By-law appointing Municipal officers for the present year, and a By-law, appointing a public prosecutor for this Municipality under the provisions of the Temperance Act of 1864, were carried through their several stages and passed.

Council adjourned.

TRUTH vs. FICTION.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—A well known gentleman, donning hoops, petticoat, and veil appears in the column of the Review in the guise and under the name of Bessie. This person, like the ostrich, has repeatedly endeavoured by hiding his head in the sand of a fictitious name, to escape detection, but with a similar result. Like that far-famed bird, or one still better known, his head appears to be the most insignificent portion of him. However, the beautiful Hermaphrodite, like an amazon of old, gallantly advance to the charge, and with arrows dipped in gall, venom, and falsehood, threatens dire destruction to the Reeve and Council of Burleigh. The allegations made by this charming brunette against these unfortunates, of corruption, &c., have been so often and so satisfactorily refuted, on the Burleigh road and in presence of the young damsel friends, as to require no fresh contradiction; these are nothing but the candid kale re-hashed—a new edition of vilification and slander. Her champions, now so blatant and so persevering in the assertion and spread of falsehood, when in the presence of the maligned parties, and of the electors, are silent; or at best, after gasping out a few incoherent and stuttering statements, sink into their seats, abashed at their own brazen impudence—Now like howling wolves, then they are as lambs. If there is any truth in the maxim that the voice of the people is the supreme law, then surely are the right men in the right place, as they have been time and again returned by large majorities of the electors, who ought to be best posted as to the merits of the case. But it is useless to reason with Bessie, she will still continue to throw dirt, to assert that black is white, and to advance as her only reason that unanswerable argument of her sex—"it is because it is." Another shaft is let fly at the auditors. Without doubt one of those gentlemen, for his own amusement and that of, some friends, did chaff Bessie to her hearts content, but simple and credulous as he believed her to be, he never for a moment imagined her gull enough to swallow all the gammerson so freely administered—he never could believe a laughing jest could be brought forward as a serious assertion. As to the other auditor, and his ability to take the declaration, he would most likely refer the gentle creature to her bosom friend, the Editor of the Review, as a notable precedent, and a remarkable example of how to dodge an inconvenient declaration. Bessie is evidently something of a vixen, and throws stones without any scruple, although no glass to break has been discovered, this she dealer is deserving of some reward for her total want of conscience, and superb talents for mendacity. To outlie, where all he so well, surely entitles her to a superior order of merit—say a leather medal, or a necklace of Homœopathic pills. Meantime, her much coveted victims, conscious of integrity of conduct, laugh at her futile assults—her forlorn hope; and with rectitude as an antidote are safe from her poisonous guilt. Before making our adieu to Bessie, let us become more intimate, let us "have a little more day light in." A suspiciously cloven hoof protrudes from her bloomerlike pantaloons, and her waterfall having got awry, reveals something much resembling the skull of a worthy doctor. The voice is the voice of an angel, but her veil being raised discloses the unmistakeable phiz of an—of the Editor of the Review, who stands revealed in all the glory of his virgin alias.

PUSSY.

TORONTO UNIVERSITY.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—To undertake to write a history of the establishment and progress of the Toronto University is a task of no ordinary magnitude, and must be attended with feelings of joy, sadness and regret. One is delighted at the far seeing policy and patriotism of its projectors, at so early a date establishing a munificent endowment in the way of setting apart a large quantity of wild lands for the superior education for the people. And then when we learn of the reckless and wanton waste and misapplication of the funds of this valuable legacy throughout its history, no wonder if we feel sad at this prodigacy, and regret that men, whose position ought to have shielded them from even a suspicion of mal-appropriation of the trust they should have religiously guarded, should be found to be so unfaithful. Not only does the early history of the endowment furnish proofs of gross negligence on the part of its managers, but positive alienation of it, and that too by the highest dignitaries in the province, thereby frustrating the praiseworthy designs of its founders.

When the king sanctioned the proposed grant of land, he wished the administrator of Government of the Province, Mr. Russell, to consult the members of the Executive Council, the Judges and Law Officers of the Crown, and to report to the king, in what manner and to what extent, a portion of the waste lands of the Crown might be appropriated and made productive towards the formation of a fund for the education of the youth of the province in the different branches of liberal knowledge.

On the 1st December, 1798, the Executive Council reported to Mr. Russell, that an appropriation of 500,000 acres or ten townships, after deducting the Crown and Clergy sevenths, would be a sufficient fund for the establishment and maintainance of the royal foundation of four Grammar Schools and a University, and that the proposed School fund when received be applied for the erections of the necessary buildings, the payment of the salaries of the masters and for the keeping the buildings in repair, &c. They also reported that the towns of Cornwall, Kingston, Niagara and Sandwich as the proper places for the four Schools, and York as the most proper place for the University.

It is noticeable that in the address of the Legislature, asking the king for sanctioning an appropriation of lands for the higher branches of learning, they propose the establishment of a "respectable Grammar School in each district," and for a fund or foundation for the purposes contemplated. In reply to the king's request, they report only for four Grammar Schools and the University—two of which they report should go into operation immediately, and the other two, at Sandwich and Cornwall, when those towns were sufficiently advanced to call for their establishment. They recommended that one half of the endowment should be for the four schools and the other half for the University. It may be questioned whether from the nature of endowment it was contemplated to sell the lands set apart at all or whether they were not rather to be leased so that the funds might be available for all time to come. For 20 years the lands were totally unproductive, so that the Grammar Schools had to be supported by a direct grant from the public chest. In 1808 an act was passed by the Legislature establishing a Grammar School in each district, which had to be supported in other ways than from the lands set apart for the purpose. In 1819 a committee of the Executive Council reported that no traces of answer to the report of the Council of the 1st December, 1798, could be found in the office, and as there appeared some doubt as to the precise nature of the appropriation, they recommended that the Governor should call the attention of His Majesty's Government to a formal sanction to sell, lease grant and dispose of the 500,000 acres of land for the purpose of establishing a University, as provision for district schools was not, by them, thought necessary out of the funds, their establishment and maintainance having been already provided for by the Legislature, and that in order to construct the necessary buildings the sum of £10,000 would be required and an endowment of £4,000 per annum for the payment of salaries, and that a commission should permanently attend with large powers to sell and lease the land and manage its revenues under the direction of the Executive Government. It was also considered "that it would conduce much to the importance and utility of the projected University if its constitutions should be by a royal charter." Here we have first a proposal by the originators of the measure to have established in every district a Grammar School. Secondly by a proposition to establish but four and that between these four and the proposed University the entire appropriation should be divided. Thirdly, we have in twenty years after the first move, when the population of the province did not exceed 145,000, a determination to start the University and to sell the original appropriation, for the purpose of the University alone, urging that as provision had been made for the support of the Grammar Schools, the whole should be made available for the University. It would appear that the object now of the Executive Council was not for the advancement of general learning through the Grammar Schools, but the carrying out of some scheme of which the people generally would not be interested. To talk of a University when the population was so inconsiderable, and when so few students could be found to avail themselves of it, appeared ridiculous. But the key to this enigma is found in the fact that the then Rector of York, as member of the Executive Council and the leading spirit in it, saw in the projected University a means of carrying out a favorite plan of his, in monopolising the University for the special benefit of the English Church. He saw or pretended to see that if he could secure the control of the University that the interests of that church would be prodigiously advanced, and having resolved of securing the coveted prize, he, with his usual tact, inoculated all around him with similar views of the value and importance of at once carrying out their plans. Accordingly we find that the project was communicated to leading prelates in England, and Lord Bathurst, then secretary of the colonies accompanied with the most astonishing statements of the religious statistics as to the religion of the great majority of the people in Upper Canada, and in 1826 Dr. Strachan was deputed by the party who acted with him, to proceed to England to lay their designs before the leading party of the church, and to solicit in person from His Majesty's Ministers the transfer of the charter of the People's College to the Church of England in Canada. But before he could possibly hope to succeed in so daring an object, he found it necessary to employ a little duplicity—to use the mildest term we think of—which he did in this wise.—He communicated with Lord Bathurst, intimating his intentions of demanding a charter of the Canadian University for the exclusive use of the Church of England, and in order to pave the way for so extraordinary a request sends in a petition in which the following passages appear:—"That the very little progress made by the other denominations compared with the Church of England and the very recent establishment of their scanty congregations has generally created in the minds of the people a veneration for it as the established form of worship, a light in which it has always been presented to the inhabitants of the Province from their earliest years. Such is now the state of the Province, and the desire for religious instructions according to the forms and discipline of the Church of England, that many intelligent persons are of opinion that along the greater part of the main road passing from one extremity of the Province to the other, a distance of nearly 600 miles, a church might be erected and a clergyman profitably placed at the distance of every ten miles, and this exclusive of the parishes already established." The whole of the petition abounds with similar statements as to the superiority and ascendancy of the Church of England in Canada. On his arrival in England in 1826, he solicited contributions for the University, and the influence of leading men in the church in obtaining an exclusive charter. He published a pamphlet in London entitled, "An appeal to the friends of religion in behalf of the University of Upper Canada," in which he distinctly states that it would be a missionary college for the education of missionaries of the Church of England, and that in establishing this University he said that ultimately the great portion of the people of the Province would be members of the Church of England. From the Society for the propogation of the Gospel in foreign parts he claimed assistance on the ground of his "having been instrumental in establishing a scheme in Canada by which the education of the whole population is virtually under the direction of the Church." He informed them that there were in this Province "300,000 British Protestants.' But it was to the Under Secretary of State that he submitted the most startling information and statistics. This was done in the way of a religious chart which he drew up and submitted, an abstract of which I will give again,

Meantime, I am yours, &c.,

Peterboro, March, 1868. J. E.

The following communication has been received for some time. Perhaps it is yet in good time for those for whom it is intended.

A RETROGRADE MOVEMENT.

To the Editor Examiner.

Sir,—We noticed in a late issue of your paper, a somewhat pointed and loudly called for comment on the action of the sarans of the County Council in withdrawing the pittance from the Grammar Schools. We are inclined to impute they act not so much to illiberality as to a want of appreciation of a liberal education, perhaps both enter the composition. However, the act is very suggestive in its nature, and intelligent people will draw their own conclusion from it, one of which will undoubtedly be to this effect "O that is just the consequence of sending men who are not in sympaty with the enlightened progress of the times, to represent us in the council." Grammar Schools are in some respects even more important to the country than the higher institutions of learning, from the fact that comparatively few young men can afford the time and expense necessary to a University education while the Grammar Schools are within the reach of almost every one of both sexes. "Ah but," says some very astute farmer "all the youth in the county can't go to the Grammar School." True, but all the teachers of the county can and ought to attend the Grammar School if they have not Provincial certificates, therefore, every child in the county can and ought to benefit by the superior education afforded at the Grammar School. Indeed there is a constant attendance at the Grammar School of pupils from almost every part of the county, and more especially from the townships adjacent to the town, who can fully estimate the benefit received at the town Grammar School by the large number of pupils who from time to time have attended it from North Monaghan alone. Again, pupils attending the Grammar School from the county can do so with greater advantage than even those from the town, all the farmer has to pay is a merely nominal fee per month, while the parents of the latter are taxed besides for the support of the school. Still more, the town has gone to vast expense in erecting that beautiful building on the hillside for a school, an ornament alike to the town and county. But to come more closely to the point. What is it that at the outstart makes one school superior to another or the Grammar superior to the common school? We answer: a liberal public support, or in other words money. Take an illustration. What is it that makes the University of Toronto the glory of Canada, and the pride of every patriotic Canadian (though it may be an eyesore to all sectarian bigots who clamor for public aid for their narrow, selfish system of religious propagandism)? or what was it that produced that masterpiece of architectural skill—the University College building, whose equal for grandeur, colossal proportions and general utility as an educational edifice is sought for in vain on this continent—not overlooking any of the many "big things" in Uncle Sam's Territory. Still farther, what is it that causes the University College Museum to be more varied and extensive, its Library larger and general apparatus more complete, its staff of professors abler than those of any other institution in the Dominion? The answer to all is the munificent endowment of that institution. Posterity will venerate the names of the noble-minded men who have aided in placing that institution in its present pre-eminent position of usefulness. So also if the Grammar Schools would be worthy of a great and free people, they must be liberally maintained by the people generally, and not merely by its towns and villages. The County Council would have done a noble act, if, instead of withdrawing their aid from the Grammar School they had augmented it in order to found a scholarship or two for the special benefit of youths from the rural districts. But what caps the climax in the line of the ridiculous is to see Monaghan placed alongside of some of the back townships in its representators, as to this question, in the Council. Indeed we feel aggrieved to see Monaghan, the township celebrated far and wide for Schools, Literary Societies, &c., side by side with those who despise education. However, time will work wonderful changes in more ways than one.

NORTH MONAGAAN.

P. S. Some are anxious to know if the fact that the Grammar Schools are secular institutions (or in the parlance of some sectarien "godless institutions") had anything to do with the withdrawal of the Grammar School grant.

N. M.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—All we want on the Burleigh road is fair play. Was it fair for the County Council to appoint a tavern keeper to superintend our schools, a man who never gave a public lecture last year. It seems to me that Ministers of the Gospel and men following respectable callings are held in very low esteem by the County Council. How can he advise the child to do right while he sends the father home reeling drunk. It is no wonder that school teachers complain that they can't get their salaries, when the the said Tavern keeper holds so many offices, he is, or was, Local Superintendent, Assessor, Collector, Township Clerk, Post Master and Pound Keeper, consequently he had all power.

Another error the County Council committed in putting in the same Treasurer which he had last year, a man who has sold his land in Anstruther and now follows trapping for a trade, when we got orders on him for money last fall he was away trapping. Is it fair play for our Council men to fetch jugs of whiskay to the election, held in the school house last January?

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—Our here we have been much at a loss to learn when the Editor of the Review became an Editress, (forgive our inquisitiveness.) In the last number of that paper he signs himself "Bessie," and a dispute has arisen back here about his gender. If you will inform your numerous readers on the Burleigh Road on this disputed point, you will confer a favor. Editors, you know, are believed to know everything. We trust you will get in day light enough to find out this, as it might have an important bearing on natural history. If "Bessie" is feminine, is it not contrary to law to go in pants instead of pantalets

Yours truly,

CONCERT AT MILLBROOK.

According to announcement, the annual Concert, in aid of the funds of the English Church Sunday School, came off in the Town Hall, on Tuesday, the 10th February. The Hall was tastefully decorated, with temporary galleries erected in order to accommodate as many as possible, and had quite a comfortable appearance.

As the hour approached for the Concert to commence, the Hall became literally packed. Prof Philp not being on hand, the opening piece was a duett on the piano, by Misses Anne Kells and Alice Turner. Mr. F. J. Boswell, the celebrated comic singer, gave his first song of the evening, which was rapturously applauded encored, as was the case each time he appeared. Mr. Boswell is a host in himself, at entertainments like this. Misses Parnell and Kennedy, of Peterboro', and Miss Rodgers, of Ashburnham, rendered good service on the occasion, singing more pieces then they were on the programme for, on account of the absence of one or two others who were expected to be present. The two first-mentioned ladies have appeared before Millbrook audiences, on former occasions; the latter, however, had not—but from the flattering reception she received, being loudly encored, we have no doubt she will become a favorite Millbrookites. The Reading of Messrs. Baggart and O'Donnell were very good and deservedly well received. This, with a Solo on the Cornet, by Mr. A. H. Rackett, of Peterboro', constituted the programme of the evening's entertainments.

We had almost forgotten to mention that Smith C. B. Dean, Esq., acted as Director of Ceremonies; and right well he performed his duties. We hope to see him at his post, on future occasions.

After the Concert, a supper was laid out, in the Hall, for the singers and their friends. The Concert may be considered quite a success—the amount realized, after paying expenses, being over Forty Dollars.—Messenger.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER

As a Family Medicine, it is well and favorably known, relieving thousands from pains in the Side, Back and Head, Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Sprains, Bruises, Cramps in the Stomach, Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Bowel Complaints, Burns, Scalds, Frost-bites, &c. &c.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER

Has now been before the Public for a length of time, and wherever used is well liked, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction, where the Directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

We speak from experience in this matter, having tested it, thoroughly, and therefore those who are suffering from any of the complaints for which it is recommended may depend upon its being a Sovereign Remedy.

The astonishing efficacy of the Canadian Pain Destroyer, in curing the diseases for which it is recommended, and its wonderful success in subduing the torturing pains of Rheumatism, and in relieving Nervous Affections, entitle it to a high rank in the list of remedies for these complaints. Ordersare coming in from Medicine Dealers, in all parts of the Country for further supplies, andeach testifying as to the universal satisfaction itgives.

The Canadian Pain destroyer never fails to give immediate relief. All Medicine dealers keep it. Physicians order and use it; and no family will be without it after once trying it. Price only Twenty-five cents per Bottle.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and self-administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

N B—A[illegible]er Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no o[illegible]e. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 22

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalising the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

STARTLING NEWS!

THE subscriber, who has for some time past been keeping cool, allowing the enormous amount of gas, with which the Dry Goods and Clothing atmosphere has been impregnated, to escape—in order to prevent explosion—now begs to inform his many customers, and the public generally, that owing to the increase in the GENTLEMEN'S CLOTHING DEPARTMENT, which occupies nearly all his premises—from top to bottom—and is still increasing, he has been compelled to CLOSE UP THE LADIES' DEPARTMENT in the meantime; and this being the case, he has thought it his duty—plainly, calmly and truthfully—to inform his patrons of the fact; as also to inform them, one and all, that

ON THE SECOND DAY OF MARCH NEXT
he will commence
SELLING OFF
the whole of his varied stock of
LADIES' GOODS,

Comprising Prints, Cobourgs, Delaines, Ginghams, Ribbons, Parasols, Muslins, with a great many other varieties in this department too numerous to mention.

The Goods will all be marked in plain figures, at such unprecedented low prices as can not fail to command sales in every case, when they are carefully and impartially examined; say at 75 cents in the Dollar on former prices, and without any humbug or puffing, on this the public may rest satisfied. As it is the determination of the subscriber to go very extensively into the Clothing Business in the Spring, the Ladies' Goods must be sold off to make room.

To all those who really wish BARGAINS, the subscriber would say—they will find if they call early that there is no puffing in the establishment, but stubborn facts.

In addition to the above which is specially intended for the LADIES, he would say to his numerous

GENTLEMEN CUSTOMERS

That, not only is his stock of READY MADE CLOTHING—large and varied, but his stock of Tweeds—English, Scotch and Canadian, is also extensive, and will be greatly increased during the Spring. He would also say, that having a first class Cutter on the premises (MR. JAMES MEMZIES) he is prepared to make suits to order to those who may wish them, at very low rates, and when the cloth is bought on the premises, there will be NO CHARGE FOR CUTTING.

Just received, 200 pieces CANADIAN TWEEDS, made to order expressly for the establishment.

Also, FELT HATS of all varieties, comprising, Planters, Opera, Peabody, and many other Styles.

To one and all, both great and small,
I'll in conclusion say—
Economy is no disgrace
When used in any way.

No better plan, go where you can,
With truth, can any say,
Is offered the economical,
Than buying goods of F. Lemay.

The Great English Remedy.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition, but a sure and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorised Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

VERY NATURAL.

When a person has proved an article and found it good, and answering the purpose for which it is intended he will not readily abandon it for one of doubtful reputation or concerning which he knows nothing. We are led to make these remarks owing to the course always pursued by those who have used that celebrated and truly valuable horse medicine koown as "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy"—all are so well pleased with it that they will not use any other; many have waited several weeks until the agent could obtain a new supply. There is nothing equal to it as condition Medicine, or for any complaint affecting the wind of horses

Remember the name; and see that the signature of Hurld & Co. is on each package.

Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., proprietors for the Canadas. Sold by all Medicine Dealers. 5

SUGAR-COATED.

ARE a safe and reliable remedy in all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary people, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical professions. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following

JACOB'S RHEUHATIC LIQUID

Is an internal as well as an external remedy, and is the only one that always gives entire satisfaction, and all who once use it will never consent to change it for any other.

We have not space to enumerate the virtues accorded to it by thousands who have used it, and voluntarily certify to its merits. Buy a bottle and satisfy yourself that it is the best remedy ever offered.

Henry Simpson & Co., Montreal Wholesale Agents.

Sold in Peterborough by W. Coulter, J. W. Gilmour, A. W. Kempt, and Kincaid & Co.

THE BEST Tonic Hair Dressing ever discovered. It effectually cleanses the scalp, prevents the hair from falling or turning prematurely gray, and when the follicles and glands are not destroyed, will produce a new and luxuriant growth of hair where it has already disappeared.

It is the cheapest, as well as the best, being only 25 cents for a large bottle. Buy it, try it, you'll like it and recommend it to your friends.

MRS. WINSLOW'S
SOOTHING SYRUP!
FOR CHILDREN TEETHING,

GREATLY facilitates the process of teething by softening the gums, reducing all inflammation—will allay ALL PAIN and spasmodic action, and is

SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Depend upon it, mothers, it will give rest to yourselves, and

Relief and Health to your Infants.

We have put up and sold this article for years, and CAN SAY IN CONFIDENCE AND TRUTH of it what we have never been able to say of any other medicine—NEVER HAS IT FAILED IN A SINGLE INSTANCE TO EFFECT A CURE, when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak of terms of commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "WHAT WE DO KNOW" after years of experience, and PERIOR OUR REPUTATION FOR THE FULFILMENT OF WHAT WE HERE DECLARE. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper.

Sold by druggists throughout the world.

Price, only 25 Cents per Bottle.

DIRECTORS—Hon. James Cockburn, (Speaker of the House of Commons of Canada,) Charles Perry, Esq., M. P., P. M. Grover, Esq., M. P., Henry Calcutt, Esq., H. C. Rogers, Esq., Col. A. T. H. Williams, M. P. P., John Burnham, Esq., Barrister, W. H. Scott, Esq., Mayor, Peterborough, J. Stephenson, Esq.

PRESIDENT—W. H. Scott, Esq.
SOLICITORS—Weller & Hatton.
MANAGING DIRECTOR—H. C. Rogers.
TREASURER—John Burnham.
SECRETARY—Eig. Pearse.

This Company is organized for the purpose of developing the mineral resources of the west half of lot number Twenty in Concession A, in the Township of Galway, County of Peterborough, in the Province of Ontario and Dominion of Canada, and for the purpose of mining, smelting and otherwise preparing for market, the ores of all kinds of metals and minerals, together with the acquisition, employment, and disposal of all lands, mines, or ores, or granting to others the right to mine, smelt, or prepare for market, the ores of all metals and minerals that may be found of advatage to the interests of the Company.

The already acquired property of the Company, the west half of Lot Twenty, Concession A. Galway, is extremely rich in Lead, Iron Sulphate of Barytes, and Silver, quantities of each of which have already been taken by the promoters of the Company off this portion of the lot, which from the assays of Dr. Otway, show the following favorable results; Sulphur 23 per cent, Lead 77 per cent, Silver in Lead 100z. 13dwt. 8grs., to the Ton, proving beyond a doubt the great value of the property. The original owners of the property have already spent about one thousand dollars in opening up the mineral veins that intersect the Lot, and in pushing an adit or tunnel through a hill upon the property.

The property is situated on the Bobcaygeon Road, about 12 miles from Bobcaygeon, at which place communication can easily be obtained to Lindsay or Peterborough, thence by the P. D. L. and B. Railway to Port Hope. Ore or goods can thus be transferred at all seasons from the property to Port Hope, or vice versa at a cost not exceeding $5 per ton.

The original Proprietors have already conveyed the property to the Rev. Mark Burnham, of Ashburnham, in trust to be reconveyed by him to the Company when organized.

The Trustee of the Company has a perfect title to the said parcel of land so that no delay need occur in commencing operations, and an immediate return on the capital invested may be anticipated.

CANCERS CURED!

By a new, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay is required, until the cure is complete. The moment a cancer is discovered, it should be cured, as it will cost less and is more speedily cured than when of longer standing, and there is nothing to gain, and everything to lose by delay. What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, eye-lid or elsewhere, or small wart or sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given to parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. No money required in advance, and none until the cure is complete.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS.

Are you sick, bilious, and constipated? Are you out of order, and your system deranged? Your feelings unaccountable? These symptoms are often the prelude to some more serious ailment. A dose of these pills, taking upon you at once, will restore you to health again. They stimulate the functions of the body into vigorous activity, purify the system from the effete matter which causes disease. A mild cathartic somewhere in the body, and obstructs its natural functions. These, if not relieved, react upon themselves and the surrounding organs, producing general aggravation, suffering, and disease. While in this condition, oppressed by the derangements, take Ayer's Pills, and see how directly they restore the natural action of the system, and with it the buoyant feeling of health again. What is true and so apparent in this trivial and common complaint, is also true in many of the deep-seated and dangerous distempers. The same purgative effect expels them. Caused by similar obstructions and derangements of the natural functions of the body, they are rapidly, and many of them surely, cured by the same means. None who know the virtues of these Pills, will neglect to employ them when suffering from the disorders they cure.

Statements from leading physicians in some of the principal cities, and from other well known public persons.

From a Partnership Merchant of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1866.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the paragon of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of ulcerous sores upon her hands and feet that had proved incurable for years. Her mother has been long grievously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and in her hair. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her.

ADA MORGRIDGE.

As a Family Physic.

From Dr. E. W. Cartwright, New Orleans.

Your Pills are the prince of purges. Their excellent qualities surpass any cathartic we possess. They are mild, but very certain and effectual in their action on the bowels, which makes them invaluable to us in the daily treatment of disease.

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach.

From Dr. Edward Engel, Baltimore.

DEAR SIR: AYER: I cannot answer your usual complaints I have cured with your Pills better than to say all that we ever trust with a purgative medicine. I place great dependence on an effectual cathartic in my daily contact with disease, and believing as I do that your Pills afford us the best we have, I of course value them highly.

Pensacola, Fla., May 1, 1865.

DR. J. C. AYER. SIR: I have been repeatedly cured of the worst headache any body can have by a dose or two of your Pills. It seems to relax from a foul stomach, which they cleanse at once.

Yours with great respect, REV. W. PRESLE, Clerk of Hanover Church.

Bilious Disorders—Liver Complaints.

From Dr. Theodore Bell, of New York City.

Not only are your Pills admirably adapted to their purpose as an aperient, but I find their beneficial effects upon the Liver very marked indeed. They have in my practice proved more effectual for the cure of bilious complaints than any one remedy I can mention. I sincerely rejoice that we have at length a purgative which is worthy the confidence of the profession and the people.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, Washington, D. C., 7th Feb, 1866.

SIR: I have used your Pills in my general and hospital practice ever since you made them, and cannot hesitate to say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are admirable remedy for derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of bilious disease so obstinate that it did not readily yield to them. Fraternally yours, ALONZO BALL, M. D., Physician of the Marine Hospital.

Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Colic, Worms.

From Dr. J. G. Green, of Chicago.

Your Pills have had a long trial in my practice, and I hold them in esteem as one of the best agents I have ever found. Their alterative effect upon the liver makes them an excellent remedy, when given in small doses for bilious dysentery and diarrhœa. Their sugar-coating makes them very acceptable and convenient for the use of women and children.

Dyspepsia, Impurity of the Blood.

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood, they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

WARSAW, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Oct. 24, 1865.

DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M. D.

Constipation, Costiveness, Suppression, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Dropsy, Paralysis, Fits, etc.

From Dr. J. P. Vaughn, Montreal, Canada.

Too much cannot be said of your Pills for the cure of costiveness. Hosts of our fraternity have found them as efficacious as I have, they should join me in proclaiming it for the benefit of the multitudes who suffer from that complaint, which although bad enough in itself, is the progenitor of others that are worse. I believe sufferers to originate in the liver, but your Pills affect that organ and cure the disease.

From Mrs. E. Stuart, Physician and Midwife, Boston.

I find one or two large doses of your Pills, taken at the proper time, are excellent promotives of the natural movements when wholly or partially suppressed; and also very effectual to cleanse the stomach and expel worms. They are so much the best physic we have that I recommend no other to my patients.

From the Rev. Dr. Elender, of the Methodist Epis. Church.

PULASKI HOUSE, Savannah, Ga., Jan. 6, 1866.

HONORED SIR: I should be ungrateful for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not report my case to you. A cold settled in my limbs and brought on excruciating neuralgic pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians, the disease grew worse and worse, until by the advice of your excellent agent in Baltimore, Dr. Mackenzie, I tried your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure. By perseverng in the use of them, I am now entirely well.

SENATE CHAMBER, Baton Rouge, La., 5 Dec. 1865.

DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured, by your Pills, of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years. VINCENT SLIDELL.

☞ Most of the Pills in market contain Mercury, which, although a valuable remedy in skilful hands, is dangerous in a public pill, from the dreadful consequences that frequently follow its incautious use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

Price, 25 cents per Box, or 5 Boxes for $1.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold in Peterboro by Ormond & Gilmour, A W. Kempt, and Wm. Coulter. In Keene by A. Campbell, Campbell McNeil & Co., C. Britton, Lindsay, and all Medicine Dealers.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONESS REMEDY IN CANADA.

MESSRS. Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours: had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq. Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once, which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

CAUTION.

THE public are hereby cautioned to beware of purchasing Colored and Russian Mink for Canada Mink. The Canada is superior to any in the world, and is therefore the most valuable. This has induced wholesale dealers to imitate our Canada Mink, and make the inferior Russian, but also by coloring United States Mink. The Canada costs more than double that of any other country, which enables dealers to make a large profit on the spurious article. Those buying Furs in Montreal or other places should beware least they get the inferior article for which they will no doubt have to pay full prices. Take care, therefore, for I have been shown articles purchased as genuine in Montreal, which I can certify were colored and of inferior quality.

Those who buy any article of my own manufacture, I will warrant to be genuine, of best quality, and best workmanship, and at lower prices than any wholesale dealer will supply the same article.

SONG FOR SPRING.

BY SWINBURNE.

When the hounds of Spring are on Winter's traces,
The mother of months in meadow or plain
Fills the shadows and windy places
With [illegible]
And all the valleys, with [illegible]
[illegible] for [illegible].
For the Thracian ships and the Foreign faces,
The tongueless vigil, and all the pain.

Come with bows bent and with empty of quivers,
Maiden most perfect, lady of light,
With a noise of wind and many rivers,
With a clamour of waters, and with might;
Bind on thy sandals, O thou most fleet,
Over the splendour and speed of thy feet,
For the east coast quickens, the WAR west shivers
Round the feet of the day and the feet of the night.

Where shall we find her, how shall we sing to her,
Fold her hands round her knees, and cling?
O that man's heart were as fire and could spring to her,
Fire, or the strength of the streams that spring!
For the stars and winds are unto her
As raiment, as songs of the harp-player;
For the risen stars and the fallen cling to her,
And the south-west wind and the west wind sing.

For Winter's rains and ruins are over,
And all the season of snow and sin;
The days dividing lover and lover,
The light that loses, the night that wins;
And time remembered is grief forgotten,
And frosts are slain and flowers begotten,
And in green underwood and cover
Blossom by blossom the Spring begins.

The full streams feed on flower of rushes,
Ripe grasses trammel a travelling foot,
The faint fresh flame of the young year flushes
From leaf to flower and flower to fruit;
And fruit and leaf are as gold and fire,
And the oat is heard above the lyre,
And the hoofed heel of a satyr crushes
The chestnut husk at the chestnut root.

And Pan by noon and Bacchus by night,
Fleeter of foot than the fleet-foot kid,
Follows with dancing and fife with delight
The Maenad and the Bassarid;
And soft as lips that laugh and hide,
The laughing leaves of the trees divide,
And screen from seeing and leave in sight
The god pursuing, the maiden hid.

The ivy falls with the Bacchanal's hair
Over her eyebrows hiding her eyes;
The wild vine slips down leaves for her hair
Her bright breast shortening into sighs;
The wild vine slips with the weight of its leaves,
But the berried ivy catches and cleaves
To the limbs that glitter, the feet that scare
The wolf that follows, the fawn that flees.

Selections.

A Hero Small and Poor.

Jolly Namara was a poor boy in one of the smallest towns in the State of Wisconsin. It was summer time and among the new arrivals of goods at the Red Store, came a most wonderful box. It was not the Kohinoor, for it was too big a box for that, and attracted more attention and admiration than half a dozen diamonds would have done. It was not a white elephant, for the box was far too small for even the very smallest of elephants. It was a box of oranges.

Most of the children of Peatbrook had never seen an orange, however often they might have heard the delicious fruit mentioned. Among those who had heard but had never seen, was little Jolly. He had no elder brother to lend him, or no young lady sister to give him fifty cents to buy an orange; and his father would much rather, from some strange reason, give that amount to the bar-keeper at the 'Twilight' than to the man at the red store, and take an orange home to his little, ragged Jolly. His mother supported the family by washing and ironing, so she had not many fifty cent pieces lying around loose for little boys to snatch up and run off with, to buy oranges. Fairies were at that time very scarce in the state of Wisconsin, and Jolly was far too modest to have said orange to one, even if she had flown down with an apron full right before his face. What did he do? What could he do? He almost thought he should be sick if he did not get an orange. Oh, they looked so tempting in the window; and Adelbert Tracy had told him that they had tasted a hundred times better than they looked, for his Aunt Jenny had bought him one for picking cherrys for her. An orange Jolly certainly must have, and this is the only way he got it:

He went and picked mineral one day, and came home with enough money to buy it. But maybe you don't all know what picking mineral means. In the lead mines all around the deep shafts are heaps of yellow clay and rock, and shining pieces larger and smaller, of the precious lead ore, which have been dug out of the earth, away down in the dark, and sent up in buckets, and emptied out there. The boys are often allowed to go and pick out the stray lumps of ore—mineral they call it—after the workmen are through, and, selling it to the furnace men, they sometimes earn two or three dollars a week.

Just so little Jolly spent this warm summer day. With his yellow trowsers and shirt all stained with the ochre, kneeling at the dirt heap, warm, tired, thirsty, sweating as he worked, he often cast a glance towards the great piles of lead which the workmen had not yet removed; and he wondered, as he looked at them, how many whole oranges, at fifty cents apiece, all that mineral would buy; but Jolly was truly honest and good, and had been taught by his mother to covet what was another's was the next step before taking it, and he had not even such a thought as this; that the workmen were away, so one would see him and he might take all he wanted to carry, and no one would know it—which was all true. So he worked away, thinking only of the orange he would have, and how he would give his mother part, and how nice it would be.

He had a little lunch in a brown paper, of course bread and fried pork, which he took down to a clear spring, about a quarter of a mile off, and drinking of the cool water from a tin cup which always stood there, he finished his dinner, and sat down by the little stream below to rest awhile. As he sat there a gentleman came along the path which led to the diggings where Jolly had been at work.

Good morning, little fellow—what are you doing here? asked the gentleman, as he came up to the brook where Jolly was sitting.

Jolly only hung his head for he was a very bashful boy, and said not a word.

Looks rather suspicious, thought the owner of the works—for it was he, Mr. Herndon, the richest man in all that country. Have you been picking to-day? glancing at his stained clothes.

Yes, sir.

Where?

Up there, at the Herndon lead, said Jolly jerking his thumb over his shoulder to indicate the direction.

Who said you might? I'll go and see about this business. The men have not taken the lead away yet; but come along.

He spoke quite sternly, for he was just then thinking how often he had been robbed of large quantities of mineral, by dishonest boys who were picking around just as Jolly was doing. Jolly did not know that this was Mr. Herndon, and had no reason for imagining what he was, or was not, thinking about: but he arose and went to the works, behind the proprietor, wondering a little.

Now, sir, show me your sack? said Mr. Herndon—rather sharply, Jolly thought, but he went to a small clump of wild goose berry bushes, and brought forth the sack. Opening it, he displayed but a very few handfuls of ore, which seemed to him even less than they were before he went to the spring to eat his lunch. Said the gentleman, in a kinder tone.

How long have you been out?

Since the morning, sir, said Jolly, in a very low tone, for he was quite discouraged at the poor luck he had had.

Have you worked hard?

All the time, sir, said Jolly, a little more confidently.

What do you do with what you earn in this way?

I give it to mother to buy tea, sometimes, and candles, and things; but I don't get to come out very often.

What will you do with what you get to-day? said Mr. Herndon, looking down at the poor little lumps, and thinking he could not see either tea or candles in a very near prospect.

I wanted to get an orange, sir, said Jolly, brightening up with the pleasing subject. Mister Bensell has a whole box full of 'em, and Adelbert Tracy says they're fifty cents a piece; but mother said bein' as this was my birth day I might spend my pickens as I liked, said Jolly.

Mr. Herndon was becoming interested in his new acquaintance, and he sat down upon the platform of the nearest windlass.

What's your name? he asked—rather suddenly, the little boy thought.

Jolly Namara, sir, said he, making a funny little bow which his mother had taught him was quite as important as any part of his name.

Jolly Namara! a jolly name; and how old are you? said the gentleman.

Nine years old next, next—why to-day, sir! he said, with a little quick laugh at his own strange forgetfulness of the all important day.

Have you ever been to school? asked the proprietor, in a kinder voice than he had yet spoken in.

I've been two winters up to Mister Kaiser's school, 'n I made the fires for 'em last winter, but mother can't spare me to go much nor I helps her 'bout the washin' 'n ironings, 'n takes the clone home, 'n picks up the wood what mother washes with, acid Jolly, in one breath.

How many has your mother to support? Sir, said Jolly.

How many does your mother have to work for?

Oh, there's Miss Moore, 'n Miss Cummins, 'n the new family at the rectory, 'n—

No, I mean how many children has your mother?

None 'cept me—Jolly. Sister Mary died last winter's a year ago, and mother cries about her yet, but I'm sure sister's a great deal better off.

Do you go to church and Sunday school?

No, sir, I never had no clone fittin',

Are these the best you have, asked Mr. Herndon, in a very interested manner.

I have another pair what ain't yeller like these. but they're a good deal holer, said the little miner, disconsolately.

Can you read any?

O yes, sir! Mother learns me to read. Mother's a bully reader. She went to school lots when she lived in the Yeast. I can read in the Testament a little, said Jolly, triumphantly.

Would you like to go to school all the time? asked the same kind voice, growing softer and kinder all the time.

O, yes, indeed sir! if I only could! and his bright eyes danced with the thought, but drooped again with the certainty that this could never be. Of all things—even above and beyond oranges—was the desire to go to school uppermost in the little boy's mind. But mother says not now—after a while, if the Lord will, said Jolly, solemnly. Mother wants me to get a neddycation, and so do I 'n mother says if I try 'n learn 'n do right where I am, the Lord will surely see how I do, 'n bymby, when he is certain about me he will think of some way to get me into school all the time, said the little workman, as he sat on the dirt pile and played with the yellow clay, and wondered at himself, for he had never said so much to any one but his mother, in his whole life before, but somehow the gentleman's looks and tones, more than his words, brought it all out; and now it was all told and couldn't be helped; but what would his mother think when she should know of it, and what would the gentleman think of him talking all he knew in that style?

Then he glanced up at the sun with one eye shut, in a critical kind of a way, to take the exact position of the day god, and seeming to think it was getting later every minute, he took up his sack and pick, and was going to work again.

You haven't got much mineral, Jolly, said Mr. Herndon, not half enough to buy a quarter of an orange, have you?

Jolly looked puzzled a little bit, and said: Well then, I must hurry up, and run about starting off at once.

Here, Jolly, emd the web value again, why didn't you help yourself to enough out of this big pile to buy half a dozen oranges? No one would have known it.

O, sir, that—why that would have been just like stealing; and I want steal for any money.

Who told you not to steal?

I dunno, sir, said Jolly, looking confused; maybe 'twas mother.

The truth was that honesty was so early a part of his being, that he could about as soon tell when his arms grew on, as when honesty and truthfulness were grafted into his character.

Look here, Jolly, said Mr. Herndon, in one of these sudden, quick ways, by which little Jolly would ever after remember him, you ought to have a birthday present. Come and take enough out of this nice pile to buy you just one orange, mind; and then you can go right home and make your purchase.

Helping him to guess at the right quantity, the kind gentleman saw that jolly was surprised enough, and grateful enough, though he only said, thank ye, in a very low tone indeed. He made his funny little bow, though, and was going off happy as a king, with the heavy sack over his shoulder, and the pick in the opposite hand.

Here Jolly, you need'nt carry it so far to the store, put in back here, and I will buy it, said Herndon, at the same time taking out a silver half dollar.

Jolly looked at the gentleman, looked at the mineral heap, looked up at the sky and down at his feet, and then at his hands, when the coin seemed to have a restorative influence, for he breathed and put it in his pocket, and turned out the mineral. Seeming to fear that something else quite as astonishing, but not so pleasant, might occur next, he said, thank ye, jerked his bow, and ran off home to tell his mother all the strange adventure. She was but little less astonished than Jolly had been; she told him it was a reward for his good behaviour, which the Lord had sent directly to him, and he might go and get the orange at once.

Off he ran as if the clouds were under his feet, and a great white bird wafted him along.

Oh, now! what if they are gone, he thought, and under the clouds he went and off the white bird flew, leaving him far behind. On he went to the store, where he stood a moment not daring to look toward the window for fear he should miss the box of oranges, which had stood there two days already.

Then looking, Oh, they're not gone! he cried aloud, and hastened in on white wings again. Well, Jolly Namara, what do you want? said the gay young clerk, looking the other way, rather on purpose, for he saw the stained clothes, but not the pure white wings underneath them.

I want a' norange, sir, said Jolly smiling all over.

Oh, no doubt. Many little boys want oranges, but you see they're fifty cents apiece, said the clerk in a tone that seemed to settle the business.

Here's the money, sir, said Jolly, who feared they were not for sale to little boys at any price.

That alters the case, as most circumstances does, said the clerk, taking the money and selecting a fine orange. Jolly took it, and I ask whether Napoleon entering France as her Emperor, or little Jolly in possession of his orange, was the happier.

Seizing the yellow ball, about the colour of his clothes, hands, feet, face, and all, he rushed out, not forgetting, even in the trying and peculiar moment, his bow.—Out, and up the street, he ran; the clouds under his feet light as air, and the white bird carrying him on so bravely. He had gone a couple of squares toward home when he met little Julia Criswell at the gate of Dr. Snowball's, where she had been for some medicine.

O Jolly, she said, do come'n see poor Jim. He is so sick with the fever, 'n the doctor says he might 'a got well only he hadn't had nothin' good to eat. Mother's set up with him two nights. She does all she can, 'n cries the rest, 'n if we wasn't so poor; 'n mother can't go out a washin' o' Jim's being so awful sick, and we're all half starved, let alone poor Jim, she rattled on, regardless of pauses, or to take her breath. Why, Jolly, a' norange! my! if poor dear Jim—she suddenly checked herself, for that would seem exactly like begging, to say, if only Jim had an orange! and she wouldn't beg even if they all starved, but it was pre ty hard.

Yes it was hard. Jolly knew it all, felt it all, decided it all in a very few moments. Jim should have the orange, the precious orange which Jolly had dreamed so much about, and now possessed at last. Jim should have it. How far off hovered the bird with white wings, but Jolly thought he heard her singing.

How heavy and dark the clouds, and now they were above him, pressing him down. How could he give up his orange—the one which his mother said the Lord had sent him? Didn't the Lord mean he should keep it for himself and enjoy it—almost the first birth day present he had ever received?

But poor Jim Criswell, sick, and so poor—poorer a great deal than Jolly's own family—maybe he would die, maybe starve to death. He couldn't wait any longer; Jim should have the orange.

Here, Julie, he said, give this to Jim.—Tell him I sent it to him, 'n hope he'll be better soon.

Julie fairly wept for joy, and ran home, forgetting to shut the doctor's gate.—There stood Jolly, our hero, tired, begrimmed with dirt, pale, but wore the yellow streaks of ochre, rather downcast, to be sure, but he was listening to the sweetest song he ever heard from the beautiful bird which was coming nearer and nearer to him, and the clouds were slowly turning to gold, and floating down under his feet, and he was just being lifted upon soft, white wings again, when he heard the gate click, and Mr. Herndon came out of the doctor's office, where he had heard and seen everything through the open window.

Well, Jolly, how's college? he said, pleasantly.

Sir, said Jolly, to whom the word orange was not so charming as it had been once.

Where's your fifty cent orange? he asked of Jolly.

I sent it to Jimmy Criswell, sir, just now, poor boy; he's awful sick with the fever, and I thought, bein' as 'twas mine I might, said he, looking at his friend, to see whether that gentleman was the least bit displeased. He saw nothing of the kind, only a wonderfully pleasant smile, as Mr. Herndon said:

I will go home with you, Jolly, if you will let me. I want to see your mother.

Jolly thought instantly of one more customer to make his poor mother glad, and so they walked along to the very door of the little cabin, without either speaking a word. Mrs. Newton was just taking some clothes from the frame and folding them when they met it. She spoke pleasantly to the stranger, told Jolly to give him a chair, and sat at all confused, folded the remainder of the clothes, passed them up on a heavy towel, and told Jolly to take them over to Mrs. More and tell her they came to one dollar, and to stop at the store and get a couple of mackerel as he came back, and then sat down to hear what the strange gentleman had to say.

I can't tell you all they said, but the sum of it was this: Mr. Herndon had taken a wonderful fancy to Jolly, and offered to put him at once in a good school, and afterward in as good a college if he did well in his studies, all at his own expense, and he told her when he should have done all this, it would be no more than he ought to do for so good and kind and promising a boy as every one in Peatbrook said Jolly was.

Thirty years have gone now, and do you see that fine country residence up there toward your right, with the rich flowers and walks all around, and the fountain bubbling and prattling and sparkling in the red sunset, and the pretty children romping on the lawn yonder, and the gentleman in a rustic chair on the porch reading Plutarch? That quiet reader there is a man of splendid abilities and fine education they say; and his sign, away over the hills in the city yonder, reads,—J. Namara, Attorney and Counsellor at Law.—N. Y. Presbyterian.

The New Promissory Stamp Act.

The Promissory Note Act, which came into force on the first of February, requires all adhesive stamps affixed to promissory notes, draft, or bills of exchange, to be cancelled by being initialed, or having some material part of the instrument written over them and being dated as well. The drawer of bills in the Dominion and the maker of notes must stamp and initial and date, the stamps, and the acceptor of bills drawn out of the Dominion under heavy penalty. A party coming into possession of an unstamped note or bill may double stamp it, and the instrument will then become valid in his hands, otherwise it is valueless; but the party who ought by law to have affixed the stamp, is not by this relieved from the penalties by this future. The act further provides that stamps may be used, as in Great Britain. We notice that many of our exchanges, in giving the amount of stamp duty to be affixed, have fallen into an error with regard to notes under $25. The statute is somewhat vague in its language on this point, but after some consideration of the matter, we considered that on submitting the clause to a legal gentleman, our rendering was confirmed. The duty stands thus: on bills under $25 no duty; exactly $25 1 cent; from $22 and up to $50, 2 cents; and 3 cents if over $50 and up to $100, and so on.—Perth Courier.

Dr. Cumming, in a letter to the Telegraph says he is misunderstood when people suppose him to be a prophet. "I never in my life," he says "professed or attempted to prophesy, All I have ventured to do explain and unfold inspired prophecies in the Word of God." It follows, of course, that the doctor's prophecies have never been contradicted by facts. He challenges the production of an instance. He denies also that he has ever changed his opinion about the interpretation of prophecy. After recommending the editor of the Telegraph to read his last new book of which he gives title and the publisher, Dr. Cumming says:—"On these subjects I have invariably spoken with the utmost reticence and reserve; and now, after twenty years' study and writing on the subject, I find nothing to recall or retract. I believe, as I stated twenty years ago, that proximately 1867 winds up the 'times of the Gentiles.' Elliot states 1865 others say 1868—these being inferences from the great chronologies of prophecy. I gather from inspired prophecy that we are plunging into time of unprecedented severity and trouble, and that it is time for every man while doing his duty to his country, his family, and society at large, to have his loins girt and his lamp burning, for "the coming of the Lord draweth nigh."

Looking to others for our standard of happiness is a sure way to be miserable.—Our business is with our own motives.

A crusty old bachelor says that Adam's wife was called Eve because, when she appeared, man's day of happiness was drawing to a close.

A number of female school teachers at Riverhead, L. I., have been arraigned before the School Committee for "smoking pipes during school hours."

CAUTION.

THE public are hereby cautioned to beware of purchasing Colored and Russian Musk for Canada Mink. The Canada is superior to any in the world, and is therefore the most valuable. This has induced wholesale dealers in imitate dear Canada Mink, and only by enforcing Russian, but also by coloring United States Mink. The Canada costs more than double that of any other country, which enables dealers to make a large profit on the spurious article. Those buying Furs in Montreal or other places should beware least they get the inferior article for which they will no doubt have to pay full prices. Take care, therefore, for I have been shown articles purchased as genuine in Montreal, which I can certify were colored and of inferior quality.

Those who buy any article of my own manufacture, I will warrant to be genuine, of best quality, and best workmanship, and at lower prices than any wholesale dealer will supply the same article.

A call is respectfully solicited.

Poetry.

SONG FOR SPRING.

BY SWINBURNE.

When the hounds of Spring are on Winter's traces,
The mother of months in meadow or plain
Fills the shadows and windy places
With lisp of leaves and ripple of rain;
And the brambles are veiled and the thickets are tangled
With wind-blown blossom and bird-blown grain,
And the first rose reddens and rathe and wild
Stands in the stillness of sunnier air
Unafraid of the sky's inconstancy,
Knowing the heart of its foster mother,
And secure as the sun and the sea and she.

For the Thracian ships and the foreign faces,
The tongueless vigil, and all the pain.

Come with bows bent and with emptying of quivers,
Maiden most perfect, lady of light,
With a noise of winds and many rivers,
With a clamour of waters, and with might;
Bind on thy sandals, O thou most fleet,
Over the rosebud and spread of thy feet,
For the faint east quickens, the wan west shivers
Round the feet of the day and the feet of the night.

Where shall we find her, how shall we sing to her,
Fold her hands round her knees, and cling?
O that man's heart were as fire and could spring to her,
Fire, or the strength of the streams that spring!
For the stars and winds are unto her
As raiment, as songs of the harp-player;
For the risen stars and the fallen cling to her,
And the south-west wind and the west wind sing.

For Winter's rains and ruins are over,
And all the season of snow and sin;
The days dividing lover and lover,
The light that loses, the night that wins;
And time remembered is grief forgotten,
And frosts are slain and flowers begotten,
And in green underwood and cover
Blossom by blossom the Spring begins.

The full streams feed on flower of rushes,
Ripe grasses trammel a travelling foot,
The faint fresh flame of the young year flushes
From leaf to flower and flower to fruit;
And fruit and leaf are as gold and fire,
And the oat is heard above the lyre,
And the hoofed heel of a satyr crushes
The chestnut husk at the chestnut root.

And Pan by noon and Bacchus by night,
Fleeter of foot than the fleet-foot kid,
Follows with dancing and fife with delight
The Maenad and the Bassarid;
And soft as lips that laugh and hide,
The laughing leaves of the trees divide,
And screen from seeing and leave in sight
The god pursuing, the maiden hid.

The ivy falls with the Bacchanal's hair
Over her eyebrows hiding her eyes;
The wild vine slipping down leaves bare
Her bright breast shortening into sighs;
The wild vine slips with the weight of its leaves,
But the buried ivy catches and cleaves
To the limbs that glitter, the feet that scare
The wolf that follows, the fawn that flees.

Selections.

A Hero Small and Poor.

Jolly Namara was a poor boy in one of the smallest towns in the State of Wisconsin. It was summer time and among the new arrivals of goods at the Red Store, came a most wonderful box. It was not the Kohinoor, for it was too big a box for that, and attracted more attention and admiration than half a dozen diamonds would have done. It was not a white elephant, for the box was far too small for even the very smallest of elephants. It was a box of oranges.

Most of the children of Pearlbrook had never seen an orange, however often they might have heard the delicious fruit mentioned. Among those who had heard but had never seen, was little Jolly. He had no elder brother to lend him, or no young lady sister to give him fifty cents to buy an orange; and his father would much rather, from some strange reason, give that amount to the bar-keeper at the 'Twilight' than to the man at the red store, and take an orange home to his little, ragged Jolly. His mother supported the family by washing and ironing, so she had not many fifty cent pieces lying around loose for little boys to snatch up and run of with, to buy oranges. Fairies were at that time very scarce in the state of Wisconsin, and Jolly was far too modest to have said orange to one, even if she had flown down with an apron full right before his face. What did he do? What could he do? He almost thought he should be sick if he did not get an orange. Oh, they looked so tempting in the window; and Adelbert Tracy had told him that they had tasted a hundred times better than they looked, for his Aunt Jenny had bought him one for picking cherries for her. An orange Jolly certainly must have, and this is the only way he got it:

He went and picked mineral one day, and came home with enough money to buy it. But maybe you don't all know what picking mineral means. In the lead mines all around the deep shafts are heaps of yellow clay and rock, and shining pieces larger and smaller, of the precious lead ore, which have been dug out of the earth, away down in the dark, and sent up in buckets, and emptied out there. The boys are often allowed to go and pick out the stray lumps of ore—mineral they call it—after the workmen are through, and, selling it to the furnace men, they sometimes earn two or three dollars a week.

Just so little Jolly spent this warm summer day. With his yellow trowsers and shirt all stained with the ochre, kneeling at the dirt heap, warm, tired, thirsty, sweating as he worked, he often cast a glance towards the great piles of lead which the workmen had not yet removed; and he wondered, as he looked at them, how many whole oranges, at fifty cents apiece, all that mineral would buy; but Jolly was truly honest and good, and had been taught by his mother to covet what was another's was the next step before taking it, and he had not even such a thought as that; that the workmen were away, no one would see him and he might take all he wanted to carry, and no one would know it—which was all true. So he worked away, thinking only of the orange he would have, and how he would give his mother part, and how nice it would be.

He had a little lunch in a brown paper, of course bread and fried pork, which he took down to a clear spring, about a quarter of a mile off, and drinking of the cool water from a tin cup which always stood there, he finished his dinner, and sat down by the little stream below to rest awhile. As he sat there a gentleman came along the path which led to the diggings where Jolly had been at work.

Good morning, little fellow—what are you doing here? asked the gentleman, as he came to where Jolly was sitting.

Jolly only hung his head for he was a very bashful boy, and said not a word.

Looks rather suspicious, thought the owner of the works—for it was he, Mr. Herndon, the richest man in all that country. Have you been picking to-day? glancing at his stained clothes.

Yes, sir.

Where?

Up there, at the Herndon lead, said Jolly jerking his thumb over his shoulder to indicate the direction.

Who said you might? I'll go and see about this business. The men have not taken the lead away yet; but come along.

He spoke quite sternly, for he was just then thinking how often he had been robbed of large quantities of mineral, by dishonest boys who were picking around just as Jolly was doing. Jolly did not know that this was Mr. Herndon, and had no reason for imagining what he was, or was not, thinking about: but he arose and went to the works, behind the proprietor, wondering a little.

Now, sir, show me your sack? said Mr. Herndon—rather sharply, Jolly thought, but he went to a small clump of wild goose berry bushes, and brought forth the sack. Opening it, he displayed but a very few handfuls of ore, which seemed to him even less than they were before he went to the spring to eat his lunch. Said the gentleman, in a kinder tone.

How long have you been out?

Since the morning, sir, said Jolly, in a very low tone, for he was quite discouraged at the poor luck he had had.

Have you worked hard?

All the time, sir, said Jolly, a little more confidently.

What do you do with what you earn in this way?

I give it to mother to buy tea, sometimes, and candles, and things; but I don't get to come out very often.

What will you do with what you get to-day? said Mr. Herndon, looking down at the poor little lumps, and thinking he could not see either tea or candles in a very near prospect.

I wanted to get an orange, sir, said Jolly, brightening up with the pleasing subject. Mister Bensell has a whole box full of 'em, and Adelbert Tracy says they're fifty cents a piece; but mother said bein' as this was my birth day I might spend my pickens as I liked, said Jolly.

Mr. Herndon was becoming interested in his new acquaintance, and he sat down upon the platform of the nearest windlass.

What's your name? he asked—rather suddenly, the little boy thought.

Jolly Namara, sir, said he, making a funny little bow which his mother had taught him was quite as important as any part of his name.

Jolly Namara! a jolly name; and how old are you? said the gentleman.

Nine years old next, next—why to-day, sir! he said, with a little quick laugh at his own strange forgetfulness of the all important day.

Have you ever been to school? asked the proprietor, in a kinder voice than he had yet spoken in.

I've been two winters up to Mister Kaiser's school, 'n I made the fires for 'em last winter, but mother can't spare me to go much now I helps her 'bout the washin' 'n ironing 'n takes the clone home, 'n picks up the wood what mother washes with, said Jolly, in one breath.

How many has your mother to support? Sir, said Jolly.

How many does your mother have to work for?

Oh, there's Miss Moore, 'n Miss Cummins, 'n the new family at the rectory, 'n—

No, I mean how many children has your mother?

None 'cept me—Jolly. Sister Mary died last winter's a year ago, and mother cries about her yet, but I'm sure sister's a great deal better off.

Do you go to church and Sunday school?

No, sir, I never had no clone fittin'.

Are these the best you have, asked Mr. Herndon, in a very interested manner.

I have another pair what ain't yeller like these, but they're a good deal holier, said the little miner, disconsolately.

Can you read any?

O yes, sir! Mother learns me to read. Mother's a bully reader. She went to school lots when she lived in the Yeast. I can read in the Testament a little, said Jolly, triumphantly.

Would you like to go to school all the time? asked the same kind voice, growing softer and kinder all the time.

O, yes, indeed sir! if I only could! and his bright eyes danced with the thought, but drooped again with the certainty that this could never be. Of all things—even above and beyond oranges—was the desire to go to school uppermost in the little boy's mind. But mother says not now—after a while, if the Lord will, said Jolly, solemnly. Mother wants me to get a neddycayshon, and so do I 'n mother says if I try 'n learn 'n do right where I am, the Lord will surely see how I do, 'n by-and-by, when he is certain about me he will think of some way to get me into school all the time, said the little workman, as he sat on the dirt pile and played with the yellow clay, and wondered at himself, for he had never said so much to any one but his mother, in his whole life before, but somehow the gentleman's looks and tones, more than his words, brought it all out; and now it was all told and couldn't be helped; but what would his mother think when she should know of it, and what would the gentleman think of him telling all his business in that style?

Then he glanced up at the sun with one eye shut, in a critical kind of a way, to take the exact position of the day god, and seeming to think it was getting later every minute, he took up his sack and pick, and was going to work again.

You haven't got much mineral, Jolly, said Mr. Herndon, not half enough to buy a quarter of an orange, have you?

Jolly looked puzzled a little bit, and said: Well then, I must hurry up, and was about starting off at once.

Here, Jolly, said the soft voice again, why didn't you help yourself to enough out of this big pile to buy half a dozen oranges? No one would have known it.

O, sir, that—why that would have been just like stealing; and I wont steal for any money.

Who told you not to steal?

I dunno, sir, said Jolly, looking confused; maybe 'twas mother.

The truth was that honesty was so early a part of his being, that he could about as soon tell when his arms grew on, so when honesty and truthfulness were grafted into his character.

Look here, Jolly, said Mr. Herndon, in one of these sudden, quick ways, by which little Jolly would ever after remember him, you ought to have a birthday present. Come and take enough out of this nice pile to buy you just one orange, mind; and then go right home and make your purchase.

He'ping him to guess at the right quantity, the kind gentleman saw that Jolly was surprised enough, and grateful enough, though he only said, thank ye, in a very low tone indeed. He made his fussy little bow, though, and was going off happy as a king, with the heavy sack over his shoulder, and the pick in the opposite hand.

Here Jolly, you need'nt carry it so far to the store, put it back here, and I will buy it, said Herndon, at the same time taking out a silver half dollar.

Jolly looked at the gentleman, looked at the mineral heap, looked up at the sky and down at his feet, and then at his hands, when the coin seemed to have a restorative influence, for he breathed and put it in his pocket, and turned out the mineral. Seeming to fear that something else quite as astonishing, but not so pleasant, might occur next, he said, thank ye, jerked his bow, and ran off home to tell his mother all the strange adventure. She was but little less astonished than Jolly had been; she told him it was a reward for his good behaviour, which the Lord had sent directly to him, and he might go and get the orange at once.

Off he ran as if the clouds were under his feet, and a great white bird wafted him along.

Oh, now! what if they are gone, he thought, and under the clouds he went and off the white bird flew, leaving him far behind. On he went to the store, where he stood a moment not daring to look toward the window for fear he should miss the box of oranges, which had stood there two days already.

Then looking, Oh, they're not gone! he cried aloud, and hastened in on white wings again. Well, Jolly Namara, what do you want? said the gay young clerk, looking the other way, rather on purpose, for he saw the stained clothes, but not the pure white wings underneath them.

I want a' norange, sir, said Jolly smiling all over.

Oh, no doubt. Many little boys want oranges, but you see they're fifty cents apiece, said the clerk in a tone that seemed to settle the business.

Here's the money, sir, said Jolly, who feared they were not for sale to little boys at any price.

That alters the case, as most circumstances does, said the clerk, taking the money and selecting a fine orange. Jolly took it, and I ask whether Napoleon entering France as her Emperor, or little Jolly in possession of his orange, was the happier.

Seizing the yellow ball, about the colour of his clothes, hands, feet, face, and all, he rushed out, not forgetting, even in this trying and peculiar moment, his bow.—Out, and up the street, he ran; the clouds under his feet light as air, and the white bird carrying him on so bravely. He had gone a couple of squares toward home when he met little Julia Criswell at the gate of Dr. Snowball's, where she had been for some medicine.

O Jolly, she said, do come'n see poor Jim. He is so sick with the fever, 'n the doctor says he might 'n got well only he hadn't had nothin' good to eat. Mother's set up with him two nights. She does all she can, 'n cries the rest, 'n if we wasn't so poor; 'n mother can't go out a washin' o' Jim's being so awful sick, and we're all half starved, let alone poor Jim, she rattled on, regardless of pauses, or to take her breath. Why, Jolly, a' norange! my! if poor dear Jim—she suddenly checked herself, for that would seem exactly like begging, to say, if only Jim had an orange! and she wouldn't beg even if they all starved, but it was pre ty hard.

Yes it was hard. Jolly knew it all, felt it all, decided it all in a very few moments. Jim should have the orange, the precious orange which Jolly had dreamed so much about, and now possessed at last. Jim should have it. How far off hovered the bird with white wings, but Jolly thought he heard her singing.

How heavy and dark the clouds, and now they were above him, pressing him down. How could he give up his orange—the one which his mother said the Lord had sent him? Didn't the Lord mean he should keep it for himself and enjoy it—almost the first birth day present he had ever received?

But poor Jim Criswell, sick, and so poor—poorer a great deal than Jolly's own family—maybe he would die, maybe starve to death. He couldn't wait any longer; Jim should have the orange.

Here, Julia, he said, give this to Jim.—Tell him I sent next it to him, 'n hope he'll be better soon.

Julia fairly wept for joy, and ran home, forgetting to shut the doctor's gate.—There stood Jolly, our hero, tired, begrimmed with dirt, pale, between the yellow streaks of sunset, rather downcast, to be sure, but his was listening to the sweetest song he ever heard from the beautiful bird which was coming nearer and nearer to him, and the clouds were slowly turning to gold, and floating down under his feet, and he was just being lifted upon soft, white wings again, when he heard the gate click, and Mr. Herndon come out of the doctor's office, where he had heard and seen everything through the open window.

Here, Jolly, said the soft voice again, why didn't you help yourself to enough out of this big pile to buy half a dozen oranges? No one would have known it.

O, sir, that—why that would have been just like stealing; and I wont steal for any money.

THURSDAY, MARCH 19, 1868.

ONTARIO.—The Parliament of Ontario was prorogued on Wednesday last, till the 14th of April next. Several Acts have been passed, but almost all of a local or private character, those of general application are:—An Act respecting butter; an Act respecting auction of estates; concerning over holding tenants; to amend common law; providing for the encouragement of Agriculture, Horticulture, arts and manufactures; execution against good and chattels; an Act to amend the Municipal Institution Act of U. C.; and an Act to provide expenses of civil year. The Assessment Act has been laid over for another session.

The flood in the creek here, on Tuesday, caused considerable stir to those on or near it. Mr. W. Patterson, Mr. Helm and Mr. English received most damage, Mr. Patterson in particular. His tannery was filled with water, the hides were floating through it, and considerable clay lodged in it, that must cause considerable loss to him. His bark yard was also flooded to the depth of two or three feet.

A letter on Burleigh matters is crowded out this week; it presses hard on its opponents. We must admit the belligerent rights of the parties and let them fight it out; but such strange revelations are coming to light, that for the honor of our good county and press, we advise a truce, or Burleigh will become a great Alabama affair.

TEACHERS ASSOCIATON.—The next meeting of the above association will be held on the first Saturday of April, at 10 o'clock a. m. Subject: reading new 5th Book to end 10th page; Grammar on the same pages; Arithmetic, simple rules. We hope to see a large attendance.

We have received particulars of the decease of the late Mr. William Dinwoodie too late to appear this week, we will give them in full next. We regret to learn that a brother of the deceased has died at Kingston within a few days.

The Hon. Sidney Smith has been re-appointed by the Government of Ontario, Inspector of Registry Offices for Ontario. Heretofore he was an officer of the Dominion we suppose now he is as officer of the Province.

We learn from a letter to a French newspaper that there are Protestants in the Papal army. We suppose they are something like what might be called doubtful Protestants.

The floods at Belleville have done considerable damage to bridges, and several buildings have suffered. A hurricane at Toronto also caused much damage.

AGRICULTURAL.

Under the new agricultural act, a meeting was held in the council chamber, to organize an agricultural society for the West Riding. At that meeting, after considerable discussion, the following officers were elected:—

President,—John Walton.
1st. Vice President,—Joseph Walton, Sr.
2nd. Vice President,—Mr. Kerr.
Secretary and Treasurer,—J. W. Gilmour.

Directors,—Reverend Mr. Isaac Garratt, Michael Sanderson, John Carnegie, Joseph R. Walton, George Tully, Charles Taylor, John Ricklell, and John Whyte.

Auditors,—Jas. Edwards, W. H. Moore.

DISGRACEFUL.

Last week's Review contains a most wicked and slanderous attack on Mr. Carroll, Crown Land Agent here. We had come to the conclusion to neither interfere or say anything relating to the [illegible] between the Review and Mr. Carroll, but when we find a man, because he has the advantage of controlling a newspaper, continues the most naked, violent and untruthful and uncalled-for attacks on another, because he is merely a political opponent, we cannot in justice deny the right of reply. But we consider it disgraceful to be annoying the public with private squabbles of no public importance, and that cannot be of any interest to the public rather than to hear how well the parties can abuse each other. All the accounts furnished the government have to be under oath of the parties receiving the money, and hence the last mare's nest of the Review cannot effect Mr. Carroll except the portion of it relating to his pay amounting to about $450, and whenever the government refuses to pay Mr. Carroll the Review will have a case but not till then. All the Crown Land Agents receive the same pay, we believe, viz. $5 per day where employed in government work, then when is the fraud or appearance of it. The pay may be too much, if so let the Review advocate a general reduction in all the agencies, then he will be sustained, but let him cast away his ill feeling and petty spleen, and show that he has the good of our Country in view, and not merely to slander the man whom he once delighted to honor.

A hint: Some of the public men of the past could certify to the same sort of treatment, and we dare predict that those who are now turning seas and land to gain little bits of information, for the Editor will yet receive attention if they stand in the way of aggrandisement. We advise the present constituents to put their swords in their sheaths, the public is not interested in their continuances of petty strife.

A MAN SHOT AT.—A few evenings since, while Thos. Chambers, Esq., was entering his own yard, near his dwelling, he saw two men searching for a bolt of their sleigh which they declared they had just lost. Mr. Chambers quietly enqired of them what they were looking for, and while talking to them, they asked him if he cold give them a bolt; he answered that he could not, but told them that the easiest way for them would be to go to Mr. Delaney, who could soon make them one, to which one of them replied that if that was all the information he had, he could go on. He accordingly bade them good-night and went into his own yard, just as entering the gate he turned round when he saw the flash and heard the report of the shot going off, and one of the men saying if he did not like that he would let him have five more of them, which he had ready. Mr. Chambers saw them remain for a few moments, when two or three others came up and had a general scuffle, when all left but the owner of the team who had to remain until he would get a bolt. This man told Mr. C. that he was a resident of Ennismore, but refused information of the other who had gone off by this time. Of course the information is not to be relied on, nor is it of any use whatever. What object the man could have in firing a pistol, we cannot say, as Mr. C. cannot say that he really fired at him. It is a great pity, however, that he was not taken hold of and made to pay the penalty of carrying fire arms. He could have no cause for firing at Mr. C., as there is not a more inoffensive citizen in this Town, nor one more universally respected for his quiet and obliging manner to all men.

MR. WALLACK.—We copy the following notice in reference to this gentleman from the Globe:—

"ALL THE YEAR ROUND."—We do not allude to the popular magazine bearing this title, but to Mr. W. H. Wallack's pleasing impersonations of the characters of the day, in what might be termed the four seasons of human life. The first of a series of these unique performances was given last night in the Music Hall, under the auspices of the Mechanics' Institution, to a large and respectable audience. It is a difficult thing even for a first-class performer to at once enchain the attention and interest of an audience for the space of nearly to hours and a half by his single, unaided effort; and certainly, if this be the evidence of merit, Mr. Wallack cannot but feel flattered by his reception on his first appearance in Toronto. The programme of the evening was quite lengthy and embraced a variety of characters, songs, and humorous anecdotes.—Among the best of these representations might be mentioned the "fop," the "housemaid," and the "speaking portrait of the French dancing master." His gallery of speaking portraits is quite a mystery in its way, and the instantaneous transitions from one to the other were at once a source of wonder and delight. The performer was frequently encored during the evening."

Mr. Wallack will give two entertainments in Peterboro, under the auspices of the "Peterboro Literary Club," Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, the 24th and 25th inst., in Hill's Music Hall.

To the Editor of the Peterboro' Examiner.

SIR,—There is a great evil in our land; an evil that is destroying many of our fellows, and I fear destroying many in the church as well as many out of it. I refer to the drinking intoxicating beverages. It may be that some people think differently, and of course practice differently from what I do, in this matter, but then the wo The drinking manages have been and are denounced by both ministers and Laymen as of Satan, and leading to ruin, and to Satan, to ruin and misery in this world and eternal misery in the next. But say some, if any are so foolish as to drink this distilled d—n, let them, every man must bear his own burden. Another says, I am none of your canting Methodists; I intend to enjoy life a little, and I can take a glass, yet I am just as good as the most of your canting pretenders, for they can drink, and spree, and dance as well as I can, go to the race course, &c., and they can [pour down a jug full behind the screen just as well as I can. A third asks, who is upholding the drinking usages and customs, and jeeringly answer, your professors, your moderate drinking christians, you tippling believers, your church members with weak stomachs, that take a little wine—nay, but whiskey, for their stomach's sake—sickly stomachs they must have, for everywhere they find the grog, (not wine) they can litterally pour it down, and this I suppose, they will call shunning the appearance of evil. The best that can be said of such christians, that they are weak kneed ones, indeed. To such we would say: Let them hoist their true colors. If God be God follow him, but if Baal follow him. And where should reformation begin, surely in the churches—amongst the followers of Christ, who says to his people "Ye are the light of the world."—Surely, Mr. Editor, there is much need for reformation in this matter, the friends of truth should bestir themselves, they have a duty to perform; professors may thwart them in this work, but if remonstrance abounds in professing christian society, then let all who love the Lord Jesus in sincerity and truth, come out from among such men, that they may not be partakers of their deeds.

TORONTO UNIVERSITY.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—Dr. Strachan's letter to Hon. R. T. Wilmot Horton, then (1827) Under Secretary of State, enclosing the Chart, furnishes so much important evidence of the [illegible] for which the Church of England Clergy [illegible] that it is proper to quote it at length:—

"I am using the liberty of enclosing for the information of Lord Goderich, an ecclesiastical chart of the Province of Upper Canada, which I believe to be correct for the present year, 1827; and from which it appears that the Church of England has made considerable progress and is rapidly increasing. The people are coming forward in all directions offering to assist in building churches and soliciting with the greatest anxiety the establishment of a settled minister. Indeed the prospect of obtaining a respectable clergyman unites neighborhoods together, and when one is sent of a mild conciliatory disposition, he is sure in any settlement in which he may be placed to form the respectable part of the inhabitants into an increasing congregation. There are in the Province 150 townships, containing from 40 to 500 families, in each of which a clergyman may be most usefully employed, and double this number will be required in less than twelve years.

When contrasted with other denominations, the Church of England need not be ashamed of the progress she has made. Till 1818 there was only one clergyman in Upper Canada a member of the Church of Scotland. This gentleman brought up his two sons in the Church of England of which they are now parish priests. After his death his congregation was split in three divisions, which with another collected at Kingston in 1822, count four congregations in all, which are in communion with the Kirk of Scotland. Two are at present vacant, and of the two Scotch clergymen now in the Province, one has applied for Holy Orders in the Church of England.

The teachers of the different denominations with the exception of the two ministers of the Church of Scotland, four Congregationalists, and a respectable English Missionary who presides over a Wesleyan Methodist meeting at Kingston, are for the most part from the United States, where they gather their knowledge and form their sentiments Indeed, the Methodist teachers are subject to the order of the conference of the United States of America, and it is manifest that the Colonial Government neither has, nor can have any other control over them or prevent them from gradually rendering a large portion of the population, by their influence and instruction, hostile to our institutions both civil and religious, than by increasing the number of the Established Clergy.

Two or three hundred clergymen living in Upper Canada in the midst of their congregations, and receiving the greater portion of their incomes from funds deposited in this country (England) must attach still more intimately the population of the colony to the parent state. Their influence would gradually spread; they would infuse into the inhabitants a tone and feeling entirely English and acquiring by degrees the direction of education which the Clergy of England have always possessed, the very first feelings, sentiments, and opinions of the youth must become British."

Such were some of the representations which the highest Episopal ecclesiastic made to the Colonial Secretary, representations which were far from truth, but which had the effect to deceive that functionary and led him, in an evil hour, to affix his signature and the Royal Seal to a charter in the terms required. And Dr. Strachan was rewarded with a sum of £1,300 stg. for his invaluable and meritorious exertions on behalf of the Episcopal Church.

I forgot to mention in the proper place that on the eve of going home, intent upon perpetrating this huge fraud, he drew a sum from the Clergy Reserve fund probably to meet the expenses of his mission. Now for the Chart submitted by the Archdeacon of York to Lord Goderich:—

Episcopalians—39 clergymen and 1 under consideration. 58 places of regular or occasional service. 45 churches, 10 of these building.

Kirk of Scotland—2 clergymen, 2 others vacant. 4 places of worship.

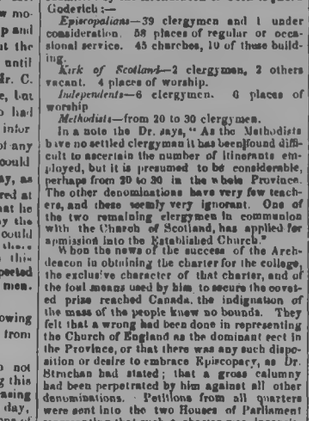
Independents—6 clergymen. 6 places of worship

Methodists—from 20 to 30 clergymen.

In a note the Dr. says, "As the Methodists have no settled clergyman it has been found difficult to ascertain the number of itinerants employed, but it is presumed to be considerable, perhaps from 20 to 30 in the whole Province. The other denominations have very few teachers, and these acemly very ignorant. One of the two remaining clergymen in communion with the Church of Scotland, has applied for admission into the Established Church."

When the news of the success of the Archdeacon in obtaining the charter for the college, the exclusive character of that charter, and of the foul means used by him to secure the coveted prize reached Canada, the indignation of the mass of the people knew no bounds. They felt that a wrong had been done in representing the Church of England as the dominant creed in the Province, or that there was any such disposition or desire to embrace Episcopacy, as Dr. Strachan had stated; that a gross calumny had been perpetrated by him against all other denominations. Petitions from all quarters were sent into the two Houses of Parliament representing that such a charter was inconsistent with the civil and religious rights of the people. Petitions were also presented to Parliament by the other denominations, praying for an enquiry into the truth of the charges and statements made by Dr. Strachan relative to the character and instructions of the respective clergy, whom he stigmatized as mixing up sedition in their public teachings. All these petitions, together with others, praying for enquiry into the principle on which the University was established, were referred to a select committee of the House of Assembly, which performed its duty impartially. Transmitting to the Dr. a copy of one of the petitions, the chairman informed him that the committee would be happy to receive from him any information upon the matters submitted to their consideration. To this communication he returned an answer declining to avail himself of the committee's offer, but adhering to the statements he had made in England. "For my opinions" he wrote "I am responsible to no one, I had no desire to conceal them, and they were, therefore, openly and publicly expressed. No consideration could have prevailed upon me to deny or misstate them, but in applying them every candid mind will feel that the general expressions used admit the existence of exception. I desire it only to be borne in mind that they were given from memory."

This is worthy of the most accomplished Jesuit, and shows the facility with which he could get out as well as get into a disgraceful transaction. The committee examined many of the leading members of both Houses, the different clergymen and many respectable persons of standing and experience, and their labors resulted in submitting to the House a thorough and reliable ecclesiastical chart of Upper Canada, showing by the most irrefragable testimony the false nature of the doctor's as will be seen by referring to it as below:



ABSTRACT of Ecclesiastical Chart, prepared by a Committee of the House of Assembly, reported 8th March, 1828.

The Roman Catholics are not given in the chart, but it is well known that they were equal in number to any other denomination in the Province. There was also a considerable number of Lutherans and Quakers of whom no notice seems to have been taken by the committee. No return seems to have been obtained from the Episcopalians of the number of communicants at regular hearers. It would be impossible to transmit a conjecture as to their amount. In a report of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign parts, for the year 1831, it is stated that "the greatest number of Church of England communicants at any one time during the year was 267." So much for the venality and honesty of the Archdeacon of York in 1827. The chart with the committee's report were submitted to the House of Assembly on the 8th March, 1828.

Dr. Strachan after these deeds it exposed is no [illegible] a position before the country which he had so misrepresented and so foully slandered; he braved all the obloquy heaped upon him, and published himself in a published pamphlet at the time, neither retracting anything of his odious misrepresenting anything he had said, but even stating that "he had been the [illegible] instrument of any in connection with the powerful [illegible] of mind." A copy of the chart was sent down to the House of Assembly by the Governor, when it appeared that it provided that the Bishop of the Diocese was to be the Visitor of the institution, that he had power to veto any or all by-laws made by the Council. The Governor was to be Chancellor. The President was to be a Clergyman in holy orders of the Church of England. The Honorable and Venerable Dr. Strachan, Arch Deacon of York, was to be the first President. The Council was to consist of the Chancellor, President and seven other persons who were to be members of the Church of England, and to sign the 39 articles of the Church of England previous to their admission to the council.

Such was the nature of the charter of the College designed as a seminary for the promotion of learning and science among the people of Canada, but by the action of one man changed into an institution for the exclusive benefit of one denomination, not by any means the most numerous.

If over this property was obtained under "false pretences," here is a case, and obtained, too, by the leading the highest ecclesiastic in Upper Canada. If ever their was a pious fraud committed, it was here. It really, at this distant date, seems almost incredulous that a man of the standing and character of Dr. Strachan should commit so foul a deed. But one has only to consult the Journals of Parliament to find the whole transactions unfolded. The successive Governors being ex-officio Chancellors, must necessarily hear the complaints entered against the exclusive character of the university, and enquire into the state of affairs, acted with fairness and impartiality in the course they pursued. Sir George Arthur, finding that the President was drawing £250 sterling per annum for doing no more than the other unpaid members of the council, put a stop to the payment. The President obtained the loan of a large sum of money from the trust, which Sir Paelett Thompson characterised as "big ty objectionable and calculated to destroy the confidence of the public in the management of the university." Despatches were sent to and received from the colonial office, and the maladministration of the institution well understood both at home as well as here.

I am, sir, yours, &c.,
J. E.

DISGRACEFUL.

Last week's Review contains a slanderous attack on Mr. John Carroll, Crown Land Agent for Peterborough. That Paul Pry sheet says the minister of public works responded to its application, and sent it (the Review) a copy of Mr. Carroll's bill for services "not performed." The Review says Mr. Carroll received orders not to proceed with the work "a week or two before the period fixed for commencing operations," and that no actual work could have been entered upon. The Review charges Mr. Carroll's item as "bogus" and his bill "an attempt to swindle the Ontario Government.

Now, surely the Ontario Government has not called in the aid of the Review, for John Sandfield knows the Review too well to think he will gain anything by the support of so doubtful a character. If that paper seeks faithfully to discharge a public duty we find no fault; nay, rather we congratulate it on thus turning over a new leaf; but we do not congratulate it in this attempt to injure the character of a man who is of a different school of politics, and too enlightened, liberal and manly to lend himself to the bread and butter principles of the Review.

We have seen the correspondence of the Government in the Burleigh Road affair, and we are in a position to assert that a more untruthful statement than that of the Review anent the Burleigh Road was never in print.

On the 2nd of April, 1867, Mr. Carroll was appointed to take charge of the works to be done this season upon the Burleigh Colonization Road, with instructions to commence the work as soon as it be deemed expedient, but not later than the 1st of June. On the 2nd of April the Government sent Mr. Carroll "placards, calling for tenders for boarding the men, &c. On the 26th of April Mr. Carroll was advised by the Government of the sanctioning of the boarding tenders. On the 17th of May Mr. Carroll received a letter, instructing him to stop all operations, pending further consideration of the subject by the Government. And not until the first of July did Mr. Carroll receive a letter from the Crown Land Department advising him that it was "not the intention of the Government to resume operations on the Burleigh Road this season." The same letter instructed him to sell all the stores and get in the claims of the contractors.

We ask of an impartial public if Mr. Carrol was not in the employment of the Government until the first of July; as for the rate of pay, $5 per diem, that is the Government allowance on all the Colonization Roads—$3 per day for services, and $2 for the keep of a horse.

If the Review had been honest it would have told the public that Mr. Carroll has to supply vouchers for every item, pay sheets signed by the men, and receipts for payments made, and affidavits for stores supplied. The pay list is vouched for—

The item to R. Romaine for advertising, the Review knows was paid.

Brethern was paid.

The charge of $5 for postage is the ordinary government allowance, and if it cost $30 only $5 would be paid.

The charge of $193.02 for boarders and contractors claim was so small that Mr. Carroll deserves credit for the favorable terms obtained in the settlement with the contractors for non-fulfilment of contract by the Government and loss on sale of stores. As to the item for loss on hay and oats, it happens that the charge does not cover the loss by a considerable amount.

If any one will take the trouble to look into the printed estimates for 1867 it will be seen that by this attempt to swindle, as the Review calls it, cost the Government less than any of the Colonization Roads except the Mississippi Road, as the statement below shows:—

COLONIZATION ROADS.

On account of Lavant Road	$1,500
" Peterson	50
" Baltcaygeon	1,100
" Northern	5,000
" Korah	900
" Rosseau & Nipissing	2,500
" Frontenac Road	1,200
" Mississippi	500

We may add that on the Peterson Road no expenses were inearred, and the item of $50 was paid the agent as a gratuity against his own disappointment.

It is well known that Mr. Carroll's management of the Burleigh Road has been more satisfactory than that of any other Road, and has given more work for the money.

We need only add in conclusion that Mr. Carroll only sent in his account to the Government last week. The memorandum published by the Review was only an approximation and differs from the bill sent in. Mr Carroll's account has not been refused payment by the Government.

We shall always rejoice to find the Review on the side of economy, but we would rejoice more to find it acting on free principles and dealing honestly with men in public positions, not going out of its way to distort and gratify a private spleen under pretense of discharging a public duty. The much abused John Carroll is too much of a man to sell his principles for a mess of potage, and reptile-like crawl in the dust, and the Review and its patrons may as well save their powder for he will not turn his coat though it will enable him to enjoy Government pap. The citizens of this county are proud of a man who, though tried in every way, has yet the manhood to act a manly part and call his soul his own. He can go to any part of the country where he is known and hold out a hand which has never done a mean thing or violated a law of his country. He lives under no forged character, but is and always will be what now he appears.

If the Editor of the Review desires very much to punish Mr. Carroll, we would say to him that it would be much more manly to take a cudgel to him than reptile-like (to be ever, by false pretense and forged attacks, committing a man so much his superior. By the way, we wonder where the open fraud editor first tried his hand in the little act of using other people's names?

TRUTH.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms; Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling fits, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and self-administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

N B—A for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 22

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalising the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

STARTLING NEWS!

THE subscriber, who has for some time past been keeping cool, allowing the enormous amount of gas, with which the Dry Goods and Clothing atmosphere has been impregnated, to escape—in order to prevent explosion—now begs to inform his many customers, and the public generally, that owing to the increase in the GENTLEMEN'S CLOTHING DEPARTMENT, which occupies nearly all his premises—from top to bottom—and is still increasing, he has been compelled to CLOSE UP THE LADIES' DEPARTMENT in the meantime; and this being the case, he has thought it his duty—plainly, calmly and truthfully—to inform his patrons of the fact; as also to inform them, one and all, that

ON THE SECOND DAY OF MARCH NEXT

he will commence

SELLING OFF

the whole of his varied stock of

LADIES' GOODS,

Comprising Prints, Cobourgs, Delaines, Ginghams, Ribbons, Parasols, Muslins, with a great many other variations in that department too numerous to mention.

The Goods will all be marked in plain figures, at such unprecedented low prices as can not fail to command sales in every case, when they are carefully and impartially examined; say at 75 cents in the Dollar on former prices, and without any humbug or puffing, on this the public may rest satisfied. As it is the determination of the subscriber to go very extensively into the Clothing Business in the Spring, the Ladies' Goods must be sold off to make room.

To all those who really wish BARGAINS, the subscriber would say—they will find if they call early that there is no puffing in the establishment, but stubborn facts.

In addition to the above which is specially intended for the LADIES, he would say to his numerous

GENTLEMEN CUSTOMERS

That, not only is his stock of READY MADE CLOTHING—large and varied, but his stock of Tweeds—English, Scotch and Canadian, is also extensive, and will be greatly increased during the Spring. He would also say, that having a first class Cutter on the premises (MR. JAMES MEMZIES) he is prepared to make suits to order to those who may wish them, at very low rates, and when the cloth is bought on the premises, there will be NO CHARGE FOR CUTTING.

Just received, 200 pieces CANADIAN TWEEDS, made to order expressly for the establishment.

Also, FELT HATS of all varieties, comprising, Planters, Opera, Peabody, and many other Styles.

To one and all, both great and small,
I'll in conclusion say—
Economy is no disgrace
When used in any way.

No better plan, go where you can,
With truth, can any say,
Is offered the economical,
Than buying goods of F. Lemay.

If this you doubt, please do come out,
And do not prejudiced be,
Give him fair play, just in this way—
Judge not until you see.

The Great English Remedy.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition, but a sure and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorized Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

VERY NATURAL.

When a person has proved an article and found it good, and answering the purpose for which it is intended, he will not readily abandon it for one of doubtful reputation or concerning which he knows nothing. We are led to make these remarks owing to the success always perceived by those who have used that celebrated and truly valuable home-medicine known as "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy"—all are so well pleased with it that they will not use any other; many have waited several weeks until they could obtain it, so great is the supply. There is nothing equal to it as conditioner. Medicine, or for any complaint affecting the wind of horses.

Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurlbut & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., appears on the Constant Bold by all Medicine Dealers.

HEAD-QUARTERS.

A SURE and reliable remedy in all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Nostrum, puffed up by high pressure humbug, but are the result of years of careful study, experiment, and close attention to the first duty of a physician, viz., to know what he prescribes, when they are prescribed, to benefit the patient. Many of the most eminent men in the profession have used, and have recorded their unqualified approbation of their wonderful properties. They do not profess to be a cure-all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they invariably act as a perfect remedy. We have in our possession, were one necessary, hundreds of testimonials from those who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:—

J. H. GIBSON, M. D., Dunham, C. E.
C. E. CUTTON, M. D., Stanstead.
CHARLES BROWN, M. D., Cedarville.
S. S. TUPPER, M. D., Sudbury.

A SPECIFIC for Rheumatism or Neuralgia. A dose of any kind of Liquor will relieve it. Sore Throat, Cold in the Head and Diphtheria, Burns or Frost Bites, Scratches on Horses, &c., &c.

JACOBS' RHEUMATIC LIQUID

is an internal as well as an external remedy, and is the only one that always gives entire satisfaction, and all who once use it will never consent to change it for any other.

WE HAVE IN OUR POSSESSION testimonials recorded to it by thousands who have used it, and voluntarily certify to its merits. Buy a bottle and satisfy yourself that it is the best remedy ever offered.

MRS. WINSLOW'S

SOOTHING SYRUP!

FOR CHILDREN TEETHING,

GREATLY facilitates the process of teething by softening the gums, reducing all inflammation—will allay ALL PAIN and spasmodic action, and is

SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Depend upon it, mothers, it will give rest to yourselves, and

Relief and Health to your Infants.

We have put up and sold this article for years, and CAN SAY IN CONFIDENCE AND TRUTH of it what we have never been able to say of any other medicine—NEVER HAS IT FAILED IN A SINGLE INSTANCE TO EFFECT A CURE, when time'y used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak of terms of commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "WHAT WE DO KNOW" after years of experience, AND PLEDGE OUR REPUTATION FOR THE FULFILMENT OF WHAT WE HERE DECLARE. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper.

Sold by druggists throughout the world.

Price, only 25 Cents per Bottle.

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

"WASHINGTON AT MOUNT VERNON."

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST publishes a beautiful steel engraving, "WASHINGTON AT MOUNT VERNON," size 24 by 30 inches wide—to any subscriber who pays in advance for 1868.

The following original novelets are already on hand for 1868. THE DEATH SHADOW ON THE POPLARS, by Mrs. Margaret Hosmer, author of "In the Meshes of the Net;" "SETTING THE WORLD," by Arthur Lee, Esq., author of "In Trust," &c.; "ST. GEORGE AND THE DRAGON, by Elizabeth Prescott, author of "How a Woman Had Her Way," &c.

We also give the BEST STORIES, &c., from the English Magazines, with ESSAYS, SKETCHES, LETTERS, AGRICULTURAL ARTICLES, NEWS OF THE WEEK, &c.

THE POST is NEUTRAL IN POLITICS, being exclusively devoted to Literature, and does not discuss Political or Sectarian questions—leaving these to the political and religious press.

Under it among its premiums, a great variety of Sewing Machines, Wheeler & Wilson's Sewing Machine, Silver Plated Tea Sets, Spoons, and Pitchers, Gold and Silver Watches, Double Barrel Guns, Croquet, Clothes' Wringers, Appleton's Cyclopedias &c.

☞ A SPLENDID OFFER.—As we began a very powerful and interesting story called "ONE OF THE FAMILY," in THE POST of November 23rd, we will send all new subscribers the papers back to that date, until our extra edition is exhausted. These six papers will be of course in addition to the regular for 1868, and no charge will be made for them.

DIRECTORS—Hon. James Cockburn, (Speaker of the House of Commons of Canada,) Charles Perry, Esq., M. P., T. M. Grover, Esq., M. P., Henry Chrysler, Esq., H. C. Rogers, Esq., Col. A. T. H. Williams, M. P. P., John Burnham, Esq., Barrister, W. H. Scott, Esq., Mayor, Peterborough, J. Stephenson, Esq.

PRESIDENT—W. H. Scott, Esq.
SOLICITORS—Weller & Hatton.
MANAGING DIRECTOR—H. C. Rogers.
TREASURER—John Burnham.
SECRETARY—Edg. Pearce.

This Company is organized for the purpose of developing the mineral resources of the west half of lot number Twenty in Concession A, in the Township of Galway, County of Peterborough, in the Province of Ontario and Dominion of Canada, and for the purpose of mining, smelting, and otherwise preparing for market, the ores of all kinds of metals and minerals, together with the acquisition, employment, and disposal of all lands, mines, or ores, or granting to others the right to mine, smelt, or prepare for market, the ores of all metals and minerals that may be found of advantage to the interests of the Company.

The already acquired property of the Company, the west half of Lot Twenty, Concession A, Galway, is extremely rich in Lead, Iron Sulphate of Baryte, and Silver, quantities of each of which have already been taken by the promoters of the Company off this portion of the lot, which from the assays of Dr. Otway, show the following favorable results; Sulphur 23 per cent, Lead 77 per cent, Silver in Lead 16oz. 13dwt 8grs., to the Ton, proving beyond a doubt the great value of the property. The original owners of the property have already spent about one thousand dollars in opening up the mineral veins that intersect the Lot, and in pushing an adit or tunnel through a hill upon the property.

The property is situated on the Bobcaygeon Road, about 13 miles from Bobcaygeon, at which place communication can easily be obtained to Lindsay or Peterborough, thence by the P. H. L. and R. Railway to Port Hope. Ore or goods can thus be transferred at all seasons from the property to Port Hope, or vice versa at a cost not exceeding $5 per ton.

The original Proprietors have already conveyed the property to the Rev. Mark Burnham, of Ashburnham, in trust to be reconveyed by him to the Company when organized.

The Trustee of the Company has a perfect title to the said parcel of land so that no delay need occur in commencing operations, and an immediate return on the capital invested may be anticipated.

CANCERS CURED!

By a new, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay is required, until the cure is complete. The moment a cancer is discovered, it should be cured, as it will cost less and is more speedily cured than when of longer standing, and there is nothing to gain, and everything to lose by delay. What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, eye-lid or elsewhere, or small wart or sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given to parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. No money required in advance, and none until the cure is complete.

FURS! FURS!

CAUTION.

THE public are hereby cautioned against purchasing Colored and Russian Mink for Canada Mink. The Canada is superior to any in the world, and is therefore the most valuable. This has induced wholesale dealers to imitate our Canada Mink, not only by coloring Russian, but also by coloring United States Mink. The Canada costs more than double that of any other country, which enables dealers to make a large profit on the spurious article. Those buying Furs in Montreal or other places should beware least they get the inferior article for which they will no doubt have to pay full prices. Take care, therefore, for I have been shown articles purchased as genuine in Montreal, which I can certify were colored and of inferior quality.

Those who buy any article of my own manufacture, I will warrant to be genuine, of best quality, and best workmanship, and at lower prices than any wholesale dealer will supply the same article.

A call is respectfully solicited.

Poetry.

My Friends—Can I Forget!

My buried friends can I forget,
Or must the grave eternal sever?
They linger in my memory yet,
And in my heart they'll live forever.
They loved me once with love sincere,
And never did their love deserve me;
But often in my conflicts here,
They rallied quickly to relieve me.

I heard them bid the world adieu,
I saw them on the rolling billow;
Their far off home appeared in view,
While yet they prest their dying pillow.
I heard the parting pilgrim tell,
While crossing Jordan's gloomy river,
Adieu to earth, for all is well—
Now all is well with me forever.

I fain would weep, but what of tears—
No tears of mine could o'er recall these;
Nor would I wish that grovelling cares,
Care like mine should o'er befall them.
They rest in realms of light and love;
They dwell upon the mount of glory;
They bask in beams of bliss above;
And about to tell the pleasing story.

Oh, how I long to join your wing,
And range your fields of blooming flowers;
Come, holy watchers—come and bring
A mourner to your blissful bowers.
I'd speed with rapture on my way;
Nor would I pause at Jordan's river;
With songs I'd enter endless day,
And live with my loved friends forever.

DEBATE ON IRISH REFORM.

In the House of Commons on the 16th the debate on Irish reform was resumed in Committee of the whole. Mr. Gregory, member for Galway, rose in support of Mr. Maguire's resolutions and denounced the long continued English misgovernment of Ireland. Of this there seemed to be no end, for now when the Irish people asked for reform in the land, in the Church and in the educational system the ministers evaded their demands and offered them other changes which they did not want. eH denied that that there were any persons among the Roman Catholic clergy who favoured the present system of national schools.

Mr. Gladstone then took the floor, and for the first time in this debate gave his views on the question at issue. He said Irish tenants were wanting in enterprise, and should be encouraged by every possible means in making improvements on their farms. As to the Church establishment, it was the duty of the Ministers of the Crown to mark out and submit a definite plan for the treatment of that subject; and meanwhile Parliament should lose no time in declaring itself in favor of religious equality in Ireland. He entertained hope that the Ministry fully realized the gravity of the crisis. It was vain to rely upon time as a cure for the evil. Seven hundred years had thus been wasted. The Irish inhabitants of Canada and Australia were contented, and the great reason for their content was that they possessed the fruits of their own labor, and enjoyed civil and religious equality; but in Ireland the discontent was wide and deep; the alleged material prosperity of Ireland was a proof of this, for notwithstanding the improving condition of the country, as described by some of the gentlemen who had preceded him, no one seemed surprised that the people of Ireland should complain at the same time of their misery. The crisis was a grave one, not only on account of the rapid depopulation of the Island by emigration, on account of the condition of those who remained in the country. It was the imperative duty of the Government to give this question their early and earnest attention. Mr. Gladstone then proceeded to review, one by one, the measures of relief which the Ministry had proposed for Ireland. The only one of which he approved of was that for political reform. He said in 1845 the adoption of a bill for relief of Irish tenants was urgently pressed by Sir Robert Peel, but without success; and all efforts made since that time to carry similar measures had failed. He deprecated an inquiry into the Irish church establishment. It was known that the system was generally disliked. He ridiculed the excuses for delay in this matter given by the government, and closed his speech with an eloquent appeal to the House to take immediate action.

Mr. Disraeli followed Mr. Gladstone. He commenced by saying that he had reason to deplore his fate in attaining to office when a crisis of seven hundred years standing had to be settled—a supernatural emergency. Even the Ministry which preceded that of Lord Derby had neglected these wrongs of ages. He then went on to combat the arguments of Mr. Gladstone against five out of the six measures embraced in the Government plan for the relief of Irish grievances. He denied that the action of the Fenian organization controlled events, or effected the plans of the Ministry. Fenian outrages should prompt no measure and hasten no policy. The members of the House, he hoped, were not alarmed by the speeches of men who, when in power, did nothing but make speeches, some for Ireland and some for the Irish Church. He admitted that the state of the Irish Church establishment was not satisfactory, but why should they unsettle a system which had been in operation for three hundred years. Under the influence of a panic he declared that if pressed to an issue on this question, the Government would feel justified in making an appeal to the country. There had already been too many measures of violence, too much confiscation of property in Ireland. No measure could be called conciliatory which outraged the rights of a million and a half of men. Mr. Disraeli concluded by assuring the House that the Ministry were disposed to consider all the questions which had arisen in regard to Ireland, and all they asked for was time.

Mr. Maguire's resolution was then withdrawn and the debate ended.

If a burnt child dreads the fire, why does a person who has been singed by Cupid's torch so often have a lingering regard for the old flame?

THE ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITION

Colonel Sykes forwards to the London Times a letter from a friend attached to the Abyssinian expedition, which contains a racy account of his experiences. The letter is dated Udeda, Nov. 6th. The following is the extract:—

"We commence our day at 4.30, p. m., getting up and riding out in different parties shooting. The jungle was full of game when we first arrived, and all kinds, but now they are getting shy, and we have great difficulty in stocking the larder. We, however, manage to do it. This is a most peculiar country. There seems to be but very few inhabitants. We are now in the low country, which is very poor indeed.—You may ride four miles and perhaps not see any one, and when you do they are poor wretches, half starved looking creatures, and both men and women have a strong resemblance to the monkey tribe. The men go about in the costume of our first parents, and the women with a skin tied round their loins; they have nothing on their heads at all except a tuft over the forehead; the ladies do the same, but some shave between the tuft and the back hair. They are a very excitable race. A good many come to see us, and they think nothing of going up to a Sepoy when eating and helping themselves unasked. Money is no use here for small purchases. If we want milk we give rice in exchange, but in buying stock such as goats, mules, &c., dollars are taken. There is little or no cultivation. I have ridden a good deal about the neighborhood, and been long distances, but have only once seen a patch of ground over which a plough had passed. Our locality is very pretty, high hills all around us, and we cannot get out any way without going through a pass. The soil is sandy and large stones, very nasty ground for horses. There are not any roads of any kind, but simply foot tracks. The jungle is thick and full of rambul (Mimosa Arabica) trees, and the thorns touch us up occasionally. We are obliged to go about armed and in parties, as the John race attack and murder unarmed men, so our pistols are always loaded. We are rather 'up a tree' about carriage. It seems the men did not understand the order, and have brought with them about 200 lb. weight of kit each man instead of 40 lb., and we shall have to leave a good number of pots and pans behind when we advance. It is said a regiment of cavalry and one of infantry will be left in the low country to defend the passes. Our horses are not fit to go at all. Whether their constitutions are bad, and are, therefore, unable to stand the reaction after being shut up for three weeks on board ship, or whether the grass they get is bad, I can't say; but we have lost sixteen since we landed. I am writing in a superior officer's tent, with a double fly, at 4 p. m., and the thermometer is at 96 degrees. I was awoke last night by my dog barking. Lucitly I had got a light, as ——, who shares my tent, was sick. Getting out of bed, I heard a hissing noise, and rousing my friend and looking about we soon found a snake under my bed. On returning from shooting this morning I found one of the largest scorpions I had ever seen snugly ensconced in a pair of slippers; the beasts are beginning to find comfortable places for themselves in our tents."

From the letter of the Morning Post's Abyssinian correspondent we take the following description of a curious race, which forms one branch of the Abyssinian service, called the "Pantans," natives of Afghanistan who accompany the land transport corps, and are grand specimens of the human race, strong and active, muscular, broad-chested fellows; nearly all six feet in height, they are capable of any exertion, but morally are the greatest ruffians unhung. Nothing but a liberal application of the whip will keep them in order, and the excellent discipline maintained is a striking illustration of the power of mind over matter. These are the fellows who so worshipped the celebrated General Nicholson twenty-five years ago that they dubbed him a saint, and he gained his supremacy entirely by the policy "a word and a blow," only the blow always came first. The artisans attached to the corps are Chinese, so there is a considerable confusion of manners, customs and tongues. Babel is a fool to it.

The following is an extract from a letter of an officer at Mulkutto, the camping-ground near Zulla: "The hills around form the parade ground of troops of shaggy baboons. There are any amount of hyenas; but we have seen no lions, tigers or elephants as yet, though traces of the latter have been observed. The deer are very plentiful, as also the guinea fowl, spur fowl, hares and the little 'Ben Israel' deer; the rock grouse flock in tens of thousands to the water at Weenh and Hadoda, and B. brought down a couple of teal at the former place. Splendid large hogs have been seen, but not killed. The few natives we have seen have become very friendly, and make themselves quite at home, even to attempting to hobnob with us over our meals. They are armed with a spear and a shield and a crescent-shaped sword, which would part a man's back hair, over his shield. Their hair is plaited into innumerable small 'finger,' and is full dress each of these is frizzled out, forming clouds of hair, through which they wear a large wooden pin, very necessary for allaying irritation. We have visited Arafalla on the coast, at the head of Annesley Bay, and found good water in wells and a splendid encamping ground for an army of 20,000 men. There is a little burn-up forage here but the rains which are expected daily will turn this place into a fine grass field. The thermometer since about 100 to 105 degrees in the daytime and as low as 64 degrees at night. We have no sickness, not having time to get ill, and all are very jolly indeed—horses and all."

Quin, being asked by a lady why there were more women in the world than men, replied, "It is in conformity with the other arrangements of Nature, madam; we always see more of heaven than earth."

What class of women are most apt to give time to society?—The belles.

Reprimand of the Rev. S. H. Tyng, jr.

According to the decree of the ecclesiastical court, which sentenced the Rev. S. H. Tyng, jr., to receive a public admonition at the hands of the Right Reverend Bishop Potter, for having violated the canon relative to the parish boundaries, that gentleman was reprimanded on Saturday, in the presence of a large congregation, at the Church of the Transfiguration, in East Twenty-ninth street, near Fifth avenue. The doors were open at eleven o'clock. At noon, the religious services preceding the admonition were commenced, the officiating clergymen being the Rev. Dr. Geo. A. Houghton, Rector of the Church. There were present, in the chancel, the Rev. Drs. Eigenbrodt, McVickar, and Dix, delegates from the standing committee of the diocese, the Rev. Mr. Hollingsworth of Portchester, and the Rev. Drs. Moore and Hudson of this city, members of the ecclesiastical court before whom Mr. Tyng was tried. Mr. Tyng and his father, the Rev. Doctor, were also present. These two occupied a front view in the middle aisle. The Right Rev. Bishop Potter sat in front of the altar during the delivery of the admonition, which occupied about three quarters of an hour, and the Rev. Mr. Tyng remained seated in front of him. The Bishop rehearsed the finding of the court, said that he approved of it, and gave reasons why it was necessary to uphold it. The point of his remarks was, that discipline must be observed among the clergy in order to make their ministry effectual; that the violation of a canon law, as in this case, would, if allowed to pass unnoticed, open wide the door for the introduction of disorder and conflict; that hereafter some "young clergymen, with the rashness so natural to youth, a fiery temper, and too narrow views of christian truth, might enter the parochial cure of another clergyman and send out his more than ambiguous words to turn the heads of the people with new-fangled ideas of religion, inflame their passions, and in time stir up and organize a violent opposition against the peaceful steady-going ministers of God's church." The service closed by reading the prayer in the Institution Office for the preservation of the church and benediction by the Bishop. At the close of the services the friends of the Rev. Mr. Tyng murmured their dissatisfaction at the proceedings, and were becoming boisterous, when a number of police who were present informed them that no such conduct would be allowed. The congregation then dispersed. After the audience had been dismissed, the Rev. Dr. Tyng, father of the respondent, advanced to the altar and placed in the hands of the Bishop a protest, in which he brands the "whole proceeding, from its commencement to its conclusion, as false in its allegations, unjust in its principle, uncanonical in its form, illegal in its transactions, iniquitous in its purposes, and voluntarily and persistently persecuting in its spirit, process, and development." He also appeals to "the Supreme and final decision of the General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States."

THE TYNG CASE.

(From Boston Journal)

As already mentioned, the clergy and laity present at the admonition to Rev. Stephen H. Tyng, Jr., of New York, by Bishop Potter, on Saturday, held a meeting to protest against that proceeding, and appointed a committee to make arrangements for a public meeting. A good deal of feeling found vent at this preliminary assembly.

Rev. Dr. John Cotton Smith said, a conflict had been inaugurated which demands resistance on the part of all evangelical ministers. It was impossible that they could submit to the action of the Court and Bishop, whose reprimand of Mr. Tyng had been grossly unjust. It struck at the foundations of all the operations of the evangical party. To ask him to submit on any ground of expediency was simply to urge him to occupy a position which he was unwilling to assume. The apostolic command was to preach the gospel, and they might all remember the woe pronounced upon all who, having the truth in them, refused to proclaim it. He (Dr. Smith) did not know how the High Church party were going to maintain their ground, as expressed by the Bishop in his admonition, without determining upon the expulsion of the evangelical members of the Church. For one, he had no desire to stand up in defiance of the decision; but if he were called upon in God's providence to preach the gospel, he would do it under any and all circumstances. They of the Episcopal Church had not enjoyed more of God's blessing, and the presence of His Holy Spirit, merely because they had allowed themselves to be given over much to exclusivism.

Rev. Dr. Dyer said, it would take a great many more such admonitions as they had listened to, before he would feel ashamed to preach the gospel. He remembered how the Nonconformists and the Wesleyans were driven out of the Church of England, and the world to-day bore witness to the great work in the spreading of the gospel which had resulted. The Nonconformists and the Wesleyans were not driven out because of false doctrine, but because they found the rules of human origin weak and futile and impracticable, if the Word of God were to be preached to all the people. He held that, at present, they were associated together with a party who did here false doctrine; and, he said, it would be better a thousand times that they were driven out than to remain yoked with those who preached false doctrine. If they remain, it must only be to inherit God's curse. Dr. Dyer expressed his profound regret that the Bishop had compromised the dignity of his lofty office to become a partizan. He did not desire to make too much of his case, but they must look the issue coolly in the face.

Rev. Dr. Ridgely advised secession until such time as means could be taken to preserve a voice of the Church on the question, when the members could rise and demand the abrogation of the obnoxious canon.

Another clergyman said the movement against Mr. Tyng was a wrong and a sin against God and the Church, and when remedies was concluded upon as their duty, they might believe in receiving God's blessing upon their labors.

Rev. Dorlon B. Brewer, of Brooklyn, said he would accept the first opportunity to preach in what had been unworthily termed a "Methodist meeting-house," if all the the High Church Presbyters in New York and all the Bishops in Christendom should remonstrate against his doing it.

Rev. Mr. Gray, of Sharon Point, regarded the whole case in regard to Mr. Tyng as a development of local tyranny. He believed that obedience to such a decision as had been laid down was a matter for conscience to decide upon.

Rev. J. Crosbie claimed that men had right to entertain their own independent views as to the meaning of canons; they were human, not divine, and any interference with such an expression of opinion was unscriptural and unchristian.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted:—

Resolved,—That we, clergymen and laymen, who were present this morning at the Church of the Transfiguration, on the occasion of the public reprimand of the Rev. S. H. Tyng, jour., do hereby tender to our brother our deepest sympathy in the late trials to which he has been subjected, and which culminated in a public admonition by the ecclesiastical authority of the diocese; and we trust that Divine grace may be given to maintain him in the noble position which he has taken.

LEAP YEAR—ITS ORIGIN.

The present year being leap year, belongs, of course—emphatically, and by virtue of immemorial custom, to the ladies. It is their privilege—the privilege of the unmarried few—to usurp the prerogative of the males, and to propose where they think there is a likely chance of acceptance. And then, should they be unsuccessful, there is the usual levy of a silk gown from the unfortunate and unrelenting bachelor, or, as we hear (by special command of the Empress of the French) an embroidered chignon. It is not unreasonable just now to refer to the origin of the leap year superstition by the ladies. One day St. Patrick, after having driven the frogs out of the bogs and banished all the varmint, was walking along the shores of Lough Neagh, when he was accosted by St. Bridget in tears. St. Patrick elated that a mutiny had arisen among the vestals in the convent over which she presided and that they one and all struck prayer until they should establish equal rights in the matter of "popping the question" with the men of the opposite sex, as St. Bridget naively expressed it. St Patrick said he was ready to concede one year in seven. But when it was almost arranged, the saintess, throwing her lovely arms around St. Patrick's neck, exclaimed—"Arrah, Patrick, jewel, I dosren't go back to the girls with such a proposal; make one year in four." St. Patrick delayed answering as long as he could, but finding that the saintess retained her hold, he exclaimed, smacking his lips, "Bridget asthore! squeeze me that way agin' an' I'll give you leap year—the longest year of the lot." St. Bridget took him at his word, and having once got the concession, proceeded to test his good faith—for it happened to be leap year—by asking the saint if he would allow her the pleasure of leading him to the hymeneal alter on that day month. Of course it would never have done for St. Patrick to marry, so he was obliged to patch up the matter with another kiss and a present of a silk gown—whence the modern custom originated. If this year the additional tax of a chignon is imposed on the unwilling, we must remember that, short skirts being in vogue, the dress is less expensive, and that the modern appliances of modern civilization have rendered silk dresses less expensive than in the time of good St. Patrick's day.

How Napoleon Travels.

The special train in which the Emperor Napoleon went with his suite from Paris to Salzburg, is described as exceeding in comfort and elegance anything of the kind that has hitherto been known. The train consisted of nine carriages, communicating with each other by tastefully decorated bridges. In the middle was a handsome sitting room, furnished with chairs, ottomans, sofas, mirrors, pictures, clocks, and chandeliers. On one side of the room was the dining room, and on the other the Emperor's study. In the middle of the dining room there was a table, capable of being extended or contracted at pleasure, with easy chairs placed parallel to the sides of the carriage. The Emperor's study contained an elegant writing table, a clock in the style of the renaissance, a thermometer, a barometer, and a telegraph apparatus, by means of which telegraphic communication was established with the apartments of the various Court officials travelling with His Majesty. Next to the study was the bedroom of the Emperor and Empress, with two beds placed transversely against the sides of the carriage. Two dressing rooms were attached to the bedroom. The remaining carriages consisted of a kitchen, a wine cellar, and the apartments of the Emperor's suite. There was also a conservatory filled with the choicest flowers.

A little three-year-old boy, already set apart for a lawyer's calling, being taken in hand with a rod, after having been forbidden to pick another poor fruit, fearfully exclaimed,—"Mamma, I did not pick off the pear; you come and see if I did." Sure enough he didn't. He simply stood there and ate it, and the core was still dangling from the stem.

Steamboat Explosion on the Ohio.

EIGHTY LIVES LOST—LATEST PARTICULARS.

Navigation on the Ohio, opens unusually this spring. On Thursday at noon the Maysville packet Magnolia left her wharf in Cincinnati with 120 passengers, a crew of 40 persons, and a full cargo of freight for Maysville about 60 miles up the river. At about 1 o'clock, after the boat had made about 12 miles of her trip, her boiler exploded, tearing up her deck, projecting great beams of freight high in the air, and tearing away a great portion of the cabins. Many persons were killed outright; others were blown up 40 or 50 feet above the deck and blown far out in the stream; others were severely scalded on deck, others suffocated by escaping steam, others were burned; and, when the steamer's upper works caught fire, many took refuge from the speedily advancing flames by leaping overboard. Soon after the bursting forth of the fire, the shrieks and groans of the wounded and struggling travellers were drowned by a terrific explosion of powder in the engaging, and then thousands of splinters and missiles, were raised down upon their heads. Those of the most seriously scalded and mangled, unable to crawl from the burning decks, were literally roasted alive. It is believed that about 40 persons perished.

The Magnolia was built in Cincinnati in 1859, and owned by Capt. J. H. Prather, David Gibson, O. T. Shaw (first clerk), and Mr. Gardner, all of whom were on board at the time of the disaster. She was valued at $30,000, and insured for $20,000. The following is a list of the passengers and crew killed, missing, or supposed to have been lost, as far as ascertained:

Killed—Capt. Prather, James Stevens, second engineer; Perry Miller, second mate; Wm. Evans, bar-tender; Mary Cooper, chambermaid; John Reed, of Ohio, Wm. Evans, boatman; Miss French, of Macon Co., Kentucky, supposed to have been drowned; B. Bradford, of Ripley, Ohio, reported lost; six deck hands names unknown, reported lost. Total, 15.

Injured—Henry Clark of Adams Express, badly wounded; Mr. Gardner one of the owners of the boat, badly hurt; Mr Burton, bar-tender, bruised; James McFarland, of Terre Haute, Indiana, severely injured.

The Magnolia's yarl boat, making trips between the wreck and the shore, picked up as many persons as she could carry, and several skiffs, which were sent out from the town of California, assisted in rescuing persons from drowning. The Chief Engineer tried the boilers a few minutes before the explosion, and found them full of water. Those persons on the after part of the boat who were either drowned by leaping overboard, or were burned to death.

THE LATEST—EIGHTY PERSONS LOST.

Evening—It is now ascertained that fully 140 persons were on board the ill-fated steamer Magnolia, 60 of whom were lost. The passenger list was destroyed, and the names cannot be learned, as the books and papers were burned.

THE DURATION OF PARLIAMENT.

The Minister of Justice has introduced the following brief bill into the House of Commons:—

"Whereas, the peace, welfare and security of this Dominion, might be exposed to great dangers if the Parliament of Canada should be dissolved by the demise of Our Sovereign Lady, Queen Victoria, (whom God long preserve) or by the demise of any of Her Majesty's heirs and successors. For remedy thereof, Her Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate and House of Commons of Canada enacts as follows:—

"1. No Parliament of Canada, heretofore or hereafter summoned, or called by our Sovereign Lady the Queen, or her heirs and successors, shall determine or be dissolved by the demise of the Crown, but such Parliament shall continue, and may meet, convene and sit, proceed and act, notwithstanding such demise of the Crown, in the same manner as if such demise had not happened.

"2. Nothing in the next preceding section shall alter or abridge the power of the Crown, to prorogue or dissolve the Parliament of Canada."

Our French contemporary Le Nouveau Monde objects to this bill on rather high Conservative grounds. It looks upon the dissolution of Parliament on the demise of the Crown as a fitting mark of respect and as calculated to impress the whole community with the greatness of the loss it has suffered in the death of the reigning sovereign. Whatever force there may be in this objection, there is no question that the practice which it is the object of this bill to repeal, so far as this Dominion is concerned, sprung from very different motives. The Sovereign being the head of the nation, his or her death was accepted as the death of the Parliament which was the creature of the Sovereign's will. The creator gone the creature went with it. And, we apprehend, no English minister will attempt to change the practice so far as Great Britain is concerned. It is different with Canada, which has distinct powers of legislation—powers derived not from the Queen directly but from her representative, who in calling together a Canadian Parliament has in view the well-being of the Dominion rather than any reasons which spring from Imperial objects or purposes. We think the Minister of Justice has acted wisely in bringing in this bill, though, no doubt, it will have to be reserved for the signification of the Queen's pleasure.—Leader.

THE BALL AND CHAIN.—The St. Catharines Journal says the hard cases and bummers in that town are about to have a hard time. The mayor has decided to put in force the ball and chain system on prisoners sentenced to hard labor.—They will be employed on the public streets, in charge of a constable, cracking stones. We believe the warden of this county intends to adopt the same system here, so far as compelling prisoners sentenced to hard labor to work. Instead of breaking stones in the street, it is intended to have them saw wood, break stone, and do other work in the gaol yard. A movement in the right direction.

NEW SENATOR.—Mr. Benson, member of the Commons for Lincoln, has been appointed Senator to fill the place of the late Hon. Mr Ryan. A new election will have to take place for Lincoln.

A Twag case on a small scale has happened in Cobourg. Rev. S. Jones, of Belleville (a former Cobourg curate), was invited to come up and take part in the Bible Society meeting. But here Mr. Stennet, the Cobourg rector, stepped in, and forbade Mr. Jones coming into his parish (?) without permission. To avoid collision, Mr. Jones withdrew his acceptance of the invitation.

THE SILVER NUISANCE.

The movement to export silver from the country has resulted in getting rid of $130,270. This was obtained at a discount of 5 per cent. Mr. Weir, who managed the exportation, thinks that if $70,000 more were sent off that the general discount would fall to 3 or 3¼ per cent. But in our opinion the Government of the Dominion should take up the matter, and dispose of it by buying up all the silver and removing it, or re-coining it, as they might think best. At present we have scarcely Canadian silver coinage enough to meet the demand of trade, and knowing this, it would prove a great advantage to the merchants of the Dominion, while it would prove of no small advantage to the entire community if the nuisance was removed by the introduction of sufficent Canadian silver to drive the American silver out entirely. At present only a few brokers profit by dealing in it. And certainly it is not fair that the whole trade of a country should suffer for the advantage of only one or two. We trust, therefore, that during the present session of Ottawa Parliament something will be done to remove this crying evil. A general call has been extended to all the boards of trade in the Provinces to meet during the present session to urge some course of action on the ministry.

THE BREWERS.

Considerable discussion has lately taken place concerning the return of the brewers of the western counties of Ontario. From the returns made, several of the most flourishing brewers did not make above a barrel or two per week. Information had been given of this fact and some enquiry made, but to no effect. A return of the brewers was asked for, and a return was produced, but only to render the whole affair more inextricable. Instead of the names of the brewers or the location of the breweries the government of Sir J. A. numbered them merely, and thus left the readers of this mystification in total ignorance still.

The Montreal Herald says of the government returns, a more extraordinary example of how to mystify would be difficult to find in even the History of Mystification. There is such a jumble of counties and years that one cannot follow consecutively the statement of any one brewery, but must turn from page to page to make a comparison. One or two brewers are said to have made honest reports, and those have had to pay their full excise duty, while the dishonest ones got off without it. What makes the matter still worse, the government have been conniving at it, and when a return is asked for, produces one that cannot be deciphered. What can be expected from such a government, when we find the head of it refusing to give the House the information sought for. The most gigantic frauds on the revenue are thus permitted to go unpunished, and their names concealed by those who should drag them to justice. What good can be looked for from them.

The Montreal Witness says that the St. Patrick's Anniversary, on the 17th instant, was orderly, and not a drunken individual was to be seen. It was celebrated by both Protestant and Catholic Irishmen, who met on the common ground of their common country, and actuated by a common motive to do it homage in a distant land.

CHURCH RATES.

After a long and fierce struggle the Dissenters in England are about to be relieved from the most [illegible] grievance—the Church rate. [illegible] Parish Church protested against the unjust imposition and prayed for its abolition. Justice, although slow in coming to their relief is now about to be meted out by Mr. Gladstone's Bill. It does not propose to do away with the rates, it merely abolishes the compulsory part of the system, which, of course, is the only portion complained of. The new bill empowers the vestries or rather the church-wardens to levy the rates upon defaulters, who have voted for them; so that no complaint need now be raised against the obnoxious impost. If a party now votes for the rates he cannot grumble if he is made to pay his quota. The Government have accepted this proposition as a final settlement of this vexed question, a question that has done more to weaken and injure the Church of England than any question for a long time. It is somewhat remarkable that a matter of this kind which has so long annoyed and puzzled successive cabinets, a Tory Premier will have the credit of settling when his predecessors, Tory and Reform, failed in doing. If he could so easily settle the Church question in Ireland, he would immortalize himself; and yet, until the connection between State and Church is dissolved in that unhappy country, there never will be peace. Religious reforms progress slowly; spiritual power is more rigidly held than political power. It cannot, in fact, be so easily got at, being held by men who are usually highly respected and whose position and character shield them from attack. It is only when their arbitrary power extends to those beyond their charge that the rampus begins. The bitter opposition of chaffed men vents itself in expressions of exasperation, caused by a sense of manifest wrong, committed under the sanction of law.

We sincerely trust the bill of Mr. Gladstone's will become law, although it is the first relief granted to Non-conformists in England for over 50 years, excepting the Catholic emancipation measure of 1829. We hope other church reforms will follow more rapidly, till that unseemly, unholy alliance between Church and State shall be for ever done away. The good Lord hasten the happy day.

The quarterly concert of the 57th Battalion Band, in aid of its funds, will take place on Thursday, the 2nd day of April, and we hope our Citizens and the public generally will generously patronize so laudable an undertaking. We should feel a great loss in not having a band in our town; let us show the willing performers that we prize their laudable desire to provide for our entertainment, by attending their concert, and so assist in paying off the debt incurred in the purchase of the instruments and other necessary expenses.

LOSS BY THE LATE FRESHET.—The Toronto Leader says that the loss caused there will not be less than $12,000 or $15,000. The Belleville Intelligencer puts the loss down at $50,000 to $75,0000, at Belleville. A new Iron Bridge that cost $10,000; vestment wall $2,000; destruction to side walks streets $20,000; the destruction to dams $10,000, besides other property to a large extent, and several mills and other establishments are thus forced to lie idle until repairs can be made.

A new Banking Bill has been introduced, in which there are provision for assimilating the values of the coins of the different Provinces. There are also provisions as soon as arrangements with the U. S. and British are completed, to make the $5 gold piece equal to a British Sovereign. To adapt the currency of Quebec and Ontario to that of Nova Scotia, which would be done by proclamation.

The Drover, Sykes, who was robbed on the Grand Trunk cars, near Prescott, and then made to leap off, by his robbers, has since died. No trace has been found of the villians who did the foul deed.

Spurgeon lately had a cheque for £2000 sent to him by some unknown person, to assist him in his work of educating young men for the ministry.

Mr. Johnson, who was imprisoned for taking part in an orange procession, in Ireland, has been elected M. P. for Belfast.

The Wesleyan Methodist Missionary subscriptions of the Peterboro' District amounted to $389 more than last year.

$35,000, it is said, will be spent for 5 years in a Geological survey of the Dominion.

The debt of the United States has been considerably increased during the last two months.

The following communication, in reference to the Galway Mining Company, we copy from the Canadian Monetary Times:—

Editor Canadian Monetary Times.

SIR,—Below I give a copy of the report of an assay of a small sample of pyrites, taken about 4 feet from the surface, in the shaft now being opened by the Galway Mining Company, on their property in Galway. The shaft is being sunk for the purpose of obtaining lead, and the last of gold and silver being found so near the surface, although in small quantity, will, I presume enhance the value of the property. The stock books of the Company are now before the public for subscription of the stock.

The essay was made by Dr. Girdwood, of Montreal; and Mr. C. Robb, mining engineer of Montreal, certifies that "this is a sample of pyrites from cross vein in tunnel of Galway mining company.

(Signed,) C. ROBB.

Men are now at work putting down the shaft. As soon as the snow leaves the work will be pushed on vigorously.

I am informed the lead yields over 70 per cent., which is certainly a good indication of success.

Yours truly,

"WHAT IS LIFE?"—Such were the words

he uttered on reading of the funeral of Miss Clayton, the young lady who sang so charmingly at the concert held in the Music Hall a short time ago. Little did any one then think that such a delightful voice would so soon be silent in death. We give below, from the Leader, a description of the last sad rites, held at Yorkville on the 23rd inst.

MISS CLAYTON'S FUNERAL.—The funeral of this young lady took place yesterday afternoon at 3:30 at Yorkville. Although the time allowed for preparation was extremely limited, yet the interest felt in her, and the sorrow at her death, was sufficient to bring together a large concourse of sorrowing friends. As soon as the melancholy event became known, the most prominent of the musical public and others, tendered their services to render a fitting and graceful tribute to the memory of one with whom they had been so often associated in works of charity and benevolence. Possessed of far more musical talent than is generally found in those that are considered superior amateur singers, and accompanied with all those peculiar qualities which go to make up a true artist, Miss Clayton bade fair to rise to one of the highest positions in our Canadian musical world. The pride which the residents of Yorkville properly felt for their young vocalist, together with the respect and affection for her personal merits, displayed itself in a large and respectable assemblage which followed her remains to the grave. The streets of the village were lined with faces which expressed a deep and earnest sympathy, and all the stores and business places were closed as a token of respect. The procession, which was composed of the reeve and every member of the corporation, men of all denominational bias, members of the various societies to which her father belongs, members of the musical world with whom she had been associated, combined to do honor to her memory. At St. Paul's Church the funeral service of the Church of England was performed by the Rev. S. Givins, in the presence of a large congregation. Mr. John Carter directed the musical part of the performance, and presided at the organ with his usual ability. A very full and powerful choir sung the opening sentences of the burial service and the hymn "Nearer my God to Thee" in very effective style. The anthem "Lord deliver me" was beautifully sung to the magnetic strains of "The Dead March in Saul." Mr. and Mrs. Stewart sustaining the principal parts. Messrs. Maddison, Martin, J. Gaston Smith, Kerrison and others took their respective parts. Considering the almost impromptu character of the performance it reflects the highest credit on those who took part in it. The whole ceremony was a very impressive one, and the funeral cortege was followed to the grave by one of the largest and most respectable assemblages ever seen in Yorkville. We understand it is the intention of the friends of the late Miss Clayton to erect an appropriate tablet to her memory.

Mr. Duffin was authorized to purchase such cedar logs as may be required for improvement of certain roads.

A By-law to appoint certain Township officers for the Year 1868, was read first, second and third times, and passed.

The Reeve was authorized to contract for timber and plank required for repairs of Keene Bridge.

The Council adjourned to the 20th April, 1868.

Mr. Gladstone's resolutions on the Irish Church which we give in our cable despatches, and which are to come on for discussion next Monday, are very noticeable.—They mark a very important point in the history of Church establishments, for they are the first decisive step towards the abolition of the Irish Church, and when that goes the establishments in England and Scotland will follow. It is very evident that the tendency of the age is in favor of every one who believes in a religion supporting and propagating it himself, without forcing those who don't to do either the one or the other. Who can deny that this is an age of progress when W. E. Gladstone, the champion of Church establishments and the darling of Oxford, takes the position he now assumes?—Globe.

TORONTO UNIVERSITY.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—A copy of the charter having been sent to the Legislative Assembly, that body transmitted a copy of their report and the charter framed by them to the Imperial Parliament; adding that at the same time an address to the Throne, which they indignantly hurl back the indictments of the disloyalty of a great number of the people in the country, vindicating the Methodist Preachers from the injustice done them, and asserting that they deserved the thanks of the Government for the large amount of good they were doing in inculcating loyalty, morality and religion amongst the settlers. At the same time they pray that the charter of the College may be cancelled, and one framed more in accordance with the wishes of the great body of the people in the Province. This address and the report caused a considerable stir in the House of Commons and the Home Government, which resulted in the appointment of a committee of that House being formed to investigate the whole subject of the civil government in the Province. They entered largely into the investigations relative to the charter of King's College, and the means by which it was obtained, as prayed for by the petitioners. The committee presented a very able report which served as a sort of a text book for Colonial Ministers to frame their instructions to the successive Governors of the Province. Accordingly, Sir George Murray in his despatch to Sir P. Maitland, urges the representatives of the people to suggest any alterations in the charter which they think proper, and in the meantime suspended its operation, until these modifications should be made. When Sir John Colborne succeeded to the Governorship at the close of 1828, he soon perceived that it would be absolutely necessary for the peace of the country to effect some settlement of this irritating matter. He accordingly convened the College Council a few days after his arrival, and recommended them to surrender the charter which had been obtained upon misrepresentations and the concealment of facts; at the same time assuring them, that unless they co-operated in effecting the amendments prayed for by the people, and urged by the committee of the House of Commons, and contained in the positive instructions to himself from His Majesty's Ministers he would not concur in any measure to further the institution, while the obnoxious provisions of the charter remained unaltered. His entreaties, frequently repeated, were all disregarded, and the Council flatly refused either to surrender the charter or to concur in any measure for its modification. Finding all his efforts unavailing, and anxious to further the cause of education, he proposed to the College Council the establishment of an Academy at York as a preparatory school which was unopposed. He accordingly submitted the plan to the Legislature of establishing a Royal Grammar School in connection with King's College, so that its chief support should be derived from the funds of the endowment. This proposal was acceded to; the Royal Grammar School being superceded by the Upper Canada College, was opened on the 4th January, 1830, for the purposes of tuition. It was endowed with 40,000 acres of the original grant, the site where the building stood, besides some valuable town lots.

About this period he great struggle of the Clergy Reserves commenced. The clergy of the Church of England laid exclusive claim to the whole of the proceeds of these lands, maintaining that they alone were the clergy designated in the Imperial Act setting these lands apart. The clergy of the Church of Scotland, considering their church equally acknowledged by law as an established church, insisted upon their right to share in the proceeds of these lands. Happily for Canada, these claims were disdainfully rejected by the haughty party which then reigned supreme in Canada. Had it been otherwise, and had a compromise been effected between these claimants, whereby both should enjoy the benefits, the Clergy Reserve question to-day would not be in its present shape. The old saying was verified in the case of those unreasonable men—"Those whom the Gods would destroy they first make mad." Their arrogant assumptions of being alone entitled to these lands, resulted in their having to be content with much less than a moiety; whereas had they listened to the advances of the Presbyterians, the two bodies having hold of these lands it would have been much more difficult to alienate them. Here was a body shown to form but about a tenth of the population of the Province, holding the one-seventh of the entire lands of the country, as a holding with a death grasp the patent of the People's College, obtained by [illegible] and it was not [illegible] Rebellion occurred from such high handed conduct. The people waited long and patiently for a redress of these wrongs, tried every legal means to obtain this redress, but all in vain. The dominant party would listen to no suggestions from home or abroad for reform. Dr. Strachan had inaugurated the movement and he fought it out to the end. His friends are about erecting a monument to his memory. The history of the Clergy Reserves, of the Toronto University, and of the Rebellion of '37-8 will hand down to posterity a recollection more enduring than that of marble itself, when possibly justice may be done to those who suffered from his intolerance, bigotry and fraud. But for him we might have had more Grammar Schools through the Province, amply supported and possibly a second University, and the funds of the endowment employed for their legitimate purposes—the education of the people.

But I must resume the history of the College. The charter was amended by 4 different Acts of Parliament, as will be shown in the next chapter.

Meantime, I am Sir,
Yours, &c.

Peterborough, 23 March, 1868. J. E.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—As a member of "the Board of Directors" of the Peterboro Literary Society, would you permit me a short space in your columns to make an explanation in reference to Mr. Wallack's entertainments. I desire to explain the circumstances which led to his giving those entertainments under their auspices.

Mr. Wallack appeared in Toronto under engagement with the Directors of the Mechanics' Institute (which is more of a Literary Society than its name would indicate.) The Toronto papers gave very favorable notices of the performances. This being observed by the writer, he wrote to Mr. Wallack asking him if he would come to Peterboro to appear under the auspices of the Literary Society, and upon what terms. With his answer, making known his terms, he sent a letter from the Secretary of the Toronto Mechanics' Institute, in which the Secretary recommended most highly the entertainments. This appearing to the directors of the Literary Society to be a sufficient guarantee that the performance was such as the most fastidious might attend with pleasure, they made the arrangement for him to appear.

As regards the character of the performances I have nothing to say. I merely make this explanation that the Peterboro Literary Society may not be considered in the matter.

A MEMBER OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

The Aggrieved N. Monaghan Man.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—I notice in the last Examiner a letter reflecting on the County Councillors, and especially on the representative of North Monaghan, for his vote in the County Council on the question of a County grant to the Peterboro' Grammar School. The writer, who signs himself "N. Monaghan," has evidently got a little smattering of learning (probably at other people's expense) and would fain load us with a tax for the benefit of himself and others like him. "Fine feathers make fine birds," and fine buildings make good schools and colleges according to this writer. But while the people of North Monaghan value a sound education as much as any one and tax themselves liberally to promote it. The Reeve was not sent to the County Council to vote large endowments either to Peterboro or Toronto. The public already contribute largely to both these institutions, and while they have large taxes to pay at home it is unreasonable to ask them to pay a further tax to a school in Peterboro, which few of them can get the good of, and then only at additional expense of boarding and lodging their sons while attending it. But it is "capping the climax of the ridiculous" for a man, who perhaps never paid any taxes, to charge others with despising education, who every year since the settlement of the country have taxed themselves liberally for the education of their own and other people's children. Not a single ratepayer of this township has said I voted wrong on this or any other question except, perhaps, a man with a thin face, sharp nose, and a little red hair on his face, and he feels aggrieved, probably not so much at the vote mentioned as at not getting a little salary at the disposal of the Council, and hence his desire for certain "changes" which he hints at. I think I have pointed out the right man, and hope this will appear in your paper in good time for the man for whom it is intended, and if the cap fits let him wear it.

Yours, &c.,
GEORGE YOUNG.

North Monaghan, March 23, 1868.

(From the Craftsman.)

Died, at Manistee, Michigan, U. S., on Sunday the 19th January last, W. Bro. William Dinwoodie, W. Master of Manistee Lodge.

Brother Dinwoodie was a native of Campbellford, Ontario, and removed to Manistee some years ago. There was then no Masonic Lodge in Manistee. He feeling this to be a want and meeting with a few brethern of the same mind in that new and rising town, they, by their united exertions, succeeded in organizing a Lodge. Bro. Dinwoodie, having been very active in the good work, was elected the first Master, at the end of the year he was re-elected, and during his second year of office it pleased the G. A. O. T. U. to call him away.

His remains were brought to his father's residence at Campbellford, and there interred with Masonic honors, W. Bro. C. Cameron, W. M. Peterborough Lodge, No. 153, presiding on the occasion, assisted by the brethern of Peterboroug, Mastiegs, and Campbellford Lodges. Peterborough Lodge was Bro. Dinwoodie's Mother Lodge.

The following resolutions will show the kindness displayed to the brother of deceased, (who brought home the body,) not only by the members of Manistee Lodge, but also by others, (whose names are mentioned in said resolutions,) in his sad journey homeward. They saw him safely across the lines with his charge. They will also show the high esteem in which Bro. Dinwoodie was held by the fraternity in general, but more especially by the members of his own Lodge. The resolutions are as follows:—

Resolutions adopted by "Manistee" Lodge, No. 228, F. & A. M., Michigan, on the death of their Worshipful Master, William Dinwoodie.

Whereas.—It has pleased the Supreme Grand Master of the Universe again to visit our fraternal circle, in the removal of our chief officer and highly valued Brother, William Dinwoodie, in the pride of his early manhood. Therefore, resolved, that we, who mourn in heartfelt sorrow the sudden death of our Worshipful Master, we bow in humble submission to the mandate which has called him from labour to reward in that Temple not made with hands Eternal in the Heavens.

Resolved,—That in the removal of Brother Dinwoodie, we, as a Lodge, have not only lost a valuable chief officer, but a brother endeared to us by his many social and intellectual virtues, and who, by the natural sweetness and amiability of his disposition, largely won upon our confidence and esteem.

Resolved,—That as a feeble expression of regard for our deceased brother, we will attend the funeral as a Lodge, dress our hall and furniture in mourning and wear crape for thirty days.

Resolved.—That we hereby extend our sympathy to the friends of our deceased brother, in their sudden bereavement, and commend them with prayerful interest to the care of our Heavenly Father in this their deep affliction.

Resolved,—That the thanks of this Lodge are due and are hereby tendered to Wm. Moore and family for their kind attention to our deceased brother during his illness.

Resolved.—That the Secretary of our Lodge be requested to furnish a copy of these resolutions to the friends of our deceased brother, and also to the Minister Times for publication.

PETERBOROUGH LODGE.

PETERBORO', ONT., 18th Feb., 1868.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—We are instructed by Peterboro' Lodge, No. 155, G. R. C., to forward to you a copy of a resolution unanimously passed at their last meeting. The resolution reads as follows:—

"RESOLVED,"—That the heartfelt thanks of this Lodge are due, and are hereby tendered, to the Brethern of Manistee Lodge, to the Brethern of Peninsular Lodge, to the Wor. Master of Muskeegeon Lodge, as also to Bro. Thompson, Merchants Express Company, Ferrysburg, and Bro. Thompson, Conductor, D and M. R. R., for the kindness shown to our late lamented Brother, Wm. Dinwoodie, and for the kind assistance given to his brother in forwarding the remains to his home in Canada.

The Brethern of "Golden Rule Lodge," Campbellford, and of "Hastings Lodge," Hastings, present with us on the sad occasion, when we assembled to pay the last tribute to our late Brother Dinwoodie, also desire us to convey to you their sincere thanks for your kindness to our late Brother. Such acts as yours reflect credit upon our Order. They mark the true Mason, and prove that the tenets of our Order are indeed brotherly love, relief, and truth. With greetings of fraternal regard,

We remain, fraternally yours,
CHARLES CAMERON, Wor. Master
D. S. EASTWOOD, Senior Warden.
WRIGHT M. GOODWIN, Secretary.

DEATH OF MISS CLAYTON.—Our readers will, we doubt not, be truly sorry to hear of the death of this young lady, which has resulted from inflammatory rheumatism and disease of the heart, who has on so many occasions given them pleasure with the sweet tones of her voice. On every occasion on which her valuable services were solicited in behalf of charity and kindness to her fellow-creatures, she kindly and cheerfully gave her assistance. Her amiable and affectionate character naturally secured to her a large circle of friends. Yorkville has lost, indeed, one of its most amiable residents and a most promising young singer. The funeral will take place to-day, from her father's residence on William street, at three o'clock, p. m., to St. James' Cemetery. Mr. John Carter, and some of his choir will be present to assist at the funeral service in St. Paul's Church at half past three.—Leader.

COTTON IN ILLINOIS.—It is estimated that Illinois alone will produce five hundred thousand bales of cotton next year, and we understand that the Government of the United States have given instructions to their General in command of the army in the south to have all the seed saved that is possible, for planting in that and other western States, but should their expectations not be fulfilled it is gratifying to know that we have a sovereign remedy for coughs, colds, cramps in the stomach, cholic, cholera, morbus, and all complaints of the like nature, in the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," sold by all Medicine Dealers, 35 cts per bottle.

BRYAN'S WAFERS.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, co gus, sore throat, and all Bronchial affections. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical. Sold by all medicine dealers, at 25 cts per box.

BIRTH.

At Bonnie-brook Cottage, Ashburnham, on the 24th inst., Mrs. D. Sutherland, of a son.

MARRIED.

At the residence of the bride's father, by the Rev. J. H. Johnson, A. M., on the 19th inst., Mr. Alexander Connor, to Miss Mary Ann, eldest daughter of Mr. John Wells, all of Peterboro'.

STARTLING NEWS!

THE subscriber, who has for some time past been keeping cool, allowing the enormous amount of gas, with which the Dry Goods and Clothing atmosphere has been impregnated, to escape—in order to prevent explosion—now begs to inform his many customers, and the public generally, that owing to the increase in the GENTLEMEN'S CLOTHING DEPARTMENT, which occupies nearly all his premises—from top to bottom—and is still increasing, he has been compelled to CLOSE UP THE LADIES' DEPARTMENT in the meantime; and this being the case, he has thought it his duty—plainly, calmly and truthfully—to inform his patrons of the fact; as also to inform them, one and all, that

ON THE SECOND DAY OF MARCH NEXT

he will commence

SELLING OFF

the whole of his varied stock of

LADIES' GOODS,

Comprising Prints, Cobourgs, Delaines, Ginghams, Ribbons, Parasols, Muslins, with a great many other varieties in this department too numerous to mention.

The Goods will all be marked in plain figures, at such unprecedented low prices as can not fail to command sales in every case, when they are carefully and impartially examined; say at 75 cents in the Dollar on former prices, and without any humbug or puffing, on this the public may rest satisfied. As it is the determination of the subscriber to go very extensively into the Clothing Business in the Spring, the Ladies' Goods must be sold off to make room.

To all those who really wish BARGAINS, the subscriber would say—they will find if they call early that there is no puffing in the establishment, but stubborn facts.

In addition to the above which is specially intended for the LADIES, he would say to his numerous

GENTLEMEN CUSTOMERS

That, not only is his stock of READY MADE CLOTHING—large and varied, but his stock of Tweeds—English Scotch and Canadian, is also extensive, and will be greatly increased during the Spring. He would also say, that having a first class Cutter on the premises (MR. JAMES MEMZIES) he is prepared to make suits to order to those who may wish them, at very low rates, and when the cloth is bought on the premises, there will be NO CHARGE FOR CUTTING.

Just received, 200 pieces CANADIAN TWEEDS, made to order expressly for the establishment.

Also, FELT HATS of all varieties, comprising, Planters, Opera, Peabody, and many other Styles.

To one and all, both great and small,
I'll in conclusion say—
Economy is no disgrace
When used in any way.

No better plan, go where you can,
With truth, can any say,
Is offered the economical,
Than buying goods of F. Lemay.

If this you doubt, please do come out,
And do not prejudiced be,
Give him fair play, just in this way—
Judge not until you see.

F. LEMAY,
Hunter Street,
SIGN OF THE LION.

SUGAR-COATED.

A safe and reliable remedy for all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They do not Quack Medicines, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary people, but are the result of many years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success in this, the first trial they answer strictly the Label. Two formulæ from which they are prepared, is hailed on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

J. H. GIBSON, M. D., Dresden, C. E.

JACOB'S RHEUMATIC LIQUID

Is an internal as well as an external remedy, and is the only one that always gives entire satisfaction, and all who once use it will never consent to change it for any other.

We have not space to enumerate the virtues accorded to it by thousands who have used it, and voluntarily testify to its merits. Buy a bottle and satisfy yourself that it is the best remedy ever offered.

Henry Simpson & Co., Montreal Wholesale Agents.

Sold in Peterborough by W. Coulter, J. W. Gilmour, A. W. Kemp, and Kincaid & Co.

THE BEST Tonic Hair Dressing ever discovered. It effectually cleanses the scalp, prevents the Hair from falling or turning prematurely grey, and when the follicles or glands are not destroyed, will produce a new and luxuriant growth of hair where it has already disappeared.

It is the cheapest as well as the best, being only 25 cents for a large bottle. Buy it, try it, you'll like it and recommend it to your friends.

MRS. WINSLOW'S

SOOTHING SYRUP!

FOR CHILDREN TEETHING,

GREATLY facilitates the process of teething by softening the gums, reducing all inflammation—will allay ALL PAIN and spasmodic action, and is

SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Depend upon it, mothers, it will give rest to yourselves, and

Relief and Health to your Infants

We have put up and sold this article for years and CAN SAY IN CONFIDENCE AND TRUTH what we have never been able to say of other medicine—NEVER HAS IT FAILED IN A SINGLE INSTANCE TO EFFECT A CURE, when it used. Never did we know an instance of satisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operation and speak of terms of commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We say in this matter "WHAT WE DO KNOW" after years of experience, AND PLEDGE OUR REPUTATION FOR THE FULFILMENT OF WHAT WE HERE CLAIM. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper.

Sold by druggists throughout the world.

Price, only 25 Cents per Bottle.

SECRETARY—Edg. Pearce.

This Company is organized for the purpose of developing the mineral resources of the west half of lot number Twenty in Concession A, in the Township of Galway, County of Peterborough, in the Province of Ontario and Dominion of Canada, and for the purpose of mining, smelting and otherwise preparing for market, the ores of all kinds of metals and minerals, together with the acquisition, employment, and disposal of all lands mines, ore ores, or granting to others the right to mine, smelt, or prepare for market, the ores of all metals and minerals that may be found of advantage to the interests of the Company.

The already acquired property of the Company, the west half of Lot Twenty, Concession A, Galway, is extremely rich in Lead, Iron Sulphate of Baryes, and Silver, quantities of each of which have already been taken by the promoters of the Company off this portion of the lot, which from the assays of Dr. Otway, show the following favorable results; Sulphur 23 per cent, Lead 17 per cent, Silver in Lead 16ozs 13dwt 8grs., to the Ton, proving beyond a doubt the great value of the property. The original owners of the property have already spent about one thousand dollars in opening up the mineral veins that intersect the Lot, and in pushing an adit or tunnel through a hill upon the property.

The property is situated on the Bobcaygeon Road, about 12 miles from Bobcaygeon, at which place communication can easily be obtained to Lindsay or Peterborough, thence by the P. H. L. and B. Railway to Port Hope. Ore or goods can thus be transferred at all seasons from the property to Port Hope, or vice versa at a cost not exceeding $5 per ton.

The original Proprietors has already conveyed the property to the Rev. Mark Burnham, of Ashburnham, in trust to be reconveyed by him to the Company when organized.

The Trustee of the Company has a perfect title to the said parcel of land so that no delay need occur in commencing operations, and an immediate return on the capital invested may be anticipated.

CANCERS CURED!

By a new, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay is required, until the cure is complete. The moment a cancer is discovered, it should be cured, as it will cost less and is more speedily cured than when of longer standing, and there is nothing to gain, and everything to lose by delay. What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, eye-lid or elsewhere, or small wart or sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given to parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. No money required in advance, and none until the cure is complete.

"ECONOMY IS WEALTH."—FRANKLIN.—Why will people pay $50 or $100 for a SEWING MACHINE, when $25 will buy a better one for all practical purposes? Notwithstanding records to the contrary, the subscribers beg to inform their numerous friends that the "FRANKLIN" and "MEDALLION" Machines can be had in any quantity. This machine is a double thread, constructed upon entirely new principles, and does not infringe upon any other in the world. It is emphatically the poor man's Sewing Machine, and is warranted to excell all others, as thousands of patrons will testify.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS.

Are you sick, feeble, and pale? Have you a sallow complexion, and your stomach refuses to perform its functions? Are you troubled with pimples, blotches, or boils? Is your blood impure? Do you suffer from frequent headaches, and feel dull, drowsy, and indifferent? Are you languid, nervous, and despondent? Do you require a stimulant, but shrink from the use of alcoholic drinks? Are you afflicted with any of the symptoms which are the sure indications that worms are preying upon your vitals? If you are troubled with any of these symptoms, you are suffering from the effects of impure blood, and should be promptly purified. Many of the evils which afflict mankind arise from the simple fact that the blood, upon which the vital forces depend for support, is not pure. Keep the blood pure, and health will follow; for no impurity can remain in the blood, and the vital forces operate freely and healthily, when it is pure. There is no medicine in the world that will so surely purify the blood from all impurities as Ayer's Pills. Their penetrating power, their searching and purifying properties, their peculiar adaptation to the stomach and bowels, make them the most perfect and reliable purgative that can be employed for the cure of all the disorders of the digestive organs. Being purely vegetable, they are entirely free from any taint of mercury or other dangerous drug. Containing in this condensed form all the curative virtues of the many roots, herbs, barks, berries, &c., which have been found by experience to be actually curative, they are the most effectual remedy that can be employed for the expulsion of disease from the human system. Every one knows when he is sick, and generally knows what ails him. Most of the diseases which require medicine can be cured by purgatives. These Pills, which are the best purgative that can be employed for every case that requires a cathartic, are sugar-coated, so that the most sensitive can take them pleasantly, and they are the safest medicine that can be taken by any one who is sick. Being purely vegetable, no harm can arise from their use in any quantity. They operate by their powerful influence on the internal fountains of life and action, purifying the blood, and stimulating into healthy activity the various organs of the body, thereby removing the cause of disease. When these are taken, the diseases begin to disappear, and soon give place to health. Those who feel that they require a cathartic medicine, need only try these Pills to realize a perfect cure. They are the cheapest cathartic that can be used, as they are the most effectual in their operation. Every dose will benefit or cure. Sold by druggists everywhere.

PREPARED BY DR. J. C. AYER & CO., LOWELL, MASS.

Sold in Peterboro by Ormond & Gilmour, A. W. Kempt, and Wm. Coulter. in Keene by A. Campbell, Campbell McNeil & Co., C. Britton, Lindsay, and all Medicine Dealers.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY IN CANADA.

MESSRS. Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq., Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once, which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was afflicted with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr. Louis Jose phus, of the Distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees, British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

THIS all-possessing Great Indian Remedy is wanted, and in broad and emphatic language, we can safely say, may be replied upon to make a permanent cure of all diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, Digestive Organs, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurity of the Blood, excepting the third stage of Consumption. In the Western Country where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has indeed effected some of the most Marvellous Cures, ever recorded in the annals of Historical Medicine. Such being the case, in addition to its former renown and celebrity, we defy humanity to dispute the fact that this, the Great Shoshonees Remedy in connection with the Shoshonees Vegetable Restorative Pills, is the Remedy of Remedies of the 19th Century, and the greatest boon ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity.

CAUTION.

THE public are hereby cautioned to beware of purchasing Colored and Russian Mink for Canada Mink. The Canada is superior to any in the world, and is therefore the most valuable. This has induced parties to endeavor to imitate our Canada Mink, not only by coloring Russian, but also by coloring United States Mink. The Canada costs more than double that of any other country, which enables dealers to make a large profit on the spurious article. Those buying Furs in Montreal or other places should beware least they get the inferior article for which they will no doubt have to pay full prices. Take care, therefore, for I have been shown articles purchased in genuine as Montreal, which I can certify were colored and of inferior quality.

Those who buy any article of my own manufacture, I will warrant to be genuine. of best quality, and best workmanship, and at lower prices than any whole-sale dealer will supply the same article.

A call is respectfully solicited.

Poetry.

THE CHEERFUL HEART.

What though the world to us its joys
And riches do impart,
They are but blessings thrown away
Without a cheerful heart;
For happiness does not consist
In what the world bestows,
But in the soul which never complains
In sickness or in health.

Thank God that scatters here and there,
Upon this dreary earth,
All those within whose heart are found
The attributes of worth,
Good, gentle, kind and noble souls,
Who, like the moonlight fair,
Shed forth their holy brilliancy
On all things everywhere.

Oh! cultivate a cheerful heart,
While on this earth of ours;
Why should we tread on thorny ground
When life is full of flowers;
Why shroud our souls in sombre clouds
Of pain, and woe and sadness,
When nature teaches every one
To sport in gle e and gladness?

Selections.

Fearful Scene in a Bedroom—a Robber Shot to Pieces.

The hope is frequently expressed by parties in interest, and especially by the ladies, that the sneak-thief who are occasionally detected crawling through people's houses at midnight in search of spoils will get ball holes put through them. It is the very general desire of the householders that these scoundrels shall come across fellows with pistols in their hands, with whom not afraid to use them. Here is an item which will delight those people who have been waiting and watching to learn of these "dreadful villains" getting shot. A few nights ago Smith and his wife went out to spend the evening with Jones and his wife. They returned home at a late hour to find that, while Biddy had permitted the fire in their bedroom stove to go out, she had kept up the fire in the grate in the sitting room, and while Mrs. Smith dallied a short time in the genial atmosphere of the sitting room to arrange her toilet for the night, Smith, who was rather sleepy, went on in advance to their bedroom up stairs. Smith was in excellent humor, having beaten Jones and [illegible] Mrs. Jones had aided Jones to take both his castles and checkmate his king twice; and he was engaged in whistling a tune—that is, if the rather uncertain sound Smith makes when he puckers his lips and blows, or blubbers, can be properly termed whistling a tune. But this is not a musical criticism.

Just as Smith was entering the room, and was preparing to light the gas, he espied the legs of a man under the bed! Did he cease whistling? On the contrary he redoubled his exertions, and, although he felt his hair raising up on his head, he walked squarely out of the room, getting a glimpse of the robber's hat as he passed out of the door(!) His mind was made up—the villain should not be taken from under the bed alive! Hastening to an adjoining room, he grasped his revolver from the sideboard, and returning to his bedroom, he rushed in and fired at the figure under the bed—bang! bang! bang! —and all seven shots were emptied out of his revolver, and the room was all a blaze, and filled with smoke. His wife, in spite of the situation, and just getting a glimmer through her sleepy little head that probably her husband had been attacked by robbers and murdered, rushed frantically up stairs en dishabille, screaming most frightfully, and terrifying the children, who were suddenly awakened and who put in their feeble screeches to their mother's second! It was a sorry family group that met Smith on the threshold of the paternal bedroom as he came forth, the smoke rushed out after him.

His wife's joy at beholding him alive was so great that she had an almost irresistible inclination to swoon; but she obeyed the better impulse of rushing into his arms, exclaiming: "Oh, John!" And that was as far as she got in the sentence; but Smith understood her to ask for an explanation of the dreadful shooting, and steadying her while he put his revolver in his pocket and took the baby in his arms, he told his terrified wife and children that he—had killed a man!—shot him all to pieces! When the shock which he had caused his household had somewhat subsided and he had conducted them into the children's room, where they would in any event be safe, he reloaded his revolver and ventured into his bedroom. All was still as death and smelled dreadfully of powder; a wreath of smoke hung about the gaslight, and the counterpane was burning.

He put out the fire, and cautiously looked under the bed—will the reader believe it? he had shot the robber clean out of his pants. Nothing remained of him but his pants and an old hat. Pulling out the "remains," he was rather hesitating to find that they composed the pants and hat which he had taken off prior to changing his suit to go out, and his wife had chuckled them under the bed temporarily to put them out of sight. The pants had seven more holes in 'em than were actually needed, but the family quiet was restored, which was worth more than the breeches. If you want your burglars killed, shot out of these clothes, take 'em to Smith's house. You don't know him; he's a Smith; but that's no matter; he's a clever fellow and'll do a smooth job.—Dayton (O) Journal.

LEISURE HOURS.—It was a beautiful observation of the late William Hazlitt, that "there is room enough in human life to crowd almost every art and science in it. If we pass no day without a line—visit no place without at the company of books—we may with ease fill libraries or empty them of their contents. The more we do, the more we can do; the more busy we are, the more leisure we have."

Marsh as Premier of Britain.

There is like to be said about the elevation of Derbi to the Premiership. It is one of the most democratic events that history has had to record. The Reform Bill of last year is not more democratic than the appointment. It is the triumph of brains over privilege. Forty years ago such a great would have been impossible. Then, Whig and Tory lords sneered at Canning, as a landless adventurer, and dubbed Peel, in contempt, "Cotton Peel." But Canning was an English gentleman, and Peel was a large landed proprietor; whereas Disraeli has neither rank nor land, and, worst of all, is by birth a Jew, a landless outcast Jew. Heaven help prejudice!—for it is in a sad condition. And please to bring it steadily before your mind's eye what this man now is. He is Premier of England—The head of her Majesty's Government." He constitutes the Cabinet, and appoints the several departments and offices of the second degree, comprising sixty places in all. The Queen nominates the archbishops on his recommendation, and on his recommendation disposes of all dignities, canonries, and livings pertaining to the Crown, which livings amount to 950. He nominates the judges of Westminster Hall; he, too, appoints ambassadors. On his recommendation the Queen creates peers and confers other honours. In short, practically this man is sovereign for the time. He elects archbishops, bishops, &c. Fancy that! English ecclesiastical dignitaries appointed by a landless Jew.—Shades of Lanfranc, A'Becket, and Laud, what think you of this? It is enough to make you burst your cerements and once more revisit the glimpses of the moon.—And there is woe behind. Disraeli professes to be a christian, but there are passages in his works which engender the suspicion that at heart he is still a religious Jew. Such are the wondrous changes changing time hath brought but to the upcountry and the clerical mind it must be very nauseous, disgusting, horrible—but it cannot be helped. The dirt must be swallowed, whatever any faces the archbishops, bishops, dukes, lords, &c., &c., may make in getting it down. And the worst is, there is over all minds in that high region a gloomy apprehension of more direful woes. One can imagine what is the talk in episcopal coteries as well as if we heard it. A. to B.. "They say the fellow is going to abolish the Irish Church." B to A., with a shrug of horror, "Yes, and perhaps [illegible] may he abolish us altogether."—Correspondent of English paper.

One of the Characters of the Canadian Rebellion.

It is a generation since the time when General McLeod, then a veteran, was the subject of general talk, in connection with Canada politics. Many had almost forgotten the old soldier, but they will be reminded of his existence by the Cleveland Herald which describes the recent celebration of the golden wedding, at the residence of his son-in-law in that city. The Herald gives a long account of the General's career, from which we extract that which relates to the most recent events of an eventful life. It says, speaking of the time when he was Major-General of the Canadian insurgents:

"General Scott and his marshall attempted his arrest, and followed him from one end of the frontier to the other—General McLeod always appearing to General Scott as an ignus fatuus only a little ways in advance, but always evading him.

"General McLeod finally became tired of this 'hide and go seek' flight and pursuit chase, surrendered himself at Detroit, to one of General Scott's marshalls, and was there tried and honorably acquitted. In the meantime his family had removed to the city in quite destitute circumstances, their entire property having been taken from them before leaving Canada, which they have never recovered. They, however, found hosts of friends, not on the journey, but on their arrival here. They occupied the stone house on corner of Bolivia and Miami streets, where the General commenced writing, and in due time completed and published a history of the insurrection.

"In 1842 or 1843 he went to Wisconsin, and afterwards, being pardoned, went to Canada. About this time he received medals from Queen Victoria for meritorious conduct in the war of 1812-14.

"Most of their children having settled in this city, he purchased property here, intending with his wife to spend his declining years with them, making in the meantime annual visits to them and their friends in that city, crossing and recrossing Lake Erie for this purpose. In the summer of 1860 they were on board the steamer Telegraph, when in the midst of a terrific storm, at midnight, she collided with the brig Marquette, and sank in fifteen minutes. The party was saved in small boats, from which the Marquette rescued them.

"Disposing of their property in Canada in the spring of 1864, they made a final adieu to that country and came here to spend the remainder of their days in the United States.

"Notwithstanding they have passed through so many vicissitudes in life, they are still hale and hearty, and we hope we may have the pleasure of another annual celebration of their wedding day.

"The sons inherit some of the military spirit of the father. The eldest, Captain D. F. McLeod, served in the Mexican War, enlisting as Sergeant in the Company of the late Captain John S. Perry, of this city. Another son, Hiram N. McLeod, was among the first to respond to the call for troops for the suppression of the late rebellion, and left this city with the Cleveland Grays, afterwards serving with the hundred days men."

Teach your child to be honest, because it is right so to be; let sooners inculcate the quasi-religious proverb of honesty being the best policy.

John Bright on Ireland.

The state of Ireland is attracting more than ordinary attention at the present moment. It is felt on every hand that something must be done to allay the discontent which has become so general, and to remove the inequalities of which the disaffected people have complained. The editorial gentlemen of Tipperary, Clonmel, and Roscommon of every school, and of every shade of opinion, are beginning to deliver themselves upon the subject; and it is probable that before very long so many different reasons will be proposed that the great difficulty will be to choose between them, and as in many similar cases while the doctors are disagreeing the patient will either recover unaided, or die unphysicked. There have recently been delivered two rather remarkable speeches on the condition of Ireland:—one by Lord Stanley, Secretary for Foreign affairs, the other by Mr. John Bright. These speeches are widely different in their tendency and tone, that of Lord Stanley being of a timid, hesitating, and do-nothing character, and that of Mr Bright, bold, courageous, and decided. The great radical leader has evidently bent his mind to a full consideration of the subject, and his speech is the result of extensive observation, and very careful thought. His propositions are simple and apparently reasonable. He proposes a more equitable arrangement between landlords and tenants by which the latter can have a more direct share and interest in the cultivation and fruits of the land; while on the church question his views are certainly much more moderate than may have been expected. Assuming that the present ecclesiastical arrangements form one of the primary causes of all the discontent and misery of the country, he proposes to deal with the difficulty by abolishing the supremacy of the Irish Protestant church, and out of the present revenue of thirteen millions pounds sterling to appropriate a portion as a life interest for the Protestants, the Roman Catholics and the Presbyterians; and after that to let them all fall into the simple condition of voluntary churches, without state authority and control, and dependant for support upon their own resources and contributions. The proposition is feasible and just; but whether its adoption would lead to a cessation of the present difficulties which encumber the country is another question. It is undoubtedly true that the inequality of the church establishment has something to do with the dissatisfaction of the people [illegible] there. There are social and political grievances which have equal influence with the purely ecclesiastical; and no reform will ever be of any avail which does not reach and remedy these. It may be difficult to define them, and the truth is far too much is being made of Irish wrongs by a noisy and worthless set of demagogues and roughs both in and out of the States. There may be improvements in many things; and it will be well for both Parliament and the country if the temperate and judicious words of Mr. Bright are read and heeded.

Influence of Newspapers.

A school teacher who has enjoyed the benefit of a long practice in his profession, and watched closely the influence of newspapers upon a family of children, states as the result of his observation that, without exception, those scholars of both sexes who have access to newspapers at home, when compared to those who have not, are:

1. Better readers, excellent pronounciation, and consequently read more understandingly.

2. They are better spellers, and define words with ease and accuracy.

3. They obtain a partial knowledge of geography in almost half the time it requires others, as the newspaper has made them familiar with the location of most important places among the nations, governments, &c.

4. They are better grammarians, for the newspaper has made them familiar with every variety of style, from the commonplace advertisement to the finished and classical oratory of the statesman; they more readily apprehend the text, and consequently analyze its construction with more alacrity.

5. They write better compositions, using better language, containing more thought, and more clearly expressed.

From these important facts three important things can be deducted:

1. The responsibility of the press in providing literature which is both healthful in tone and outstandingly expressed.

2. The absolute necessity of personal supervision of the child's reading by the parents.

3. Having once got a good, able paper, no matter what the price, don't begrudge it a hearty support.

EVERY MAN HIS OWN MEASURE MAKER.—The following rules by which every one who can saw and nail boards can make his own measures, we find in an Eastern paper:—

A barrel contains 10.752 cubic inches A box 24 inches long by 16 inches wide and 28 inches deep—that is, on one inside—will hold just a barrel.

A half barrel.—Make a box for this 24 inches by 16, and 14 inches deep. This will contain 5 376 cubic inches, or just half a barrel.

A bushel.—This has 2150 4-10 cubic inches A bushel box will be 16 inches by 16 8-10 inches square, and 8 inches deep.

A half-bushel.—A box 12 inches long by 11 2-10 inches wide and 8 inches deep, will hold half a bushel.

Peck.—A box 8 inches by 8 4-10 inches square, and 8 inches deep, is a peck.

Half-peck.—Is 8 by 8 inches square, and 4 2-10 inches deep, or 268 8-10 cubic inches.

Half-Gallon.—This contains 134 4-10 cubic inches. A box 7 by 6 inches and 4 4-10 inches deep, has just that quantity.

Quart.—4 by 6 inches square, and 6 2-10 inches deep.

Hints to Newspaper Correspondents.

The editor of a New York paper thus discourseth to his correspondents:—

"To Correspondents.—Do oblige us by omitting all such flourishes as 'your interesting and valuable paper, your able and patriotic course,' &c. Our subscribers know all about that sort of thing, and we have a tolerable opinion of ourselves. If you think by this to improve your chance of insertion you are ruinously mistaken. When you have written what you have to say, run it over and see if there are not some sentences that could be spared without serious injury. If there are, out with them We are often compelled to decline good articles because we cannot make room for them. A half column has ten chances where two columns has one, and three columns none. Try to discourage as little as possible, and where you must condemn let your feets be stronger than your words. When you await any publication, or cause, always give us your real name, which shall only be given to those who have a right to demand it. He is a coward who would ask us to bear the responsibility of others—If you send us word that you have no time to correct and have written in great haste, we shall put your manuscript into the fire. Why should you throw upon us the task of correcting your scrawl, when we are obliged to slight our own work for want of time? Give us facts, incidents, occurrences, at the earliest moment, and we shall be grateful, though you write with a pudding stick; but if you attempt logic or sentiment, do it up right instead of leaning on us."

The Follies and Sins of American Women.

When I see the tawdry fashions, the costly vulgarity, and the wicked extravagance of the times, I feel sure that thousands of American women are strangers to the first law of refinement,—simplicity of manners and attire.

When I see that thousands of American women read the most shameful romances and the most degrading newspapers; frequent the vilest dramatic entertainments, and join in dances too shocking to be named among Christians,—I feel that Christian matrons are becoming too few, and that civilized heathenism is returning to the fields we have wrested from the Indians.

When I read daily of the most ungodly divorces, and of crimes against social purity [illegible] to be mentioned more particularly, I feel that too many of our country women are without God in the world, and that radical reforms are necessary in the systems of education on which the young women of America are dependent for their training.

When I see thousands of households in which young girls are reared for a life of pleasure, without reference to duty, I cannot wonder at these results, nor at the misery in which they involve families and communities. Sow the wind and reap the whirlwind!

As a Christian Bishop, therefore, I make my appeal to you, Christian women, and I ask you to begin the reformation, by faithfully bearing your testimony against all that tends to the degradation of your sex, and the more so, when such crime is not only winked at, but receives countenance in circles which ought to be exemplary.—Pastoral Letter of Bishop Coxe.

"Fanny Fern" has come out lately with an indignant remonstrance to the young women of America, begging them to give up their haunts of "indolent invalidism," and to exert themselves a little. She says:

"I am fifty-five, and I feel half the time as if I were just made. To be sure I was born in Maine, where the timber and the human race last; but I don't eat pastry, nor candy nor ice-cream. I don't drink tea—bah! I walk, not ride. I own stout boots—pretty ones, too! I have a water proof cloak, and no diamonds. I like a nice bit of beef-steak and a glass of ale, and any body else who wants it may eat pap. I go to bed at ten and get up at six. I dash out in the rain, because it feels good on my face. I don't care for my clothes, for I will be well, and after I am buried, I warn you, don't let any fresh air or sunlight down on my coffin, if you don't want me to get up."

FINE COUNTRY.—A correspondent of the Whitby Chronicle gives a glowing account of the beauty and salubrity of New Zealand, which colony he has recently visited. He says: "The climate is so favorable that you can grow vegetables all the year round. I planted potatoes in July which will be fit to dig about the 15th of November. I have also about an acre of buckwheat, sowed first September, which will be ripe about December, when I put in corn, which may be planted up to 15th January. In fact a man can do three times the work here he can in Canada, the seasons are so long. You can work every day except when raining, which in winter is a couple of days about every two weeks (full and new moon) No cold.—Had in winter a few night's frost, hardly white, such as you sometimes have in Canada in August. The days are very warm, scarcely any perceptable difference between summer and winter, as you may judge from the fact that the children sometimes go into the water in mid-winter."

PRIESTS AND POVERTY.—A correspondent of the Pall-Mall Gazette writes from Rome on the 23rd ult.:—"On Thursday, the Pope received all the preachers who are to occupy the pulpits of Rome during Lent, and addressed to them a discourse in Italian. The Holy Father recommended them to take Jesus Christ for their model, for by him poverty was made a cardinal virtue, and as such it should be esteemed by ecclesiastics. Unfortunately, this was not done, and he continually received petitions for good places and emoluments from those who had taken vows of perpetual poverty. He could not but censure this spirit, which was so general among the religious orders, and so subversive of their rules.

The Reduction a Postage.

The Postal Act passed during the last Session of the Parliament of the Dominion came into operation on the first of this month. We have already incidentally alluded to its provisions, but think it as well, in so far as reductions in the rates of postage are concerned, concisely to state them again. It will be seen that a considerable reduction in the rates now paid will take place; and that if we have not yet in all its entirety the penny postage system connected we are at least taking a long stride in that direction. After the first of April, the postage of all letters transmitted by post from any distance within the Dominion will be reduced from five to three cents per half ounce. To be forwarded at that rate, however, letters must be prepaid, either by postage-stamp or in cash.—Should a letter be mailed unpaid, five cents will be charged upon it at the office where it is delivered.

The following are the foreign postal rates:

On letters to or from the United Kingdom in mails by Canada Packets, to or from Quebec in summer, or Portland in winter; or by mail packet to or from Halifax—12½ cents per ½ oz.

On do. in mails via New York packets—15 cents per ½ oz.

On letters to Prince Edward Island, if prepaid, 3 cents per ½ oz; if posted unpaid 5 cents per ½ oz.

On letters to Newfoundland, 12½ cent per ½ oz; to be in all cases prepaid.

On letters to British Columbia and Vancouver's Island—10 cents per ½ oz; to be in all cases prepaid.

On letters to Red River, 6 cents per ½ oz. to be in all cases prepaid.

Newspapers printed and published in Canada may be sent by post from the office of publication to any place in Canada at the following rates, if paid quarterly in advance, either by the publisher, at the post office where the papers are posted, or by the subscriber, at the post office where they are delivered:

For a paper published once a week, 5 cents per quarter of a year.

For a paper published twice a week, 10 cents per quarter of a year.

For a paper published three times a week, 15 cents per quarter of a year.

For a paper published six times a week, 30 cents per quarter of a year.

The rate for printed papers, circulars, books, pamphlets, &c., to any place in the Dominion, Prince Edward Island, Newfoundland, or the United States, will be one cent per ounce; on period cal publications, one cent for four ounces. The rate on parcels by parcel post will be 12½ cents per 8 ounces. On book and newspaper manuscript, addressed to the editor or publisher, the rate will be one cent per ounce to any place in Canada or the States.

The following denominations of postage stamps have been prepared for use throughout the Dominion, and will be supplied to to postmaster for sale, all bearing as a device the effigy of Her Majesty.

Half cent stamps, one cent do., two cents do., three cents do., six cents do., twelve and a half cents do., fifteen cents do.

Modifications in the postal conventions between the United States and the Dominion, have also been agreed upon between the Post Departments of the two countries, to take effect from the same date. These are as follows:—

1. The authorized weight for a single letter shall be fifteen grammes (by the metrical scale) in the United State, and half an ounce in the Dominion of Canada.

2. The postage on a single letter shall be six cents if prepaid at the office of mailing in either country, and ten cents if posted unpaid; for other than single charge shall be made for each additional fifteen grammes or half an ounce or fraction thereof.

Postage will accordingly be levied on and after April 1, 1868, charging six cents per single rate for international letters, if the postage is prepaid, and ten cents if the postage is unpaid or but partially prepaid.

Upon unpaid or insufficiently prepaid letters received from Canada, a postage of ten cents per single rate will be levied for collection at the office of delivery. And the same rule will be observed here regarding similar letters from the United States.

FENIANISM.

We give below an extract which shows most clearly that there is danger shortly to be expected from the Fenian horde. We should say it is bad policy for the military authorities to be withdrawing the greater part of the military force from Western Ontario, when in all probability their services will shortly be required.

PERIL TO CANADA.—In his charge to the Grand Jury, at the opening of the Welland March Quarter Sessions Judge Price if reported to have spoken thus:—"Lastly, I should be false to my trust if I neglected to call your attention to what is daily obtruded on our notice, and what has been brought before me officially. Misguided men on the American frontier are daily drilling and arming. They avow their intentions in the most open manner, they drill in the public streets in open daylight, and avow their purpose to make a descent on Canada during the coming summer. When, where or how that raid may be expected we know not, but it is with pain and grief that I say that I fear troubled times are in store for us. Still, the staunch loyalty of 1837 and 1866 is alive yet, and though trouble and mi-ery may come upon us, I do not fear for the results. We received a lesson two years ago, and we gave one in return. I only hope, and I fondly trust, the lesson we may be compelled to teach this year will be one that will not be forgotten during the next fifty years."

COST OF PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS.—The amount expended on the Ottawa public buildings, to 21st November, 1867, including fitting-up, grading, &c., is returned at $2,765,012; but the contractors will demand interest. The cost of completing the main tower and library of the Parliament building is estimated at $185,000; but would, according to previous experience of estimates, cost more than twice as much. The cost of heating and lighting the Departmental building for 1867 was $13,177; the Senate, $7,493; the House of Commons, $8,340; total, $29,000. The expenses for heating and lighting Senate and Commons are incurred in a comparatively small part of the year.—Ex.

It used to be a vulgar boast that "everything is great in America, Sir!" Its rivers, its forests, its mountains, its lakes, its territories. But no one ever supposed that its greatness would extend in the direction of placing two Presidents on their trial at one and the same time. Mr. Jeff. Davis, the choice of the Southern people, and Mr. A. Johnson, that of the North, will be on trial during the same month. Is not this real greatness; something immeasurably superior to the mere accidental immensity that Nature has supplied?

THE SILVER DURBAPUR.

The following paragraph in Mr. Rose's Banking Bill we read with satisfaction:

"The Governor may, at any time after the day to be appointed by Proclamation that all or any of the silver coin of the United States of America, and other foreign silver coins, shall, when the exchange and duties be adjusted in such proclamation, pass current and be a legal tender in Canada, at rates in currency to be assigned to them respectively in such proclamation, in such cases in any one payment as may be therein declared."

At rates in currency to be assigned to them which of course readers it discretionary, with the Executive whether they put these rates above or below their intrinsic value. By fixing their current value here at a rate below their actual worth in the precious metal the strongest inducement will be held out to Brokers and Speculators to buy them up, and take them out of the country. This will be the fairest and best way to settle the difficulty and abate the nuisance. In thus getting rid of the American silver, however, we shall be placing ourselves in a position to "want shall change." Our government must provide for this contingency. We perceive that the Town of Stratford has already petitioned the Government to have a large amount of new Canadian coins struck off. Some such procedure will be necessary; but a delay must take place even in this arrangement in order for our authorities to ascertain what will be done by the American and English Governments relative to the proffered universal currency.—Ex.

The Arbitration Between Quebec and Ontario.

The Globe thinks the Province of Quebec is going to get the advantage of the Province of Ontario, in the abitration which is to decide the relative proportions that each is to bear of the large amount of debt that must be shared between them and all other questions involved in the recent separation of the provincial partnership. His reasons for this opinion are as follows:—

Judge Day, who is arbitrator for Quebec, is a far abler man than Senator McPherson, who represents Ontario, and will exercise more influence over the arbitrator appointed by the Dominion government, namely, Colonel Gray, of St. John, New Brunswick. The last the Globe describes as a genial, gentlemanly lawyer, possessed of considerable eloquence of the flowery sort, but a man of no great depth, and likely to be easily influenced, especially as he has no practical knowledge of accounts or financial questions. Col. Gray's claim to the office, according to the Globe, was not his fitness for it, but its fitness for him and the fact that the Government had to do something to reward him for his services in bringing about Confederation in New Brunswick.

Another objection to the personnel of the arbitration, raised by the Globe, is that, while Judge Day belongs wholly to Lower Canada, Senator David McPherson belonged also to Lower Canada until comparatively recently, and Mr. Bristow, the secretary, is in the same predicament. He complains, also, that all the three arbitrators belong to the Tory party, a mode of distributing patronage which he regards as unfair, and as likely to tell against the interests of Ontario.

The Canadian News (London) notices a meeting of the Republican Society—held on the 9th inst.—at which Mr. Alfred Waddington, of British Columbia, was present to explain the nature of his discoveries in the western part of the continent, and to unfold his proposals for an overland route to connect the Dominion with the Pacific Colony. After explaining the particular route which he deemed the most feasible and really the best for a transcontinental highway, he showed that the whole length of the route, from Bute Inlet, opposite Vancouver' Island to Collingwood—a distance of 3,490 miles—2,500 would be water communication, and of the 1,090 miles of land communication, 442 are already constructed, leaving only 648 miles of land communication to be completed to connect the termini of the proposed route. Of the Mr. Waddington remarked that the Dominion have undertaken to construct the portion from L ke Superior to Fort Gerry, and the Columbian Government having undertaken to construct another portion, there only remains 140 to construct, for which some outside assistance is required. The notice of the meeting concludes as follows:—"Sir Roderick Murchison, who presided, cordially thanked Mr. Waddington for the important addition to geographical knowledge contained in the description of the route in British Columbia, for which they were entirely indebted to his explorations. The meeting was very numerously attended, and the subject seemed to create great interest." Apart from the fact that Mr. Waddington has made an important contribution to geographic science, it is certain that his statements as to the remarkable facilities which are presented for the construction of trans-continental highway will possess great interest in the estimation of the commercial classes, and probably induce capitalists of England to subscribe the means for constructing the work.

SAUL DAVIS LOOKING AFTER GOVERNMENT FAVOR.—The notorious proprietor of the Table Rock House has started on a mission to Ottawa, to induce the Government to restore the extra advantages he formerly enjoyed for fleecing visitors, by renewing his license to furnish guides under the Falls. Before the Government considers such an application, we trust accommission will be appointed to ascertain whether the dignity of the law and the public welfare do not demand the total suppression of the applicants operations in that locality. The entire population of Clifton, and the vicinity of the Falls on the Canadian side, have been scandalized for years through the constant outrages perpetrated on visitors by this Davis and his hired ruffians, and there is no doubt that the general business of the community has suffered immensely in consequence. The reputation of our laws demands that the perpetrators of these wrongs should be put down, and the object should enlist the attention of the Press throughout the Province.—St. Catherines Post.

Government tinkering with the Banks is to be postponed till next session, and not then to be proceeded with until a committee chosen from both sides of the House, takes the evidence of bankers and others interested, and reports thereon. So much for the influence brought to bear by the bankers, and no thanks to a government, some members of which will never be satisfied until they have robbed the banks of their circulation, to bide the Finance Minister for a time over a yearly increasing difficulty.

THURSDAY, APRIL 2, 1868.

PARLIAMENTARY.

There is very little to report of importance in the New Dominion Parliament; the debates are not so warm as they were in the early part of the session.

On Friday last, it was agreed that government measures be taken upon all days not government days, after the other business of the House is gone through; and notice was given of the intention to introduce a militia bill on Tuesday. A fifth report of the joint committee on printing was read and adoption moved, but it was lost. They recommended the idea of an official report of the debates of the House, at a cost of about $12,019.—An Act for continuing the Parliament in case of the demise of the Crown, was read a third time and passed. The House also agreed to reconsider the Act relating to currency so as to strike out the clause that related to the change of the currency of Nova Scotia.

Considerable discussion arose relating to the power the government has of issuing bills or legal tenders, some contending that they might issue to the amount of $13,000,000, and others thinking to the amount of only $8,000,000. The government declared that the act gave them power to the full extent of $13,000,000.

The subject of granting $30,000 for a geological survey having been postponed in order to have a message from the Governor General on the matter, that message being now introduced was read.

An act respecting the security to be given by officers of Canada was read a 2nd time.

Tuesday, Mr. McKenzie drew the attention of the House to the case of one McDonald, who had been remanded in order to be extradited on a charge of theft. Sir J. A. McDonald said the government was bound to see that the right of British subjects was not violated.

An effort was made to discover whether the Imperial Government fixed the salary of the Governor-General or whether the delegates recommended it as it is. Sir John A. McDonald said the government had no official knowledge of it, but believed that the delegates reported a provision that the salary be $50,000. If this be true we have learned another lesson of the extravagance of those men who composed the delegation.

The TARIFF is to be re-adjusted during the present session. What a pretty mess a yearly adjustment of the tariff must cause.—What merchant would enter into any extensive business liable thus to be affected every year by bungling legislators?

Mr. McKenzie moved for a detailed statement of account—$14,813 for alterations in parliament buildings, and $21,429 for fitting up the buildings; this was carried.

Mr. Masson (Soulanges) complained of the character of the judiciary in the Province of Quebec. The judges were incapable and a great wrong was consequently done in the administration of justice. Two of them had almost lost their heads; one was not of good moral character, and a third was so deaf that in an action for $10 he actually gave judgment for $100. (Laughter.) If the correspondence that had taken place between the Montreal bar and the government in regard to the judges of that district were brought down, it would astonish the House.

Mr. McDonald wound up by stating that he must say he could be responsible for the appointments, while in office. We suppose he had something to do with it all along—Will it be better?

The Militia Bill was introduced by Mr. Cartier. It proposes that the number of trained men throughout the dominions should not be less than 40,000; and that the officers of the reserve shall be trained. It also provides that the Dominion be divided into 200 regimental divisions; Upper Canada to furnish about 17,500 active militia; Quebec 12,500; Nova Scotia, 5,000; and New Brunswick, 4,000. The yearly training to be not less than 8 days nor more than 16, but drill may be carried on at will of companies. The pay during drill to be 50 cents a day. This should at least be one dollar. From the discussion it appears that our militia system cost yearly, for three years, $1,500,000. The present Minister Militia assumes the yearly cost of his scheme at $900,000. We may wait and see if it will not cost more.

NOVA SCOTIA.

The highest hopes are rarely realized either in public or private circumstances, and, too, often the very opposite of our expectations become a stern reality. In the matter of confederation we fear this is doomed to take place. We expected that a union of all these provinces would tend to bind them to the mother country, and that a commingling in business, &c., would tend to bind them to each other. The contrary of this is likely to take place, nay appears to have taken place. The feelings of the anti-unionists are so agitated by a few interested leaders that, right or wrong, they continue to insist that they be allowed to withdraw from the union and return to their former position, or as is openly in some cases avowed, unite themselves to the United States. We cannot for a moment imagine that they contemplate in the remotest degree to become annexed. A few may desire to have their former government restored, and that they may be left to manage their own local affairs as they were wont to do, still there must be wisdom enough among them to know that such would not now be a wise one. There are many Canadians who believe that they have some show of reason for retaining their hostility to the union, feeling that the Dominion Government is not actuated by a spirit of reconciliation, but by an arbitrary and despotic will to which the whole Dominion must bend or be broken up.

Mr. Howe may be an inconsistent politician and a very unwise leader, but be this as it may he has his influence, and that influence is greater than that of any other man in that Province. Nor is it likely that he does not see just causes for his opposition. We cannot think that he would go so far as to [illegible] Dr. Tupper, on the other hand, is looked upon by the people as their enemy, and in consequence the great body of the Nova Scotians detest him. Yet this is the man whom Sir John A. McDonald chooses to send to England to oppose the action of Mr. Howe. This will inflame the people more and more, and make the breach wider and wider. Coercion is out of the question in this matter. We should do all in our power to appease; legislation should be so directed as to remove cause of complaint; nothing should be done that would irritate, if in justice to the others it can be left undone; and when all this has been done, if they remain dissatisfied, let them go; under the circumstances we would be better without them than with them. Ye fear, however, that our present Government have acted very foolishly in sending to England the man whom they consider their traitor, as every act of his will be considered as a fresh endeavor to rivet their chains tighter. Why was the matter not left with the Imperial Government?

Grain in Store this Season.

The very high prices of produce at present must more or less press on the great mass of the population of cities and towns, and in some few instances press very hard indeed. The question arises—are the prices likely to keep up or to increase perhaps as in other years. Of this we say that the quantity of grain in store at present appears to be equal if not larger than last year or '66, while there must also be a large quantity still held by the farmers.

Of the different kinds of grain at Chicago there are 3,895,030 bushels, 1,413,080 bushels more than at a corresponding period of '67. At New York there is a large decrease. But it is held that receipts from the west will more than balance any decrease found to exist. It is also held that the present state of the home market is not such as to be favorable to a large demand, and consequently unfavorable to increase in prices. The Merchant Magazine says:—

It would appear that there is a strong combination of cause unfavourable to the maintenance of the present high prices of breadstuffs. These tendencies are strengthened by the depressed condition of industry in many parts of the country, enforcing a rigid economy consumption, and by the further fact that in Great Britain and some parts of the Continent a similar depression exists. We venture, however, no predictions as to the future course of prices, but simply present these naked facts for the candid consideration of those whom they may concern.

The weather, for the last two or three weeks has been uncommonly fine. The snow has entirely disappeared, and in several localities we hear of the Farmers at work ploughing. They are, no doubt, anxious for a little rain. The winter crops look reasonably healthy and so far do not appear to have suffered much, if anything. Late good prices will urge the husbandman to put in as large an area of crop this year as he can. Let us hope that his labors will turn out to his wishes. It will rejoice the heart of all to witness an abundant harvest in 1868.

IMPEACHMENT.—When the impeachment court was re-opened on Monday, the President's counsel read his answer to the articles of impeachment, and a delay to the 30th was granted.

☞Remember the Concert to-night, in the Music Hall.

PERSONAL.—We learn that Robt. Bourinot, Esq., Q. C., is appointed Deputy Judge for this County, Judge Boucher being very ill, but we are glad to say somewhat improving in health. The appointment was opposed, and it was thought it would be [illegible] Judge, as was done, but [illegible] Mr. Bourinot, and this mode approved, but when a respectable bargain, in such of our Investigated upright character, and at least an average amount of decision of character receives the appointment, the community will accept it with pleasure.

SUNSTROKE IN WEBBY.—From our exchanges we learn that Mr. Alex. McNabb, Police Magistrate of Toronto, in a temperance lecture in Guelph lately asserted that a druggist had informed him that Messrs. Gooderham & Worts, the great distillers, purchased many strychnine in one month than would poison the whole of Toronto.—Mr. McNabb did not say they used it in the whisky, but this is to be inferred. We will leave those who use the liquors to draw their own conclusions.

DASTARDLY.—Some wretch or wretches, whose love of the beautiful seems to be very low, or whose destructiveness is very large, has destroyed several of the young trees planted last year opposite the Union School buildings. The Board will, we hope, offer a reward sufficient to induce information that may lead to the punishment of the guilty party. The Town Council has already offered a reward of $25.00.

"WHERE ARE THEY?"—Some cruel fellow put the above question to us lately, in reference to our representatives in the Dominion Parliament, and we had to confess our inability to answer. "They can neither be found nor heard," said he. In answer to this we remarked that they cannot hereafter be judged out of their own mouth. They appear to be like the Irishman's crow—"No great speakers, but great thinkers."

Five true bills have been found against one Robert Notman, by the Grand Jury of Montreal, for procuring abortion. A charge of the same kind has been preferred against a doctor practising in Toronto. It appears that in every large city there are to be found medical men who will engage in this kind of murder for a few paltry dollars.

Mr. Cartier denies that he knows anything of the enlistment of Canadians for the papal services, and yet it is well known that those who did enlist were publicly blest in Mr. Cartier's church, and the Montreal Catholic papers contained glowing accounts of the whole affair.

A meeting was held at Ottawa on the 25th ult., to consider the silver nuisance, when it was agreed to petition the government to call in the American silver at such discount as they might think advisable, or to issue a proclammation fixing the discount on American silver at 10 per cent.

LINCOLN ELECTION will take place on the 9th and 10th inst. The candidates are T. R. Merrit and Wm. Eccles. Mr. Merritt it is said was the choice of the Reformers who could most easily meet together. Mr. Eccles is also a Reformer.

At the late Assizes at Vaucouver, one Scofield Wood was found guilty of killing his child, of about 11 months old, by severe whipping; he has received sentence to be hung on the 25th day of June. The Jury recommended him to mercy.

FOUR BOYS DROWNED.—The Madoc Mercury says that four boys aged respectively 16, 15, 12 and 10 years were drowned on Sunday while skating. The ice gave way and all were lost.

Missed his Man.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—I have been somewhat amused at seeing in your last issue a note signed by Mr. George Young, in which there was a futile effort made to identify the writer "North Monaghan" in a former issue. I may briefly inform Mr. Young that he has widely missed his man. As to the marks of personal identification he has signally failed, and I affirm most emphatically that he has failed to hit the right man in his various suppositions, perhapses, and other statements; in short, as they refer to me I pronounce them every one fals. Mr. Young never did anything (at least, that I am aware of) to injure me either in his official or private capacity, hence I have no personal quarrel with him. With these remarks I dismiss my personal interests in the case, leaving the public to judge for themselves as to the animus which actuated Mr. Young's note. I have merely to add that though I neither court nor fear a newspaper tournament on municipal polemics, yet I protest against descending to a tilting game in personalities.

NORTH MONAGHAN.

In reference to the above, we give it place in order to allow "North Monaghan" an opportunity of putting himself in his true position, if the remarks of Mr. Y. do not refer to him. We have made up our mind not to have a discussion. Already, we have communications lying over that we will continue to withhold unless justice should demand their publication.—ED. EXAMINER.

Galway Mining Company (Limited).

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—In your last issue you published an assay of rock taken from the property of the above Company. I find it has created a wrong impression on the minds of some of our citizens, to correct which I beg to trespass briefly on your attention.

The rock yielding the small percentage of gold and silver, as given in the assay, was not taken from the lead vein which is now being worked, as has been inferred, but from a distinct vein running in a contrary direction and cutting the lead vein at right angles; nor is it assumed that the yield is rich except as a surface specimen; but shewing the existence of the precious metals in addition to the silver bearing lead (the richness of the latter I consider is established beyond a doubt) must greatly enhance the value of the property.

Yours, &c.,
H. C. ROGERS,
Provisional Managing Director.

TORONTO UNIVERSITY.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—Such was the hostility at one time of the people to the existing charter of King's College, that a bill, passed the Legislative Assembly by a majority of 40 to 5 to Humiliate the Charter, and thereby open the floodgates to all parties, including the religious denominations of. The Executive Council, in order to avert this, introduced a bill to secularize the University, which was rejected in the Legislative Council by a majority of one. The Executive Council,

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER

As a Family Medicine, it is well and favorably known, relieving thousands from pains in the Side, Back and Head, Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Sprains, Bruises, Cramps in the Stomach, Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Bowel Complaints, Burns, Scalds, Frost-bites, &c. &c.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER

Has now been before the Public for a length of time, and wherever used is well liked, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction, where the Directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

We speak from experience in this matter, having tested it, thoroughly, and therefore those who are suffering from any of the complaints for which it is recommended may depend upon its being a Sovereign Remedy.

The astonishing efficacy of the Canadian Pain Destroyer, in curing the diseases for which it is recommended, and its wonderful success in subduing the torturing pains of Rheumatism, says in relieving Nervous Affections, entitle it to a high rank in the list of remedies for these complaints. Orders are coming in from Medicine Dealers, in all parts of the Country for further supplies, and each testifying as to the universal satisfaction it gives.

The Canadian Pain destroyer never fails to give immediate relief. All Medicine dealers keep it. Physicians order and use it; and no family will be without it after once trying it. Price only Twenty-five cents per Bottle.

VERY NATURAL.

When a person has proved an article and found it good, and concerning the purpose for which it is intended he will not readily abandon it for one of doubtful reputation, or concerning which he knows nothing. We are led to make these remarks owing to the course always pursued by those who have used that celebrated and truly valuable horse medicine known as "Darby's Arabian Heave Remedy,"—all are so well pleased with it that they will not use any other; many have waited several weeks until the agent could obtain a new supply. There is nothing equal to it as a condition Medicine, or for any complaint affecting the wind of horses.

Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurlbut & Co. is on each package.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, excoriated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and self-administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 75 cts. per bottle.

SUGAR-COATED.

A RE a safe and reliable remedy for all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary people, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

J. H GIBBIN, M.D., Dunbarton, C. E.
U. E. COTTON, M. D., Cowansville.

WOMAN'S HEART.

God's angels took a little drop of dew,
New-fallen from the heaven's far-off bloom,
And a ray of light all the fallen green,
Shedding its perfume in the moon's soft sheen;
And a fragment—not of all and bright—
Faded all image from out of sight.
Washing the lily of the lily white,
With hues bloom and green they colored right;
Made purity and softness clear to see,
And added pride to this, and slight a fear.
One wish, her Child's hope, and bring no tears two,
Courage and sweetness in misfortune's smart
And out of this was moulded woman's heart.

GOING TO CHURCH.

Some go to church just for a walk;
Some go there to laugh and talk;
Some go there the time to spend;
Some go there to meet a friend;
Some go to learn the parson's name;
Some go there to wound his fame;
Some go there for reputation;
Some go there for observation;
Some go there to doze and nod;
And some—how few!—to worship God.

A Family that Couldn't Spell Turnip.

Being at dinner, Johnny passed his plate for turnip. 'Spell it, Johnny, and I will give you.'

'T-u-r-n-o-p,' shouted the young hopeful.

'Oh, fy! my son, that is not right; hold up your head and hear how your pa spells it.—t-u-r-n-u-p!'

'Sakes alive,' ejaculated ma'm from the head of the table. 'I should like to know if I am married to a man that can't spell his own vege ables.'

Mr. Smith's dignity was wounded. He had been a schoolmaster down East, and he thought he knew turnips.

'Spell it yourself, my dear,' cried Mr. Smith, wiping his moustache with unusual care, while he glanced knowingly around the table.

'Well, I guess I'm able to,' jerked out Mrs. Smith, with a sublime toss of her cap border: 't-u-r-n-e-p—turnep. Words are generally spelt as they are pronounced.'

'I say it's pronounced turn-op,' said Johnny.

'It is pronounced turn-up,' said Mr. Smith.

'It is pronounced turn-ep,' reiterated madam.

After much wrangling, the family remembered there was a dictionary in the house, which was called for, and as we left, we had the pleasure of hearing them spell it in concert with evident surprise—t-u-r-n-i-p.

AN INVESTMENT IN HORNS.—We find the following in the Savannah (Ga.) Republican;

A friend of ours was sitting in his office on Monday, trying to fix his thoughts upon an abstruse work before him, but they wandered sadly from the subject, owing to the terrible noise maintained in front of his door by a small negro with a tin horn—Finally he became too nervous to stand it any longer, and went out and called the boy and asked how much he would take for the horn.

"I dunno sah," was the answer.

"Will you take a quarter?"

"Yes sah?"

The quarter was duly paid and the gentleman took possession of the offending horn. Scarcely had he recreated himself when a din far more terrible broke out in front of his office. He rushed out, and there was the veritable negro, reinforced by a comrade, and both using their best efforts on tin horns. Again the boy was interrogated this time as to where he obtained the horns.

"I buyed 'em, sah, wid the quarter what you gin me."

He has concluded henceforth to reserve more quarters for tin horns. The cure proved worse than the disease.

A very funny incident occurred in a neighbouring city, says an exchange, a few days since, and one which is too good to be lost. One of our celebrated composers has written a very pretty song entitled "Kiss Me." A very pretty blushing maid, having heard of the song, and thinking she would get it, with some others stepped into a music store to make a purchase. One of the Clerks, a modest young man, stepped up to wait on her. The young lady threw back her veil, saying:

"I want 'Rock Me to Sleep.'"

The clerk got the song, and put it before her.

"Now," said the young lady, "I want the 'Wandering Refugee.'"

"Yes ma'am," said the Clerk bowing, and in a few minutes he produced the 'Refugee.'

"Now, 'Kiss Me,'" said the young lady, of course meaning the song above mentioned.

The poor clerk's eyes popped fire almost as he looked at the young lady in utter astonishment, for he was not aware of the fact that a song by that name had been published.

"Wh—what did you say, Miss?"

"Kiss Me," said she.

"I can't do it; I never kissed a young lady in my life," said the clerk.

And about that time a veil dropped, the young lady left in a hurry, clerk felt sick and dealer lost the sale of some music.

The Brockville Recorder says:—We find in the Melbourne (Australia) Argus of Dec. 27, 1867, which a friend has sent us, the following quaint but very expressive advertisement. Australia, although like Canada, a Province of Great Britain, appears to be more progressive than we are; the advertisement announces that;

"I, Elizabeth Powell, hereby give notice that if my husband does not answer this advertisement in three months from this date, I intend to get married. Elizabeth (her x mark) Powell."

Dr. Monsey, in the heyday of his social fame, told his friends that his first encounter of any note was a baker and retail dealer in hops. At a critical point of this worthy's career when hops were "down" and feathers were "up," to raise a small sum of money for immediate use, he ripped open his beds, sold the feathers, and stuffed the tick with unsaleable hops. Soon a change in the market occurred, and once more operating on the couches used by himself and children, he sold the hops at a profit, and bought back the feathers. "That's the way, sir, by which my family hopped from obscurity," the doctor would conclude.

A wide awake minister, who found his congregation going to sleep one Sunday before he had fairly commenced, suddenly stopped and exclaimed:—"Brethren, this isn't fair; it isn't giving a man half a chance. Wait till I get along a piece, and then if I am't worth listening to, go to sleep; but don't begin to snore before I get commenced—give a man a chance.

Small boy, on tip toe, to his companions—"Sha, s op your noise, all of you."—Companions—"Hello, Tommy, what is the matter?" Small boy—"We've got a new baby, he's very weak and tired, walked all the way from heaven last night, mus't be kicking up a row here now."

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

And for the speedy cure of the following complaints: Scrofula and Scrofulous Affections, such as Tumors, Ulcers, Sores, Eruptions, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Blains, and all Skin Diseases.

COLLEGE HILL, Ga. June, 1867.

DR. J. C. AYER & CO.—Sirs: I feel it my duty to acknowledge what your Sarsaparilla has done for me. Having inherited a Scrofulous infection, I have suffered from it in various ways for years. Sometimes it would come in blotches on my hands and arms; sometimes it turned inward and ulcerated on the stomach. Two years ago it broke out on my head and covered my scalp and face with one sore, which was painful and loathsome beyond description. I tried many medicines and several physicians, but without much relief from any thing. In fact, the disorder grew worse. At length I was induced to send to the nearest depot for what you had prepared as an alterative (Sarsaparilla). I knew from your reputation that any thing you made must be good. I took it in Cinclnnati and got it, and used it till it cured me. I took it, as you advise, in small doses of a teaspoonful over a month, and used almost three bottles. New and healthy skin soon began to form under the sore, which after a while fell off. My skin is now clear, and I know by my feelings that the disease has gone from my system. You can well believe that I feel what I am saying when I tell you, that I hold you to be one of the agencies of the age, and remain ever gratefully, Yours,

ALFRED B. TALLEY.

St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Dropsy.

Dr. Robert M. Preble writes from Salem, N. Y., 12th Sept., 1865, that he has cured an inveterate case of Dropsy, which threatened to terminate fatally, by the persevering use of our Sarsaparilla, and also a dangerous Malignant Sore Ulcer by large doses of the same; says he cures the common Eruptions by it constantly.

Bronchocele, Goitre or Swelled Neck.

Sebastian Sloan of Prospect, Texas, writes: "Three bottles of your Sarsaparilla cured me from a Goitre—a hideous swelling on the neck, which I had suffered from over two years."

Leucorrhœa or Whites, Ovarian Tumor, Uterine Ulceration, Female Diseases.

Dr. J. S. B. Channing, of New York City, writes: "I most cheerfully comply with the request of your agent in saying I have found your Sarsaparilla a most excellent alterative in the numerous complaints for which we employ such a remedy, but especially in Female Diseases of the scrofulous diathesis. I have cured many inveterate cases of Leucorrhœa by it, and some where the complaint was caused by ulceration of the uterus. The ulceration itself was soon cured. Nothing within my knowledge equals it for those female derange ments."

Edward S. Marrow, of Newbury, Ala., writes, "A daughter-in-law found on one of the females in my family, which had defied all the remedies we could employ, but at length been completely cured by your Extract of Sarsaparilla. Our physicians do such nothing but completed the mild alterative relief, but he advised the trial of Sarsaparilla as the last resort before cutting, and it proved effectual. After taking your remedy eight weeks no symptom of the disease remained."

Syphilis and Mercurial Diseases.

NEW ORLEANS, 9th August, 1860.

DR. J. C. AYER: Sir, I cheerfully comply with the request of your agent, and report to you some of the effects I have realized with your Sarsaparilla.

I have cured with it, in my practice, most of the complaints for which it is recommended, and have found its effects truly wonderful in the cure of Venereal and Mercurial Disease. One of my patients had Syphilitic ulcers in his throat, which were commencing to perforate and the bone of his nostrils. Mercurials, steadily taken, cured him in two weeks. Another was attacked by secondary symptoms in his nose and the ulceration had eaten away a considerable part of it, so that I believe the disorder would soon reach his brain and kill him. But it yielded to my administration of your sarsaparilla; the ulcers healed, and he is well again, but of course without some disfiguration to his face. A woman who had been treated for the same disorder by mercury was suffering from this poison in her bones. They had become so sensitive to the weather that on a damp day she suffered excruciating pain in her joints and bones. She, with many others, have been entirely cured by your Sarsaparilla. You know from its formula, which your agent gave me, that this Preparation from your laboratory must be a good remedy; consequently, them truly remarkable results with it have not surprised me.

Fraternally yours, C. V. LARIMER, M. D.

Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint.

INDEPENDENCE, Preston Co., Va. 4th July, 1866.

DR. J. C. AYER: Sir, I have been afflicted with a painful chronic Rheumatism for a long time, which baffled the skill of physicians, and stuck to me in spite of all the remedies I could find, until I tried your Sarsaparilla. One bottle cured me in two weeks and restored my general health so much that I am far better than before I was attacked. I think it a wonderful medicine. J. REAM.

Jules Y. Gelchell, of St Louis, writes: "I have been addicted for years with an affection of the Liver, which destroyed my health. I tried every thing, and every thing failed to relieve me; and I have been a broken-down man for some years from no other cause than derangement of the Liver. My beloved pastor the Rev. Mr. Popp, advised me to try your sarsaparilla, because he said he knew you, and any thing you made was worth trying. By the blessing of God it has cured me, and has so purified my blood as to make a new man of me. I feel young again. The best that can be said of you is not half good enough."

Schirrus, Cancer Tumors, Enlargement, Ulceration, Caries and Exfoliation of the Bones.

A great variety of cases have been reported to us where cures of these formidable complaints have resulted from the use of this remedy, but our space here will not admit of them. Some of them may be found in our American Almanac, which the agents below named are pleased to furnish gratis to all who call for them.

Dyspepsia, Heart Disease, Pile, Epilepsy, Melancholy, Neuralgia.

Many remarkable cures of these affections have been made by the alterative power of this medicine. It stimulates the vital functions into vigorous action, and thus removes the cause which would be supposed beyond its reach. Such a remedy has long been required by the sufferings of the people, and we are confident that this will do for them all that medicine can do.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the Relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced Stages of the Disease.

This is a remedy so universally known to surpass any other for the cure of throat and lung complaints that it is useless here to publish the evidence of its virtues. Its unrivalled excellence for coughs and colds, and its truly wonderful cures of pulmonary disease, have made it known throughout the civilized nations of the earth. Few are the communities, or even families, among them who have not some personal experience of its effects—some living trophy in their midst of its victory over the subtle and dangerous disorders of the throat and lungs. As all know the dreadful fatality of these disorders, and as they know, too, the effects of this remedy, we need not do more than to assure them that it has in all the virtue that it did have when making the cures which have won so strongly upon the confidence of mankind.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY IN CANADA.

MESSRS Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she did done. I had very severe night sweats, coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised quite a quantity of matter every 24 hours, had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq. Wellington, and inquired to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his ad ice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr. Lewis Josephus, of the Distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees, British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

THIS all-possessing Great Indian Remedy wanted, and in broad and emphatic language, we can safely say may be replied upon to make a permanent cure of all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys Digestive Organs, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurity of the Blood, excepting the third stage of Consumption. In the Western Country where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has indeed affected some of the most Marvellous Cures, ever recorded in the annals of Historical Medicine. Such being the case, in addition to his former renown and celebrity, we defy humanity to dispute the fact that this, the Great Shoshonees Remedy in connection with the Shoshonees Vegetable Restorative Pills, is the Remedy of Remedies of the 19th Century, and the greatest boon ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity.

CAUTION.

THE public are hereby cautioned to beware of purchasing Colored and Russian Mink for Canada Mink The Canada is superior to any in the world, and is therefore the most valuable This has induced wholesale dealers to imitate our Canada Mink, not only by coloring Russian, but also by coloring United States Mink. The Canada costs more than double that of any other country, which enables dealers to make a large profit on the spurious article. Those buying Furs in Montreal or other places should beware least they get the inferior article for which they will no doubt have to pay full prices. Take care, therefore, for I have been shown articles purchased as genuine in Montreal, which I can certify were colored and of inferior quality.

Those who buy any article of my own manufacture, I will warrant to be genuine, of best quality, and best workmanship, and at lower prices than any wholesale dealer will supply the same article.

A call is respectfully solicited.

THE LATE TRAGEDY.

EXAMINATION OF THE PRISONER WHALEN.

From the Ottawa Citizen.

The fact that the prisoner Patrick James Whalen, arrested on the charge of having murdered the late Mr. McGee, would be brought before the Police Magistrate, yesterday morning, having got abroad through the City, caused a very large concourse of people to assemble in the vicinity of the City Hall, at the usual hour for opening the Court

The investigation took place in the new Police Court recently erected over the new Engine House, in rear of the City Hall. About half-past ten o'clock the prisoner, who since his arrest on Tuesday last has been confined in the lock-up below the City Hall, guarded by a detachment of the Prince Consort's Own Rifle Brigade, was brought to the Court between a guard of four soldiers with drawn sword- and placed in the dock, at each end of which a bayonet sentry was placed and a similar guard posted at the passage leading to the stairs of the building. Shortly afterwards the Magistrate took his seat on the Bench, and with him were His Worship the Mayor, H. J. Friel, Esq, Alds. Featherstone, Rochester and Mowgrove.

Mr. James O'Reilly, Q.C., of Kingston, and Mr Robert Lees, County Attorney, appeared to watch the case for the Crown. No counsel appeared for the prisoner.

The Court had become so densely crowded that it was necessary to forbid the entrance of any more persons, and a guard was placed at the entrance door of the building.

The prisoner was dressed in a plain suit of black, with a small turned-down collar, fastened with a gold stud and a narrow black tie. He appeared to look more anxious and depressed than when first arrested—an expression which may partly have arisen from his not having shaved since his arrest. His mouth appeared firm as ever, and among the crowd that gazed on him, none met his eye whose stare he could not unflinchingly return.

It was with some difficulty that order was obtained in the Court; but comparative silence having been enforced, Mr. O'Gara, the presiding magistrate, called on the prisoner to stand up while he read the following information:

CANADA,
Province of Ontario,
City of Ottawa,
To Wit:

The information and complaint of Edward John O'Neil, of the city of Ottawa and Province of Ontario, Police Officer, taken upon oath before me, the undersigned, one of the Justices of the Peace, in and for the city of Ottawa, at the said city of Ottawa, this 9th day of April, A.D., 1868, who saith that Patrick James Whelan, to the best of his knowledge, information and belief, within the space of three months last past, to wit: On the 7th day of April in the year aforesaid, at the city of Ottawa aforesaid did feloniously and with malice aforethought, kill and murder Thomas D'Arcy McGee against the form of the Statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of Our Sovereign Lady the Queen, Her Crown and dignity.

(Signed,) EDWARD J O'NEIL

Taken and sworn before me the day and year, and at the place above mentioned.

(Signed), M. O'GARA.

Mr. O'Reilly said that the first witness he wished to call was the coroner.

Dr. Van Cortlandt sworn—I was called upon on the morning of Tuesday last, about a quarter to three o'clock, to hold an inquest on the body of the late Thos. D'Arcy McGee; I went at once to the Toronto House and found the body of the deceased lying on the sidewalk in front of the house; there was a large quantity of blood on the planks coming from his mouth and neck to the gutter; the loss of such a quantity of blood would be enough in itself to account for death had no other cause been discovered; I found the wound, from which it came, in the back of the neck; when I first saw the body it was lying on the ground with the arms and legs extended I made some parties present turn the body over, and found the wound at the back of the neck, on the right side of the vertebral column; the wound was a gun-shot wound, caused by a pistol bullet; I should say it had passed in at the back of the neck and out by the mouth; the bullet was afterwards found and handed to me; it is now in my possession.

Mr. O'Reilly—Is there any mark on it by which you would know it?

Witness—Yes.

Mr. O'Reilly—A private mark?

Witness—No.

The bullet having been produced by the witness, Mr. O'Reilly requested him to put a private mark on it, and hand it over to Detective O'Neil. He then desired Detective O'Neil to mark it also, and hand it to the Police Magistrate.

Dr. Vancortlandt—I got the bullet from Dr. McGillivray; he gave it to me shortly after I reached the scene of the murder; he gave it to me as Coroner; the clothes the deceased had on are in my charge; the coat, over coat, and shirt-collar are perforated by a bullet, and stained around the holes with blood; I have his walking-cane, which was found with him; it was found lying under his body.

Nothing further was asked of this witness, but the crown requested him to deliver over to the police the clothing, &c., of the deceased which, as Coroner, he had in charge, and Sergt. Davis, of the Ottawa Police Force, was sent to receive them.

Before leaving the box the Dr. said he should like, if possible, to have the bullet returned to him after the Court had done with it as he wished to keep it as a memento of the deceased.

Three false teeth which were carried out by the bullet and found on the side walk, were also produced by the witness and handed over to the Court.

The prisoner being asked if he wished to ask the witness any questions said he did not.

Sergt. Wilde sworn—I am a Sergeant of Company A, of the Prince Consort's Own Rifle Brigade; I know the prisoner in Quebec while I was there with my regiment; it was in 1865 or '66; I knew him under the name of James Sullivan; I do not know what he was first doing there, he was afterwards working as a tailor in the regimental tailor's shop in the citadel; afterwards he was arrested on the charge of being a Fenian as was also another party; he had then to leave the workshop; I also knew him as corporal in the Quebec Volunteer Cavalry, when they were out on duty in the spring of 1866, during the Fenian excitement; after his arrest I did not see him for some time; it was before his arrest that I knew him to be in the cavalry; I do not know him to have been subsequently arrested on any other charge; I saw him afterwards in Montreal; I do not know what name he was under.

Mr. O'Reilly—That will do.

The Court asked the prisoner if he wished to ask the witness anything.

Prisoner—Yes, I do. Was I in the cavalry when I was working in the Citadel.

Witness—Yes.

Prisoner—Was I convicted of any charge?

Witness—No; you were discharged.

To Mr. O'Reilly—His companion was also discharged; he was arrested for being in company with the other party, who was accused of tampering with the men.

Mr. Graham being sworn said: I am a messenger in the House of Commons; I take tickets during the session at the door of the gentlemen's gallery; I have seen the prisoner frequently about the House; I was engaged in taking tickets there on Monday night last; I saw the prisoner there on that evening; my attention was particularly drawn to him on that night from his coming in and out so often—four times I think; he always gave me tickets when he went into the gallery; he frequently gets these tick ts from Patrick Buckley; I do not know from whom he got them on that night; I saw him and Buckley have a long conversation that evening, about ten o'clock, in the grand lobby; he first came in about nine o'clock, but did not stay long; he seemed fidgety during the evening; it seemed to me so from his going in and out so often; there might have been the equarters of an hour between the time he first went out and his coming back. I think Mr. McGee was then addressing the House; the last time he came in was about a quarter-past twelve; I did not ask him for his ticket then as it was very late in; but few people were in the gallery; he took a step or two up the stairs and then stepped back and gave me a ticket; he did not seem to be under the influence of liquor; he was dressed in light clothes, dead I think; not the ones he has on now; Mr. McGee left the House about twenty minutes past two; I did not see him leave as I left before him, and only judge from what I have since heard.

To Prisoner: You gave me four tickets that night; I do not know where you got them; your conversation with Buckley was between half-past nine and ten o'clock; you were with Buckley in the corridor

To Mr. O'Reilly: No one was with the prisoner going up or down.

F. J. O'Neil, being sworn, said: I am a detective officer of the city; from information I received I went in company with others in search of the prisoner, and found him at the house of Michael Starrs in Clarence street; this was about half-past ten; the prisoner was in the house and appeared to have just come in; I arrested him and asked him his name; he said James Whelan; I said you are my prisoner; I had reason to believe that he carried a pistol, and passed my hands down his side to feel if he had anything concealed about him; I distinctly felt a lump in each coat pocket; Sergeant Davis then came up and searched prisoners right hand pocket, and I searched the left hand one; I found in the left hand pocket a box of pistol cartridges, of the kind called "Leet" cartridges; there were twenty-one in the box; there are twenty-eight in it now; the missing one I gave to Mr. Powell, the Sheriff, to compare with some others; after I took these from the prisoner's left hand pocket Detective O'Donoghue took from him a pistol cleaner, and Sergeant Davis found on him a revolver; the revolver was here produced to Court.

Witness—This is the one; it is almost new and what is called a Smith and Wesson six shooter; it is numbered on the stock 50 857; all the barrels were loaded when I got it; five of the cartridges had apparently been in some time, and the sixth was seemingly fresh; my attention was then drawn to the pistol itself; at the end of the barrel was the look of freshly burnt powder, and recently greased on the inside This was pointed out to me by Mr. Armstrong, a gun-smith; I found also in front of the cylinder some grease spread in such a way as could not have had resulted from loading, but as though some one done it to conceal the fact of recent use; one of the cartridges in the cylinder is rather large for the pistol about the cap; we went upstairs and searched the prisoner's room and found a number of things which I now produce, among them this copy of the Irish American, a journal, which from its contents, I judge to be published in the interest of the Fenian Brotherhood; we also found this pamphlet, the by laws and constitution of the St. Patrick's Benevolent Society of Montreal, published by Lovell & Gibson in 1867, and these two tickets; both for the Shamrock Quadrille Club, the Erin Go Bragh Branch; one is to admit James Whelan, and is signed W. D. O'Brien, as Secretary, the other is signed in blank by the same person; there is also a programme and ticke of admission to a ball, held on the 24th of February, 1867, and a number of letters—some private.

Mr. O'Reilly—And here is a valentine. The valentine was a commonly executed dent representing an imp hanging from a beam, and the following doggrel printed below:—

This is a shadow of what really should be
The fate of all such unwor by beings as thee—
A log of wood and a bit of twine
Will suit better than me for your valentine.

Witness—Being satisfied with the search, I took him to the lock-up; on the way I asked him how he would account for his time on Monday night; he said easily enough; I asked him what time he left the Parliament Buildings; he said a little before the House adjourned; I said, you left when the House adjourned—about half past two; he said it was only ten minutes past two when he was at the Russell House; I said, if you prove that it is all right.

Mr. O'Reilly—Look at this bullet.

Witness—I believe this to be a bullet from a cartridge for a Smith and Wesson; I got this from the Coroner; it seems to me to correspond exactly with those in the cylinder—that is, the old ones; cartridges like it are sold in this city, marked with the "L." like this; they are sold at Isaac's; they are made for a different revolver, some sizes smaller; prisoner, when arrested, had on trousers as described by Mr. Graham; there were other articles of clothing; also a pair of spurs; in one of his boxes a green sash, trimmed with silver, a saddle cloth and some badges, a photograph, and a card of the St Patrick Benevolent Society; James Whelan is written on the back of it; it looks like a ticket of membership; the regalia is what he wore on St. Patrick's day last as Marshal of the procession.

Witness recalled—I looked at his boots, when I arrested him, they were very light with their soles, like those on him now; I am not aware that I told him why he was arrested.

P. Aikes Egleson being sworn, said: I am a tailor and clothier; I have known the prisoner since November last; he entered my employment then as a tailor and has remained with me as such until Monday last; in December he was in Ottawa working for me; he had no correspondence with me before he came to Ottawa; there is a space of about 15 feet between my sale shop and the work shop; I was in the front shop about 8 15 on Monday morning last, but did not see him there, he might have been in the work shop without my seeing him; my cutter is a man named Rowse

Dr. Wolfe being sworn, said: I heard the evidence of Dr VanCortlandt regarding the appearance of Mr. McGee's body; I suggested at the post mortem examination; I found a wound as described by him; such a wound might cause death within a minute.

Mrs. Trotter was next called and sworn; Mr. O'Reilly read over to her her evidence as taken before the Coroner's inquest the day before, and she having attested to its correctness, he filed the document with the Court, and proceeded to further examine her.

Mr. O'Reilly—Have you ever seen the prisoner before?

Mrs. Trotter—I think I have seen the prisoner at the bar twice before in my house he came there with a young man named Bryce; Bryce is in the employment of the Government as a House messenger; they had each a glass of wine, and left; that was about three weeks ago, about 7 in the evening; the second time was about a few nights afterwards; he was alone; it was about 11 o'clock; the house was closed. and I was waiting for one of my lodgers to come in; he asked for a glass of wine, which I gave him at the counter; he asked for pen, ink and paper; I was writing in the dining room, off the bar-room, before he came in; I said I had none; he asked for a pencil, which I said I could not give him; he then wanted another glass of wine, which I refused him; he went into the dining room and saw the pen, ink and paper on the table, and asked why I did not give them to him; I said that was my own business, and told him to leave the place, which he did; these are the only two occasions on which I recollect seeing him; you must pass through the dining-room, going to or from the bar, when the house is closed.

Mr. O'Reilly said that the Crown did not think it advisable to continue the examination at present, and wished the prisoners to be remanded for eight days.

The prisoner was asked if he consented in the demand, and said he had no objection to urge.

The Court was therefore adjourned, and the prisoner remanded for that time.

The other three prisoners—Doyle, Slattery and Mitchell—were remanded earlier in the morning, under the Act suspending the Act of Habeas Corpus, and it is not probable that they will be examined for some few days.

ST. PATRICK'S LITERARY SOCIETY.—At a special meeting of the St. Patrick's Literary Society, held last night in the St. Patrick's Hall, the President, on taking the chair, stated the object of the meeting in the following words:—When we met on Tuesday evening last for the reception of the annual report of our Association we were so greatly shocked at the terrible tragedy of the night previous that we deferred our business and merely passed a resolution postponing our concert in consideration of the sympathy we hold for the family of the honorable Mr. McGee. The great anguish we all felt on that occasion did not permit our doing any more at that time, but we resolved to assemble again and express our feelings on the subject of the awful and abhorrent assassination of our countryman. We assemble to-night for that purpose. The following resolution was then unanimously adopted:—

"Moved by Mr. P. E. Ryan, seconded by Fr. M. Starrs,—That this Society sees cause for the deepest regret in the death of the Hon. Thos. D'Arcy McGee at the hands of the cowardly assassin, and feels called upon as the representative institution of the Irish Catholics of Ottawa to express its detestation of the act that deprived him of life and the country of a great and gifted Irishman and zealous Catholic."

A resolution expressing sympathy with the family of Mr. McGee was also passed. —Ottawa Citizen.

Reception of the body of the late Mr. McGee at Montreal.

Speaking of the removal of the remains of this lamented statesman from Ottawa to Montreal, the Montreal Gazette of yesterday says:

At all the stations from Prescott downwards flags were at half-mast high and other tokens of mourning exhibited, and crowds gathered who stood silent and uncovered as the special funeral train passed. At Matilda the stations were properly decorated with funeral ornaments and a large number of persons assembled. At Cornwall, the Mayor and Common Council, Judges and principal citizens were assembled, and the bells were tolled. Here again, the plate was removed and his friends allowed a last look at the departed. At Lancaster, besides the principal citizens, Capt. McLennan's Company of Volunteers turned out and lined the platform. Every where were tokens that the people felt how grievous was the loss which the country had suffered.

Precisely at five o'clock, the remains of the distinguished and lamented Thomas D'Arcy McGee arrived in this city. A great crowd of the people he had so worthily represented assembled to receive the remains and by their presence to illustrate their grief at the event, and their indignation at the dastardly act.

The station was appropriately draped in mourning, and at the entrance were hung with heavy festoons of crape. In the interior of the station a large number of our leading citizens attired in mourning awaited the arrival of the body.

The special train from Ottawa came in at 5.15, a train from Montreal having previously gone out to meet it at Lachine Junction with a large number of gentlemen. When the Ottawa train arrived at the station, the body, which was placed in a metallic coffin, was immediately removed to a hearse. The body was accompanied on the train by Messrs. W. O'Brien, W. P. Bartley, W. McFarlane, W. McNaughton, Brown Chamberlin, James Donnelly, Luke Moore, together with James Goodwin, D. Lanegan and others.

The cortege was headed by the City Police, under Chief Penton; the hearse was followed by chiefs. W. O'Brien, W. McNaughton and Walter McFarlane, after which came His Worship the Mayor, W. S. Smith, Esq. Mayor of London, Mr. Foote, of Quebec, and the Hon. Mr. Chauveau, with the members of the Committee, a number of the City Council and friends and admirers of the late lamented statesman, forming, as far as the eye could reach, a procession of all nationalities, creeds and stations. The sidewalks were also occupied by a large number of people who accompanied the procession in stern silence.

The funeral procession moved along Bonaventure street, up Beaver Hall, and to the residence of the deceased in St. Catherine street. Here the entrance had been heavily draped in black, and the body was received by Mr. Joseph Doyle. It was immediately placed in the dining room, which was draped in black and with the hanging, and dimly illuminated by large tapers. The public were soon afterwards kindly admitted, and in limited numbers at a time, permitted to pass round the coffin and look on the face of the deceased, which was exposed by means of a glass in the lid of the coffin. In spite of the great change, the features of the departed statesman, though exceedingly pale, were easily recognizable, and wore that air of calm repose which death alone can give.

Mr. McGee's Last Speech in the Canadian Parliament.

Dr. Parker in this connection would allude to the appointment of D. Tupper to proceed to England, there to explain the position of affairs in Nova Scotia in the matter of repeal of the Union. He looked upon the agitation as dangerous, yet it went on everywhere in Nova Scotia, at the firesde in the dining-room, on change, and in the streets. To treat such an agitation with neglect was dangerous, and to listen to the agitation was dangerous; and in this state of affairs what could have induced the Government to send home Dr. Tupper to combat an irritation which he was believed to have done everything to create. He it was who told the people that nothing would be done in the way of Confederation without the assent of the people having been obtained. He had lulled, in fact, the people of Nova Scotia to sleep only to find when they awoke that Confederation had been accomplished. He believed that if the people of Nova Scotia had been sufficiently educated to Confederation all would have been well. It had, however, been forced upon them, and they were dissatisfied. And how had this dissatisfaction been met, but by the petty, miserable, contemptible legislation of the first part of this session, by which they had tried in spite of the warnings of an ex-colleague, the people of Nova Scotia in such a way as to increase their irritation and to make them utter the word Canada only with a feeling of disgust.

Hon Mr. McGee hoped that the hon. gentlemen from Wellington Centre, who had spent sometime in opposing Confederation at the hustings, had promised to give this Union a fair trial. Yet he had ever sought for subjects of irritation, and it was time that the political mosque should be taken from his face, and the public be made aware that he never loses an opportunity of giving a stab in the dark. A member of a very honorable profession he must, nevertheless say that if he treated his patients as he did the matter of Confederation, with gall and vinegar, instead of emollients, they were certainly to be pitied. If the hon gentleman were a fair counsel, even at the eleventh hour and fifty-ninth minute, he would give it a fair trial. He goes into the matter even of appointing a gentleman to watch the interests of the Dominion in the matter of repeal. The dissatisfaction in Nova Scotia were found on other grounds than the appointment of Dr. Tupper. It was a family matter and why not leave it in the family? There were few in the House, not Nova Scotians ans, who knew much about Nova Scotia, and why not leave it to Nova Scotians to meet Nova Scotians, in this matter. Dr. Tupper's character had been personally attacked, and it was due to him that he should be placed in a position to justify himself with regard to the part he had taken in that Imperial legislation which had led to the Union. He hoped that mere temporary or local popularity should not in that House be made a test of popularity. He that rested simply on popularity, and would risk right in hunting for popularity, would soon find that which he hunted for slip away from him. Base indeed would he be who would not risk popularity for a good cause—that of his country. It was one of the duties of statesmen to elevate the standard of public sentiment, not to debase it. The chivalry of spirit that dictated the appointment of Dr. Tupper was only as much to be commended as that recompense which railed at his appointment on the plea of a temporary loss of popularity was to be condemned. He thought it would pay that their Nova Scotian friends should not yet make up their minds to give the Union a fair trial. The Repeal Address, he regretted to say, would not be creditable to Nova Scotia, were it entered on the Journals of the House. As a State paper, it was crude and fallacious, and no credit to Nova Scotia—a country which had produced a host of eminent men—excellent lawyers and excellent masters of English composition. Whatever reputation Americans may make abroad it effects the whole Dominion, and he regretted that such a school boy production should have gone forth to England in the name of Nova Scotia. Even here any three men who would breathe such language as that contained in the address in characterizing the gallant General who rules their Province and his advisers as the mere tools of the Canadian Government would be worthy of a feeling much akin to contempt. He looked upon the allegations in the address from Nova Scotia as foundless and groundless. They speak of our statesmen as having juggled them out of their liberties. The Union was effected directly by British influence, and this address is virtually meant to limit the power of Great Britain, or the attempt to repeal the British North American Act.—The people of Canada have no desire to coerce Nova Scotia. In extending a uniformity of laws a kind of legislative way has been resorted to, to which Nova Scotia was unaccustomed.—There might be reason for dissatisfaction with the tariff legislation of the early part of this session, but that admits of modification, and will be modified doubtlessly to meet the views of Nova Scotia. But Nova Scotians must not ask us to do other than place ourselves with regard to them, in a national point of view, and only dealing with them as with Ontario, Quebec, or New Brunswick. He could not help complimenting the hon. member for London, the representative of the largest class of the Opposition, for the national spirit which he had displayed on all questions affecting the welfare of the Dominion. If there was to be any co-operation—satisfactory co-operation—the gentlemen from Nova Scotia must endeavor to be less ultimate and endeavor to approximate with the gentlemen of the Treasury benches. He commended Mr. Haliburton's pamphlet on "Intercolonial trade our only safeguard against disunion," alluding to the hereditary ability displayed in it, and to the happy manner in which his subject had been treated, and said that his mode of looking upon matters was infinitely superior to that arrived at by the framers of the address, and which at the most could only affect a temporary mischief. He had great faith in the operation of time, which would have its effect on the consolidation of the Union.—He alluded to the Union. He alluded to the annexation of Cape Breton to Nova Scotia, not by act of Parliament, but simply by an order of the King and Council, and the excellent effects of such Union which time had brought about.

FRENCH CANADIAN INSTITUTE.—At a meeting of the French Canadian Institute held last night at their Hall, upon motion of Mr. H. Laperre, seconded by Mr. L. J. Cassalt, it was resolved that the members of this Society have learned with deep regret and indignation the great loss to the country caused by the untimely death of the Hon. Thos. D'Arcy McGee, the eminent statesman, brilliant orator and distinguished writer who was so cowardly assassinated on the morning of the 7th inst., and beg to tender to Mrs. McGee and her family their sincere sympathy in the great affliction caused them by this untimely and unexpected tragedy, and that this meeting do now adjourn through respect to the memory of the noble victim.—Citizen.

HOW DIFFERENT!—The London Free Press says;—It is a very singular circumstance that on the very day that Mr. McGee was martyred for his adherence to law order, and country, Mike Murphy, of Toronto, the father of Fenianism in Canada, should have been on his death-bed, an exile, at Buffalo. After his escape from the Cornwall jail, he kept a little groggery in Buffalo, where he died on Monday night. Thus one Irishman died a martyr to its cause, and a nation's tears bedew the spot on which his mangled remains fell; the other seeking to introduce a horde of foreign outlaws to overthrow the Government and carry weeping and wailing to the hearthstones of our land, dies almost unknown, despised and uncared for, in an obscure lodging among strangers. The incident is not without a peculiar significance. Mike Murphy leaving life unhonored and unsung; Mr. McGee passing away by violence, it is true, but wearing a martyr's crown and followed by a people's love.

ATTEMPTED ROBBERY, WITH FATAL CONSEQUENCES, AT BINBROOK.—A strange story comes from Binbrook, in this county, of an attempted robbery, and the death of one of the parties engaged. A miser's old bachelor of reputed wealth, named Anderson, lived by himself a few miles east of the village. A short time ago, he was alarmed in the night by parties working at the door of his residence, and quietly taking down a shot gun loaded with balls, he fired upon the intruders, as soon as one appeared in the doorway, after effecting an entrance. A cry of distress followed, and injured persons was taken up by his companions and hurried away, their course to the road being discernible in the morning by marks of blood on the snow. The morning following this occurrence, it is stated that three brothers, residing on the Grand River, and nephews of Mr. Anderson, returned from a party," one of the three being reported alarmingly ill. A death was shortly afterwards reported, and the fact has been divulged that the deceased received a fatal wound while attempting to rob his uncle.—Hamilton Times.

CHICAGO, April 11.—A fatal accident occurred last night in St. Mary's Cathedral. An alarm of fire was raised, which created a panic in the church, when a rush was made for the doors, during which a portion of the galleries fell. Three females were instantly killed, and several others were severely injured, two will probably die.

THURSDAY, APRIL 16, 1868.

PARLIAMENTARY.

The Senate met on the 14th, at eight o'clock. After prayer the Speaker announced the death of the Hon. Benjamin Weir, Senator of Halifax, N. S. After some remarks on the solemnity of the events that had transpired and now were forcibly recalled by the death of Mr. Weir; the Senate adjourned to Thursday. The deceased Senator appears to have been esteemed and adored by all his colleagues.

The House of Commons met the same day. After the reading of a telegram of condolence from the Assembly of P. E. Island in reference to the assassination;

Sir John A. McDonald brought down a message from the Governor General, recommending the Commons to make such provisions for the family of Mr. McGee as the Parliament in its liberality might think proper.

Mr. Merrit, the newly elected member for Lincoln was introduced by Messrs. Rose and McDougall, and took his seat.

Hon. Mr. Rose moved for a select committee to consider the subject of Banking and Currency in the Dominion.

Today the subject of putting a duty on British copyright books imported in Canada will be considered.

The House went into committee by the whole on the supplies. Considerable discussion arose over the salaries of Governor General and Lieutenant Governors. Mr. McKenzie Blake, D. A. McDonald (Cornell,) contended that these salaries are too high; the other party contended that their position entailed a large expenditure. The salaries however were carried. The number of Employees are to be brought down and their salaries made less. This is a movement in the right direction; every member and his friends, and every Minister a dozen or more, all these required to be provided for to keep them quiet. Salaries of $800 are to be reduced to about $600, $600 to about $460, and so on, due care being paid to labour done. All lovers of retrenchment will be glad to learn that at last the Commons is moving in the right direction. These recommendations take effect on the 1st of July next. Why did they not reduce the minister's salaries.

RECAPITULATION.—Reduction on salaries of officers and clerks $7,337 50, salaries of six clerks discharged $4,800, salaries of six extra clerks discharged, $2,160, reduction on salaries of messengers $6,713 salaries of 21 messengers discharged $3,780, salary of watchman discharged $517, reduction on salaries of watchmen $125, reduction on stationery of members $4,105; total reduction, $29,867 50.

MR McGEE'S FUNERAL.

The funeral was conducted without regard to cost, and was attended by an immense number of the citizens of Montreal. Over 60,000 persons are said to have been on the street, and the oration delivered by the Rev. Father O'Farrell, founded on the words of 1 Macc. 9 21,—"How is the mighty man fallen that saved Israel," is certainly worthy of the speaker, and is a fitting tribute to the memory of the deceased. No man of any nationality has ever been so universally lamented. His will be an immortal name in Canadian History. At his funeral obsequies were Frenchmen, Irishmen, Englishmen, and Scotchmen,—Orangemen and wearers of the shamrock,—the representatives of all the secular-Protestant institutions and the whole Protestant clergy.

From 12 to one o'clock the shops here were closed in honor of the deceased.

RAILROADS.

We understand that the Lessees of the Port Hope and Peterboro Branch have determined to complete the extension of the Branch to the Nassau Mills. We did not learn whether or not they intend extending it to Lakefield. Rumor has it that if the Messrs. Strickland will present the company with the right of way and grade the road from the Nassau Mills to Lakefield that the company will then provide ties and rails.—The requirements are more than could be expected and with present appearances we fear that the Nassau Mills will be terminus.

THE LAKE NIPISSING RAILWAY.

A deputation from Toronto held a meeting at Cobolconk lately, and from reports thereof we learn that there is considerable interest taken in the enterprise by the people in the rear of Lindsay. Messrs. Staples, Laxton; Hunter, Somerville; McLaughlan, Norland; Haliday, Cobolconk, and many others warmly advocated the Toronto and Nipissing railway in preference to the Lindsay route. Mr. Hunter alleged that Lindsay was out of the question as a market for the great north, and said if the tariff should be reasonable he would advocate a liberal support to the road.

Mr. Mclaughlin (Norland) stated that 40,000,000 feet of lumber was out in Peterborough annually from logs which passed Fenelon Falls, all of which could be cut at Norland when the railway should come.—He (Mr. McL.) would support the Toronto and Nippissing Railway, although he preferred that Norland would and, he thought, should be the terminus Mr. McLaughlin further referred to the mineral discovery at Norland, and to the building and ornamental stone which was abundant at that place.

Perhaps the people of progress (?) here will awake to their position when the people of Toronto have outstripped them, and are taking away the traffic of the country from our very nose.

BURLEIGH AFFAIRS.

The case of Golborne vs. the Reeve of Burleigh—to unseat him—came off partly last week and partly this week, before Mr. Dennistoun.

Mr. Golborne sets up his claim as a resident Freeholder, and wishes to unseat Mr. Carroll because he (Carroll) is a non-resident and resides too far from the municipality. He also tries to show that Mr. Carroll is not a Freeholder, as assessed on the last revised assessment roll, i. e., for 1867. The argument being that opposite Mr. Carroll's name, in the column under "Freeholder," the Clerk and Assessor have put only two dots instead of the letter "F," as the statute directs. Mr. E. S. Hall, who is Assessor and Collector, was the principal evidence; he is also Clerk of the Council. From the evidence we gleaned the following items:

That the Collector, when he collected taxes from time to time, did not enter the date of receipts on the roll; that afterwards, when he found the roll would be required to show who were legal voters, he did fix the dates. He also paid taxes for various parties, and agreed to wait on those parties till a more convenient time; and this he proved to have done for some parties who voted for Carroll and some who voted for Golborne.

"THE MAN'S NEXT ABOUT THE MONEY."

To Mr. Hatton, the witness answered about as follows:—"Don't know exactly how much of the taxes I have collected; would not swear positively unless I had my books here. Keep no accounts in memory exactly. Can tell how much if I had my books here."

To the question about what he did with the money, (although this was foreign to the subject indeed;) What has Mr. Carroll's case, of being Reeve or not Reeve instead of Mr. Golborne, to do with the Collector's accounts?) he answered:—"I paid some to the Treasurer; don't know how much until I see my books. The sums are entered in the Treasurer's books. Used part of it as my salary. I was to have ten per cent for collecting the taxes; the balance not paid to the Treasurer, over and above the ten per cent, I have. I keep no bank account. It is not about me. I used some of it, don't know how much."

AT THE SECOND HEARING.

"I have paid the Treasurer $741. I have an order on him from Trustees, equivalent to money, not yet settled, for $55; making $796. I have collected $900 altogether, including what I have paid for parties. My salary for collecting this would be $90."

So these are the "revelations" about the money. The Collector has collected and paid for parties $900 and has handed over to the Treasurer $796. He kept his percentage, making $986, and has to account for the sum of $14, which he says he may have used. Oh, horrible! From this we would gather that Mr. Hall was on trial, not Mr. Carroll. We wonder at the Counsel permitting the Collector's accounts to be overhauled, except as to what taxes were paid or not paid on or before the 16th of December last. If the Collector should clear out what has that to do with who will be Reeve for the remainder of the year of grace 1868?

Mr. McDonald sworn (he is Relator vs. Castiday) appearing very unwilling to swear in the matter. "His was a private conversation; did not like to reveal secrets told in confidence, but when sworn must do it. Heard Mr. Hall, the Collector, say that he would like to see Mr. Carroll elected Reeve again. This was about last of November, 1867. Heard him say he would pay the taxes for all who would vote for Mr. Carroll, and were not able to pay their taxes. He heard this in private conversation, never told it before and never would, but that he was sworn."

Mr. Smith—"How did Mr. Hatton know to put this question to you, and no other?"

Witness—"Well, he had told Mr. Hatton about this private conversation and asked not to be sworn on that account."

The evidence about the "dots," manner of payment, times of payment, dates, books, memorandum books, &c., were of no great importance, except to bother a witness and can have no bearing on the case.

Mr. Lousley, Treasurer of Burleigh, &c., sworn. Corroborated the evidence of Mr. Hall in reference to the money matters, admitted receiving about $740, and said he would take an order of Trustees shown him as cash, amount $55.

MCDONALD VS. CASTIDAY.

This was another case to unseat Mr. Castiday, because his residence is too far from Burleigh, and also because he is an innkeeper.

Mr. Hall's evidence on the other case was taken in this case as far as relevant to.

Mr. Hall again sworn:—"Heard Mr. McDonald scanned at nomination by Mr. Castiday, as being a contractor for timber on the road allowance in part of Chandos. Mr. McDonald did not deny, but said the Council were demanding too much for the timber. He, McDonald would give no more than $25 and if they demanded him, they would get no more."

Mr. Carroll sworn:—"Was Reeve of Burleigh; was authorized to treat with Mr. McDonald about the timber spoken of; did do so. Mr. McDonald agreed to take it for himself and pay for it, i. e., for certain timber mentioned. He had not yet paid for it. The reason why no proceedings had been taken was, the fear that nothing could be obtained. The Council never authorized the Clerk to write about this timber, but did about other timber, for which Messrs. Gilmour & Co. had applied.

The case will come up again to-day. Mr. Hatton having requested the delay to obtain some evidence required.

DUMMER COUNCIL.

DUMMER, 6th April, 1868.

Council met at 10 a.m. All the members present.

Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed.

The Clerk was instructed to notify Mr Higgins to remove all obstructions off the road along the south side of his lot, so as to make said road forty feet wide in the clear, and to communicate with Mr. Fairbairn respecting Mr. Keenan's notes and other business.

On motion of Mr. Rose, seconded by Mr. Ferguson, the Clerk was instructed to notify Mr. Sheridan to strike off the Taxes against the W½ of Lot 10 in the 9th concession, for 1866.

On motion of Mr. Spence, seconded by Mr. Payne, Mr. Thos. Hawthorn was accepted as one of the Treasurer's securities.

The Clerk was instructed to notify Messrs. Strickland & Bros. to pay immediately for certain timber purchased off certain roads in the Township.

On motion, it was ordered that a Shop License be forty dollars for the present year, and that By-law 194 be repealed for that purpose.

On motion, Mr. John Kelly was appointed Overseer of Highways instead of Mr. John Clyndale.

The following amounts were allowed to be paid:—Jas. Stratton, Esq., for printing, &c., $34.82; Mrs. E. Gardner, for keeping Mrs. Jackson, $7.50.

A By law to repeal By-law No. 194, relating to Shop Licenses; a By law to amend By-law 175, and a By-law to provide for the payment of certain sums of money, received three readings and passed.

On motion, the Clerk was instructed to give notice of Court of Revision in Peterboro Review, and Council adjourned to the 9th of May next, then to meet for the purpose of revising the Assessment Roll.—Com.

The County Council and the Grammar Schools.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—I have noticed of late some discussion in the papers between a writer styling himself "North Monaghan" and Mr. Young, the Reeve of the Township of North Monaghan, in reference to the vote of the latter in the recent sitting of the County Council, in stopping the equivalent of the Government Grant for the Grammar School.

My object in writing is not to take sides, or join issue with either of the parties in the debate as I observe in both something commendable, and something the reverse; it is rather to say to Mr. Young, that I, as a ratepayer and an inhabitant of the Township of which he is Reeve, consider that he voted wrong on this question, and for the following reasons:—

Grammar Schools in Canada have been and still are most useful institutions, and without them we should sustain a grievous loss indeed. Grammar Schools have always been under the control of the Councils of the Counties or Districts of the Province, and since the Act of 1853, the Councils always appointed their Trustees. Under the Act of 1865, no Grammar School shall be entitled to share in the Government Grant, unless an equivalent is raised and spent from local sources. Our County Council in 1866 and 1867 levied the equivalent, some $250; but in 1868 by its vote has said we do not want Grammar Schools in the County of Peterboro any more. I should hope there is no other County in the Province that so far stultified itself as Peterboro. And yet this hope brings with it a degree of shame that is anything but pleasant to bear.

My friend, Mr. Young, struck the right note when he hinted that the "North Monaghan" man had been educated "at other people's expense." That is the fact in Canada if not all over the world. Our entire educational system is based upon this principle. Our children are educated at other people's expense, whether in the County or in the Town, in the Common or in the Grammar Schools. Now, I would say, either carry out our system entirely or abandon it altogether.

Mr Young was sent to the County Council to look after the matters pertaining to the County as a whole as well as for those of his Township. The Grammar School belongs to the County, not to the Town. All that is asked from the County Council is a tax of about one cent on every $100 of taxable property in the County. A man having $1000 worth of property would but pay 10 cents annually for the support of the Grammar Schools; surely this could not be voting an "endowment" for Peterborough. The Town admits to a tax yearly of $200 for the building, besides having paid out in cash about $4500. It costs the ratepayers of Peterborough to carry on the Union School at least $3000 annually besides the fees, yet no one in the Town thinks of dropping either department. As for Toronto University the County pays nothing for its support; it is provided for long ago.

My friend, Mr. Young, I am sure voted conscientiously, and he was not alone. "O tell it not in Gath," a majority of the County Council of Peterborough have said by their vote, "we want no Grammar Schools—away with them Gothen gentlemen, and on the same principle of reasoning you will soon get rid of your Common Schools too, and then what relief that will be. Let those who want education pay for it; let those who want law pay for it; let those who want houses of refuge or roads or bridges, or any other improvement, pay for them; and let those who want County Councillors pay for them. But I did not, when I began, intend to say half so much. I shall only add that if the Council will but give up all control of the Grammar School in Peterborough, so that the town can assume their powers, I am sure the Town Council will cheerfully undertake to raise the equivalent and carry it on, open its doors readily to every youth from far and near and impart the blessings of a sound education even to those who do not pay for it.

I am, Mr. Editor,
Yours, &c.,
J. EDWARDS.

Funeral Obsequies of Hon. T. D. McGee at Montreal.

From the Globe.

Yesterday, the remains of the late Thos. D'Arcy McGee were laid in their last resting place, in Montreal, amid a good deal of ceremony and much feeling. An account of the funeral obsequies will be found below. Out of respect to the deceased, the day was generally observed throughout this Province in some form or other, as will be seen by the despatches from all parts, which we give below:—

MONTREAL.

MONTREAL, April 13.—The funeral ceremonies of the late T. D. McGee were brought to a close only a few minutes before six o'clock in the evening. From a very early hour in the morning, the streets were crowded with excitement, most of whom were on their way to the various places of meeting, where the different societies were to assemble for the purpose of joining in the funeral procession. All the stores and places of business were closed, and minute guns were fired throughout the day by Stevenson's volunteer field battery. The day was beautifully fine, and besides the immense number who fell in with the procession, the streets were densely crowded with citizens. All the various public bodies took part. A special train had come down from Ottawa during Sunday, bringing with it several members of the Government and of Parliament. A large number of officials attended either in their civil capacity or as members of the Civil Service Corps.

The Governor General and the Lieutenant Governors of Quebec and Ontario were represented; Her Majesty's army by various corps now serving here. The judges, the volunteer and militia services, the bar and all the national societies, the temperance societies, the literary club of which Mr. McGee was a member, the Horticultural Society, the Typographical Union, and numerous bodies of citizens, each with its own proper insignia of mourning. Almost every person who took part in the ceremonies wore some appropriate emblem, draped roses, St. Andrew's crosses, or other insignia; and the national societies each carried a banner furled and draped, and marched, its officers clothed in their official collars covered with crape.

The hearse was a magnificent funeral carriage, built by Mr. Perry, of St. Constant street, from a design by Mr. Spence, the well-known ecclesiastical designer and decorator, of Bleury street. It was a car of about 16 feet in height, 15 feet in length and 4 feet in breadth. The platform on which the coffin was placed was 8 feet from the ground, and was surmounted by a canopy, supported by 8 twisted pillars; the whole crowned by a gilt cross in a circle. The canopy was tent shaped, and there were five plumes of black feathers on each side of it. The under side of the canopy was of dark cloth, with a large cross of white. On each side of the platform, towards the upper part of it, there was a silvered escutcheon, with the following letters in red:—"T. D. McGee, April 7, 1868." Below this were the following on the right side of the car:—"Consummatus brevi explevit tempora multa," and below, "Miserere Domine." On the left side, "Jesu Mercy;" and below, "Jesus Domine, dona of requiem eternam." There was a hundsome black cloth border falling below this platform, decorated with appropriate ornaments, and falling at the bottom into indents; in these indents were heraldric designs, including the coat of arms of deceased, with the legend "Fac et spera." The carriage was decorated with appropriate ornaments in silver, round the edges of the canopy, and in other suitable places, these were all of silver much of them consisting of fancy work in double lines of silver-headed nails. When the procession was fully completed, the following was the order of its march:

THE LATE TRAGEDY.

From the Ottawa Citizen.

On Saturday morning Detective O'Neil received from Quebec a photograph of Sullivan, charged with Fenianism in Quebec. The resemblance of the prisoner Whelan is so strong as to leave no doubt that he and Sullivan are one and the same party. The heads of the prisoner have also been compared with foot prints found in the passage way between Messrs. Bate & Co's retail store and the adjoining brick buildings, and they are found to fit them precisely. A waiter in the Revere House, it is said, is willing to swear that Whelan on several occasions threatened to take Mr. McGee's life, and when Mrs. Whalen was asked at the beginning of the session where her husband was she said he had gone to Ottawa to "shoot McGee."

FALSE REPORTS.

In the present state of public feeling it is not extraordinary that many false reports gain circulation regarding discoveries of persons implicated in the crime. One of these set afloat on Thursday and Friday was that Patrick Buckley had made a confession of great importance, having been re-arrested. There is, however, not the least foundation for the rumor. Mr. Buckley is at large, and there is no reason to suppose he will be again in custody, and he has made no statement to the police or other authorities since the inquest.

The report given in a western paper that Doran, the head waiter of the Russell House, was an intimate friend of the prisoner Whelan, and the proprietor of the house where Whelan lived, is equally without foundation, Doran having no acquaintance with them beyond seeing Whelan come to the hotel to visit Doyle, the waiter now under arrest.

VOLUNTARY SURRENDER.

A young man named Hanrahan, whose worst fault is that he gets on a "spree" at times, having heard that parties suspected him from his having used some foolish language when drunk, gave himself up to the police on Saturday morning. He is a good natured looking fellow whose face is enough to give a contradiction to the idea that he would give any hand in such a fearful crime, and he has acted wisely in seeking to clear himself in the way he has done.

MORE ARRESTS.

On Saturday morning a telegraph was received by Detective O'Neil requesting him to send a party to meet the morning train from Prescott, as three parties who were arrested near Kemptville on suspicion of being implicated in the late murder, were on board. The prisoners arrived here as expected, and proved to be three discharged soldiers named Jones, Lee and Maddocks, two formerly belonging to the 25th regt., and one to the 30th. The prisoners were recognized here at once by the detectives and it was at once admitted there was nothing against them.

THEIR DISCHARGE.

Later in the day, and after the authorities had satisfied themselves as to their innocence, the prisoners were all discharged and granted a free pass to Prescott over the St. Lawrence and Ottawa Railway.

THE LATEST.

On Saturday night all sorts of rumors were in circulation in reference to the latest discoveries, but after diligent enquiry we could not trace any of them to have come from a trustworthy source, and therefore refrain giving them any publicity, leaving the representatives of our Montreal and Toronto contrers to make the most of them (which they have done so well so far), as while in their hands the ends of justice will not be so likely to suffer, and their correctness or otherwise will not be easily detected. It is satisfactory to know however, that at the present time, so swift and searching has been the labors of those entrusted with the administration of justice in this case, that ere the ear h closes over the remains of the departed, sufficient information has been brought to light to bring home the crime to the proper parties.

SPECIAL TRAIN.

Not since that memorable Sunday in June when our city Volunteers went forth to meet the invader, has there been such a throng of spectators to witness the departure of a train, as that which collected yesterday at the depot of the St. Lawrence & Ottawa Railway, to witness the departure of a special train en route for Montreal, having on board over four hundred persons, composed of both civil and military, who have gone to pay last tribute of respect to the departed statesman and orator. On board were the Mayor and Corporation in a body, and deputations from the St. Patrick's Society, the St. Patrick's Orphans' Home, the St. George's Society, the St. Andrew's Society, the St Jean Baptiste Society, and a Representative of the Canadian Institute. There were also about two hundred military on board, made up of men from the Ottawa Field Battery, Nos. 1 and 2 Companies of Garrison Artillery, and Nos. 1 and 2 Companies of Rifles.

The Assassination of D'Arcy McGee.

OPINIONS OF THE NEW YORK PRESS.

There was a great deal of excitement in the city yesterday upon the arrival of the news from Canada that Thomas D'Arcy McGee, member of the Canadian Parliament, and late member of the Ministry, had been assassinated in Ottawa yesterday morning while returning to his home from the House of Parliament. It appears that the intelligence caused quite a panic in Montreal, which city the late honorable member represented, and the act was not only set down to the Fenians, but the story was circulated that it was but the signal for a general Fenian movement in Canada, which is, of course, sheer non-sense. The probabilities of the case are that the act was committed by some poor crazy wretch to whom Mr. McGee had been inimical. That he had many political enemies is well known. His adherence to British government in Canada, the fact that he lately held a portfolio under the colonial administration, and the rumor that he was about to receive a lucrative office worth five thousand pounds a year from the home government, in return for his denunciation of the Fenian raid on Canada, may have led to the cowardly attack upon his life which has ended so tragically. Assassination is the weaker weapon of any cause. It recoils upon the instigators with unerring retribution. It has never yet, since the days of Julius Cæzar, accomplished any permanent good either for governments or peoples, and it seems almost incredible that any one could be found stupid enough to resort to the assassination of a private gentleman holding no rank higher than that of a popular representative, as a method to advance a political idea.

Mr. McGee was a man of very decided talent, which displayed itself through various channels. He was an impressive orator, a genial poet, and a writer of great force and elegance. The fact that he was not popular with his countrymen for many years past, and was regarded as recreant to the professions of his early life, does not seem very clearly to account for his assassination. Of course there may have been many personal causes of hostility that led to his sudden taking off. These are common events that pertain to the history of any man; but if it should turn out that the murder of Mr. McGee was the result of any motive instigated for political purposes, it will only prove the folly and guilt of an organization that, being too weak to accomplish any good, has turned its hand to evil, most cowardly and detestable.—N. Y. Herald.

When the news reached this city—where D'Arcy McGee has been long since known—it created no ordinary excitement. There were those who declared that the tragic act was a foul murder; but they were unanswerably less than the number who seemed to think that Ireland was avenged of one of her faithless but most gifted sons in the fall of McGee. This feeling seemed to choke all the current of pity which would have other wise created the most intense sympathy for the unfortunate advocate of the British Government across the frontier—who once showered anathemas on the "perfidious Saxon." When Tom Moore sold his country he returned to Person Cottage, near London and remained there till his death, and if McGee had been as judicious as the poet, it was generally believed by the Irish in this city that his life would have been spared—in this feeling they viewed the assassination, however revolting, as an illustration that the highest price for treachery to a desperate cause may be profitless and end in death.

Among the Fenians in this city there is considerable excitement, although our reporter could find none to justify the murder among the Fenian circles of this city. The Radical Fenians, however, although they do not say much about the murder, take the matter very quietly. One Fenian said to our reporter: "McGee did as much as he could to disgrace our people by his double dealing and treachery, and we cannot feel very sorry for him. Some of us looked upon him as we would upon a poisonous rattlesnake. We would not go out of our way to crush him, but now that some one has trod upon his head, we have nothing to say." The brother of the deceased gentleman, Col. James McGee, was a gallant soldier through the war, having served in the Irish Brigade with much distinction, and was at one time Assistant Provost Marshal of the city of New York, and despite his peculiar views, had many warm friends to regret his untimely end. Mr. James Sadlier, the well-known Catholic publisher of this city, was a warm personal friend of Hon. D'Arcy McGee, the latter having been at one time connected with the Tablet, of which Mr. Sadlier is publisher. Mr. Sadlier received a despatch on Tuesday morning from Mrs. McGee, in which occurred the fatal words: "Thomas was killed this morning at 2 o'clock. Come on immediately." Mr. Sadlier left at once for Canada by the afternoon train, and by this time is en route.—N. Y. World.

LONDON, April 10.—The war office is in receipt of later despatches from the British expedition in Africa operating for the relief of the English captives. General Napier, the Commander of the British forces, had reached latitude 21. The Abyssinian King Theodorus, was at Magdala, ready for a siege. His forces consisted of about 5,000 effective men. He had also 26 large guns. General Napier had already completed his plans for a general assault on the works.

DR. LIVINGSTONE ALIVE.—LONDON, April 8.—All doubts of the safety of Dr. Livingstone, the African explorer, are now dispelled. Sir Roderick Murchison to-day received a letter from the distinguished traveller, which came by the way of Zanzibar. Dr. Livingstone writes that he is in good health, that his journey of exploration has been successful, and that he will soon return to England.

AUSTRIA.—The report that the Civil Marriage Bill has finally passed both Houses of Vienna Reichsrath was premature. Some amendments were made in the Upper House, and the bill was returned to the Lower House for its concurrence. These amendments were agreed to by the lower branch of the Reichsrath, and the bill as afforded now stands passed by both Houses, and only awaits the assent of the Emperor to become law.

SPAIN.—The Government is seizing and suppressing the circulation of all American newspapers. Even those addressed to Mr. Hale, the American Minister, have been seized, and he has protested.

The Spanish Cortes has passed a bill granting in dentity to Great Britain for the seizure and detention of the vessel Queen Victoria.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—In the Impeachment trial to-day Gen. Thomas was called as witness for defence. He testified that the President had given him no instruction to use force in gaining possession of the War Office. On the contrary, when told by Thomas that he had been arrested for violating the Tenure of Office Act, the president said: "Very well, that is just where I want it, in the Court." The Impeachment Court adjourned until to-morrow.

NEW YORK, April 10.—The "Ocean Queen's brings Panama dates to the 1st. The revolution is still going on. The cholera is disappearing in Buenos Ayres, but is is very bad in Montevideo and other places. The wheat crops in some parts of Chili are ruined by the rains. There were thirty deaths per day of yellow fever at Callao.

NEW YORK, April 10.—Among the passengers in the steamer William Penn, that arrived this evening from London, is Stephen G. Meany, Fenian head centre, released from servitude by the British Government, on condition that he returned to the United States. He was placed on board by British officers, and his pardon handed him as the vessel sailed.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, constant excitement, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stoons, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, restless sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and self-administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition, but a safe and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorised Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It clears the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentlemen:—I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad boot in the leg, and was unable for work a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure.

J. L. DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1859.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensible article for Sprains, Sores, Strains or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for Amoskeag, Wells, Fargos and Harnden's Express.

"The Sprain of my daughter's ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your cele rated Mustang Liniment.

EDWARD KELLY."

Gloucester, Mass., Aug 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Wells, Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co. on the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

It is a most delightful Hair Dressing. It eradicates scurf and dandruff. It keeps the hair rich, soft and glossy. It prevents hair turning gray and falling off. It restores hair upon prematurely bald heads.

This is just what Lyons Kathairon will do. It is pretty. It is cheap. It is durable. It is liberally sold by the car-load, and yet we almost increasing, until there is hardly a country store that does not keep it, or a family that does not use it.

E. THOMAS LYON, Chemist, N. Y.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distinction to the classic statues we observe upon the stage, and in the city halls? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. It continues to remove tan, freckles, pimples and sallowness from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and inviting. Unlike many cosmetics it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggist will order it for you, if not on hand, at 75 cts. per bottle.

W. E. HAGAN, Troy, N. Y., Chemist.

DEMAS BARNES & Co.,
Wholesale Agents, N. Y.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

AGUA DE MAGNOLIA.

A toilet delight. Superior to any Cologne, used to bathe the face and person to render the skin soft and free, to allay inflammation, to perfume clothing for headaches, &c. It is manufactured from the rich Magnolia Grandiflora, and has obtained a patronage quite unprecedented. It is a favorite with actresses and opera singers. It is sold by all dealers, at $1.00 in large bottles, and by Demas Barnes & Co., New York, Wholesale Agents.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

Heimstreet's Inimitable Hair Coloring is not a dye. All instantaneous dyes are composed of lunar caustic, and more or less destroy the vitality and beauty of the hair. It is the originator of hair coloring, and has been growing in favor over twenty years. It restores gray hair to its original color by gradual absorption, in a most remarkable manner. It is also a beautiful hair dressing. Sold in two sizes 50 cents and $1 by all dealers.

C. HEIMSTREET, Chemist

SOME BEAUTIFUL DRAWINGS in water colors, by W. H. Caddy, Esq., for sale at STRATTON & ARMSTRONG'S Book Store, worth from $6 to $12.

Appeal of the Montreal Temperance Society to all Temperance Organizations and Temperance Men in the Dominion of Canada.

While we are, with yourselves, deeply convinced that the traffic in intoxicating drinks is the source of untold misery and vice, and that the present licensing system is evil, and only evil, continually,—we are persuaded that there is no aspect of that system more destructive of the best interests of society, especially amongst the working classes, than that which combines, the grocery and liquor trade. Where this is the case, a mantle of respectability is thrown over the traffic, and intoxicating liquor is placed on a par with the commonest necessaries of life. Multitudes who could never be induced to purchase strong drink at an ordinary bar are easily persuaded to place it in the list of those articles which they require to purchase almost daily in those places where the grocery and liquor trade are combined. The wives and daughters of our working-men are most exposed to this temptation. Husbands confess, to their shame and confusion, that in this way their wives have become drunkards before they were aware of it; and, contrary to all past experience, husbands are being made drunkards through the influence of their wives. It has been ascertained that the greater part of the liquor sold in such places is sold to women who are in the habit of frequenting them every morning for a mixture of beer and whiskey. If the results of this unseemly association of a most pernicious and degrading traffic with a necessary and respectable business could only be obtained, it would, we think, be seen to be the cause of much of the intemperance, and consequent misery and crime, which prevail in our land, and a formidable barrier to the progress of social and moral reform. Are we, then, silently to witness the constant increase in our towns and cities of those polluted fountains which are flooding our land with wretchedness and immorality? Shall we look on quietly while this monster in a deceptive garb is spoiling the homes of our country, of their comforts, their virtue, and peace? Can we be indifferent to the ruin which is being unceasingly wrought in the bodies and souls of our fellow-creatures by the destroyer? Let every true child of temperance reformation answer, No. We entreat you, brethren, to aid us in bringing the evils of this system to the light, to join us in stirring up the public mind against this foe to our country's happiness and prosperity. And, to that end, we ask you to petition the several legislatures of our Dominion to abrogate a law which serves to conceal the odium of a disreputable business, and to support a cause, which, if left to stand alone, must soon fall before the onward march of religion and temperance. The specific object of such petitions would be, to refuse to grocers all licenses in any form for the sale of fermented or spirituous liquors. Nor is the principle involved in such petitions a new one; already the law prohibits the keeping of a post-office in a tavern jus because persons of both sexes and all ages have to frequent the post office; and the same objection lies to keeping liquor in a grocery, to which females and young persons must resort. In conclusion, allow us to express the hope that this subject will engage your early and earnest attention.

Signed on behalf of the Committee,
WM. TAYLOR, D. D., President
JOHN DOUGALL, Vice-President.

A FOOLISH YOUNG MAN.

GAY FELLLOWS ON A RAILWAY TRAIN—A GAME OF CARDS, A DRUNK, AND THE RESULT.

(From the Toronto Telegraph)

This morning a rather respectable, but somewhat verdant-looking young man called at our office for the purpose of relating what he termed a "swindling outrage," in the hope that we would expose it and warn the traveling public. Though the "swindling outrage" may be a new thing to the young man, it is not new to old travellers on almost any road in the States. It is to be hoped, however, that our roads will not become disgraced by such affairs. The young man gave his name as Charles K. McKendry, a resident of the County of Prince Edward. His story is, that a few days ago he started from his home for this city, with the intention of entering the Military School here. He brought with him excellent testimonials, or rather certificates of good character, which we have seen, proving him to be a sober, steady, well-conducted young man. He started by a night train, and on his way up "accidentally," fell in with a couple of "very nice fellows," who proposed a game of cards in the smoking car, by way of making the journey less tiresome. They played, but not for any stake, all parties apparently having religious scruples against gambling though not at all objecting to a game just for the fun of the thing. Long before the train reached this city the strangers knew the entire history of Mr McKendry, from which they extracted it without much difficulty. At Cobourg they had a couple of drinks, and shortly after leaving that place one of the strangers produced a bottle of brandy, from which they had a "swig" all round. More cards were played, and more "swigs" were swallowed, and the result was, that by the time the train reached Toronto, Mr. McKendry was very mellow. He drove off from the station in a hack with his newly-found friends; they went, he knows not where—they did, he knows not what—but this he does know, that on the following morning he found himself lying behind a fence in the eastern part of the city, minus his watch, breast-pin, and nearly seven hundred dollars in money, which he brought with him for the purpose of paying some claims at the Crown Lands Department. He was, to use a Yankeeism, "completely cleaned out," and had not the faintest remembrance of how or where it had been done. No doubt the fellows drugged him, and when he had become stupid they helped themselves to all the valuables in his possession, then left him where he found himself in the morning to sleep off the effects of the dose. We advised him to report the matter to the police, but he declined doing so. His reason for calling on us with his story was that he might publish it as a warning to others travelling on the Grand Trunk. We accordingly do so, and hope all youths as verdant as Mr. McKendry will be guided thereby.

A Steward wrote to a bookseller in London for some books to fit his master's library in the following terms:—"In the first place I want six feet of theology, the same quantity of metaphysics, and near a yard of old civil law in folio."

The following is an extract from a medical advertisement.—"Cough while you can, for after you have taken one bottle of my mixture you can't."

Relief and Health to your Infants.

We have put up and sold this article for years, and CAN SAY IN CONFIDENCE AND TRUTH of it what we have never been able to say of any other medicine—NEVER HAS IT FAILED IN A SINGLE INSTANCE TO EFFECT A CURE when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations and speak of terms of commendation of its magical effects and medicinal virtues. We speak in this matter "WHAT WE DO KNOW" after years of experience, AND PLEDGE OUR REPUTATION FOR THE FULFILMENT OF WHAT WE HERE DECLARE. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

And for the speedy cure of the following complaints:

Scrofula and Scrofulous Affections, such as Tumors, Ulcers, Sores, Eruptions, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Mains, and all Skin Diseases.

OAKLAND, Ind., 6th June, 1866.

Gents: I feel it my duty to acknowledge what your Sarsaparilla has done for me. Having inherited a scrofulous infection, I have suffered from it in various ways for years. Sometimes it burst out in ulcers on my hands and arms, sometimes it turned inward and distressed me at the stomach. Two years ago it broke out on my head and covered me scalp and ears with the sore, which was painful and loathsome beyond description. I tried many medicines and several physicians, but without much relief from any thing. In fact, the disorder grew worse. At length I was induced to read in the Gospel Messenger that you had prepared an alterative (Sarsaparilla), of which I knew from your reputation that any thing you made must be good. I sent to Cincinnati and got it, and used it till it cured me. I took it, as you advise, in small doses of a teaspoonful over a month and used almost three bottles. New and healthy skin soon began to form under the scab, which after a while fell off. My skin is now clear, and I know by my feelings that the disease has gone from my system. You can well believe that I feel what I am saying when I tell you, that I hold you to be one of the agents of the age, and remain ever gratefully Yours,

ALFRED B TALLEY.

St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Dropsy.

Dr. Robert M. Preble writes from Salem N. Y., 12th Sept., 1866, that he has cured an inveterate case of Dropsy, which threatened to terminate fatally, by the persevering use of our Sarsaparilla, and also a dangerous Malignant Erysipelas by large doses of the same; says he cures the common Erysipelas by it constantly.

Bronchocele, Goitre or Swelled Neck.

Zebulon Sharp of Prospect, Texas, writes: "Three bottles of your Sarsaparilla cured me from a Goitre—a hideous swelling on the neck, which I had suffered from over two years."

Leucorrhœa or Whites, Ovarian Tumor, Uterine Ulceration, Female Diseases.

Dr. S. S. Chamming, of New York City writes: "I most cheerfully comply with the request of your agent in saying I have found your Sarsaparilla a most excellent alterative in the numerous complaints for which we employ such a remedy, but especially in Female Diseases of the Scrofulous diathesis. I have cured many intolerable cases of Leucorrhœa by it, and none where the complaint was caused by ulceration of the uterus. The ulceration itself was soon cured. Nothing within my knowledge equals it for these female derangements."

Edward F. Murray, of Newbury, Ala., writes, "A dangerous ovarian tumor on one of the females in my family, which had defied all the remedies we could employ, has at length been completely cured by your Extract of Sarsaparilla. Our physician thought nothing but extirpation could afford relief, but he advised the trial of your Sarsaparilla as the last resort before cutting, and it proved effectual. After taking your remedy eight weeks no symptom of the disease remained."

Syphilis and Mercurial Disease.

NEW ORLEANS 25th August, 1866.

Dr. J. C. AYER: Sir, I cheerfully comply with the request of your agent, and resort to you some of the effects I have realized with your Sarsaparilla.

I have cured with it, in my practice, most of the complaints for which it is recommended, and have found its effects truly wonderful in the cure of Venereal and Mercurial Disease. One of my patients had Syphilitic ulcers in his throat, which were consuming his palate and the top of his mouth. Your Sarsaparilla, steadily taken, cured him in five weeks. Another was attacked by secondary symptoms in his nose and the ulceration had eaten away a considerable part of it, so that I believe the disorder would soon reach his brain and kill him. But it yielded to my administration of your Sarsaparilla: the ulcers healed and he is well again, not of course without some disfiguration to his face. A woman who had been treated for the same disorder by mercury was suffering from the pain in her bones. They had become so sensitive to the weather that on a damp day she suffered excruciating pain in her joints and bones. She, too, was cured entirely by your remedy in a few weeks. I know from its formula, which your agent gave me, that this Preparation from your laboratory must be a great remedy, consequently, these truly remarkable results with it have not surprised me.

Naturally yours, O. V. LARIMER, M. D.

Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint.

INDEPENDENCE, Preston Co., Va., 11th July, 1866.

Dr. J. C. AYER: Sir, I have been afflicted with a painful chronic Rheumatism for a long time, which baffled the skill of physicians, and stuck to me in spite of all the remedies I could find, until I tried your Sarsaparilla. One bottle cured me in two weeks and restored my general health so much that I am far better than before I was attacked. I think it a wonderful medicine. J. FRAM.

Jules Y. Outchell, of St. Louis, writes: "I have been afflicted for years with an affection of the Liver, which destroyed my health. I tried every thing, and every thing failed to relieve me; and I have been a broken-down man for some years from no other cause than derangement of the Liver. My beloved pastor, the Rev. Mr. Keys, advised me to try your Sarsaparilla, because he said he knew you, and any thing you made was worth trying. By the blessing of God it has cured me, and has so purified my blood as to make a new man of me. I feel young again. The best that can be said of you is not half good enough."

Schirrus, Cancer Tumors, Enlargement, Ulceration, Caries and Exfoliation of the Bones.

A great variety of cases have been reported to us where cures of these formidable complaints have resulted from the use of this remedy, but our space here will not admit them. Some of them may be found in our American Almanac, which the agents below named are pleased to furnish gratis to all who call for them.

Dyspepsia, Heart Disease, Fits, Epilepsy, Melancholy, Neuralgia

Many remarkable cures of these affections have been made by the alterative power of this medicine. It invigorates the vital functions into vigorous action, and thus overcomes disorders which would be supposed beyond its reach. Such a remedy has long been required by the necessities of the people, and we are confident that this will do for them all that medicine can do.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the Relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced Stages of the Disease.

This is a remedy so universally known to surpass any other for the cure of throat and lung complaints that it is useless here to publish the evidence of its virtues. Its unrivalled excellence for coughs and colds and its truly wonderful cures of pulmonary disease, have made it known throughout the civilized nations of the earth. Few are the communities, or even families, among them who have not some personal experience of its effects—some living trophy in their midst of its victory over the subtle and dangerous disorders of the throat and lungs. All know the dreadful fatality of these disorders, and as they know, too, the effects of this remedy, we need not do more than to assure them that it has now all the virtues that it did have when making the cures which have won so strongly upon the confidence of mankind.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONESS REMEDY

IN CANADA.

MESSRS Y & C—Gentlemen:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not always raise a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq. Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; D. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

Poetry.

"THE THREE CALLS."

BY OMEGA.

Third Hour.

O! slumberer, rouse thee! Despise not the truth
Give, give thy Creator the days of thy youth.
Why standest thou idle? The day breaketh—see!
The Lord of the vineyard is waiting for thee!
Sweetest spirit, by thy power,
Grant me yet another hour;
Earthly pleasures I would prove,
Earthly joy and earthly love;
Scarcely yet has dawned the day—
Sweetest spirit, wait, I pray.

Sixth and Ninth Hours.

O! loiterer, speed thee! The morn wears apace;
Then squander no longer thy remnant of grace;
But haste while there's time! with thy Master agree;
The Lord of the vineyard stands waiting for thee!

Gentle spirit pitiless, stay;
Brightly beams the early day;
Let me linger in these bowers;
God shall have my noontide hours;
Chide me not for my delay,
Gentle spirit, wait, I pray!

Eleventh Hour.

O sinner, arouse thee! thy morning has passed;
Already the shadows are lengthening fast;
Escape for thy life! from the dark mountains flee;
The Lord of the vineyard yet waiteth for thee;

Spirit, cease thy mournful lay;
Leave me to myself, I pray!
Earth hath flung her spell around me,
Pleasure's silken chain hath bound me;
When the sun his path hath trod,
Spirit, then I'll turn to God!

Hark! borne on the wind is the bell's solemn toll;
'Tis mournfully pealing the knell of a soul—
Of a soul that despised the kind teachings of truth,
And gave to the world the best hours of its youth;
The spirit's sweet pleadings and strivings are o'er;
The Lord of the vineyard stands waiting no more!

Selections.

PEAT-CASTING TIME,

A TALE BY PROF. THOMAS GILLESPIE.

In the olden times, there were certain fixed occasions when labour and frolic went hand in hand—when professional duty and kindhearted glee mutually kissed each other. The "rocking" mentioned by Burns—

"Or Fastenyng's Een we had a rocking"—

I still see in the dim and hazy distance of the past. It is only under the refractive medium of vigorous recollection that I can again bring up to view (as the Witch of Endor did Samuel) those images that have been reposing "'midst the wreck of things that were," for more than fifty years.—Yet my early boyhood was familiar with these social senile and juvenile festivities. There still sits Janet Smith, in her toy-mutch and check-apron, projecting at intervals the well-filled spindle into the distance. Beside her is Isabel Kirk, elongating and twirling the yet unwound thread.—Nanny Nirison occupies a creepy on the further side of the fire (making the third Fate!), with her shears. Around, and on bedsides, are seated Lizzy Gibson, with her favoured lad; Tam Kirkpatrick, with his jo Jean on his knee; Rob Paton the stirk-herd; and your humble servant.—And "now the crack goes round, and who so wilful as to put it by?" The story of past times; the report of recent love-matches and miscarriages; the gleesful song, bursting unbid from the young heart, swelling forth in beauty and in brightness like the waters from the rock of Meribah; the occasional female remonstrance against certain welcome impertinences, in shape of, "Come now, Tam—nane o' yer nonsense." "Will! I say, be peaceable, and behave yersel' afore folk. 'Od, ye'll squeeze the very breath out o' a body."

"Till, in a social glass o' strunt,
They parted off careering
On sic a night."

"Ye're heard a lilting at our ewes-milking." How few of the present generation have ever heard of this "lilting," except in song. It is the gayest and sunniest season of the year. The young lambs, in their sportive whiteness, are coursing it, and bleating it, responsive to their dams, on the hill above. The old ewes on the plain are marching—

"The labour much of man and dog"— to the pen or fold. The response to the cheerful bleat of their woolly progeny is given, soon and anon, in a short, broken, low bass. It is the raven conversing with the jackdaw! All is bustle excitement, and badinage.

"Weer up that ewe, Jenny, lass. Wha kens but her woo may yet be a blanket for you and ye ken wha to sleep in!"

"Haud yer tongue, Tammie, and gang hame to yer books and yer schoolin.—Troth, it will be twa days ere the craws dirty your kirk aggin!"

Wouf, wouf, wouf!—hee, hee, hee!—hoch, hoch, hoch!—there in they go, and in they are, their horney heads wedged over each other, and a trio of stout, well-made damsels, with petticoats tied up "a la breeches," tugging away at their well-filled dugs.

"Troth, Jenny, that ewe will waur ye; 'od I think ye hae gotten haud o' the auld tup hem self. He's as powerful, let me tell ye, as auld Francie, wham ye kissed sae sang last nicht ayout the peat-mou."

"Troth, at weel, Tam, ye're a fearful liar. 'They wad be fonder than I am o' cock birds wha wad gie tippence for the stite o' a howlet."

"Howlet here, howlet there, Jenny, ye ken weel his bras will boy you a new pan."

At this crisis the crack becomes general and inaudible from its universality, mixed as it is with the bleating of ewes, the barking of dogs, together with the caging of bardiaddies and of your humble servant.

Harvest is a blithe time! May all the charms of "Spearex, toads, beetles, bats, light on him," who shall first invent a reaping-machine! The best of all reaping-machines is "the human arm divine," whether brawny or muscular, or soft and rounded. The old woman of sixty sits all year long at her domestic occupations—you would deem her incapable of any out door exertions; but, at the sound of the harvest-horn, she renews her youth, and sallies forth into the harvest-field, with hook over-shoulder, and a heart buoyant with the spirit of the season, to take her place and drive her rig with the youngest there.—The half-grown by and girl of fourteen are mingled up in duty and in frolic, in jest and jibe, and jeer and laugh, with the stoutest and the most matured. Mothers and daughters, husbands and wives, and, above and beyond all, "lads and lasses, lovers gay!" mix and mingle in one united band, for honest labour exquisite enjoyment; and when at last the joyous kirn is won—when the maiden of straw is borne aloft and in triumph, to adorn for twelve months the wall of the farmer's ben—when the rich and cooling curds-and-cream have been ram-horn-spooned into as many mouths as there persons in the "toun"—then comes the mighty and long anticipated festival, the roasted ox, the stewed sheep, the big pot enriched with the cheering and elevating draught, the punch dealt about in ladles and in jugs, the inspiring fiddle, the maddening reel, and the Highland fling.

"We cannot but remember such things were, And were most dear to us!"

Hay harvest, too, had its soft and delicate traits, resembling those of the grain harvest. As the upper rainbow curves and glows with fainter colouring around the interior and the brighter, so did the hay harvest of yore anticipate and prefigure, as it were, the other. The hay tedded to the sun; the barefooted lass, her locks floating in the breeze, her cheeks redolent of youth, and her eyes of joy, scattering or recollecting, carting or ticking, the sweetly-scented meadow produce, under a June sun and a blue sky!

"Oh, to feel as I have felt,
Or be what I have been!"

The favoured lover, namely, of that youthful purity, now in its fourteenth summer—myself as pure and all unthinking of aught but affection the most intense, and feelings the most soft and unaccountable.

"Ah, little did thy mother think,
That day she cradled thee,
What lands thou hadst to travel in,
What death thou hadst to dee!"

Poor Jeanie Johnston! I have seen her, only a few weeks ago, during the sittings of the General Assembly, sunk in poverty, emaciated by disease, the wife of an old soldier, himself disabled from work, tenanting a dark hovel in Pipe's Close, Castlehill of Edinburgh.

In the upper district of Dumfries-shire—the land of my birth, and of all those early associations which cling to me as the mistletoe to the oak, and which are equally hallowed with the druidical excrescence—there are no coals, but a superabundance of moss; consequently peat-fires are very generally still, and were, at the time of which I speak, universally made use of; and a peat-fire, on a cold, frosty night of winter, when every star is glinting and gogling through the blue, or when the tempest raves, and is by no means to be despised. To be sure, it is short-lived—but then it kindles soon, it does not it is true, entertain us with fantastic and playful jets of flame—but then its light is full, united and steady; the heat which it sends out on all sides is superior to that of coals. Wood is sullen and sulky, whether in its log or faggot form It eats away into itself, in a cancer ignition. But the blazing peat—

"The bleezing ingle and the clean hearth-stane" is the very soul of cheerfulness and comfort. But then peats must be prepared. They do not grow in hedges, nor vegetate in meadows. They must be cut from the black and consolidated moss; and a peculiarly-constructed spade, with a sharp edge and crooked ear, must be made use of for that purpose; and into the field of operation must be brought, at casting-time, the spademen, with their spades; and the barrowmen, and women, boys and girls, with their barrows; and the breakfast bowans, with their creamy milk, cut and crossed into circles and squares; and the dinner stew with its sappy potatoes and gusty-onioned muttoned fragments; and the rest at noon, with its active sports and feats of agility, and, in particular, with its jumps from the moss-brow into the soft, marshy substance beneath—and thereby hangs my tale which shall be as short and simple as possible.

One of the loveliest visions of my boyhood is Nancy Morrison. She was a year or so older than me; but we went and returned from school together. She was the only daughter of a poor widow woman, who supported herself, in a romantic glen on the skirts of the Queensberry Hills, by bleaching or whitening webs. In those days the alkalis and acids had not yet superseded the slower process of whitening green linen by soap-boiling, tramping and alternate drying in the sun, and wetting with pure running water. Many in the time and oft that Nanny and I have wielded the wateringpan, in this fairy, sunny glen, all day long Whilst the humble bee boomed past us, the mavis occupied the thorn-tree, and the mother of Nanny employed herself in some more laborious department of the same process, Nanny and I have set us down on the greensward—in tenaci gramine played at chucks, "head him and cross him," or some such amusement. At school Nanny had ever a faithful defender and avenger in me; and I have even purloined apples and gooseberries from the castle garden—and all for the love I bore "to my Nanny, oh!"

I know not that any one has rightly described a first love. It is not the love of man and woman, though that be fervent and terrible—it is not the love of mere boy and girlhood, though that be disinterested and engrossing—but it is the love of the period of life which unites the two. "Is there a man whose blood is warm within him" who does not recollect it? Is there a woman who has passed through the novitiate of fifteen, who has not still a distinct impression of the feeling of which I speak. It is not sexual, and yet it can only exist betwixt the sexes. It is the sweetest delusion under which the soul of a created being can pass. It is modest, timid, retiring, bashful; yet, in absence of the adored—in seclusion, in meditation, and in dreams—it is bold, resolute and determined. There is no plan, no design, no right conception of cause; yet the effect is sure and the bliss perfect. Oh, for one hour—one little hour—from the thousands which I have idled, sported, dreamed away in the company of my darling school-companion Nancy!

Will Mather was about two years older than Nancy—a fine youth, attending the same school and evidently an admirer of Nancy. Mine was the love of comparative boyhood; but his was a passion gradually opening as the charms of Nancy budded into womanhood, into a manly and matrimonial feeling. I loved the girl merely as such—his eye, his heart, his whole soul were in his future bride. Marriage in no shape ever entered into my computations; but his eager look and heaving bosom bespoke the definite purpose—he anticipated fondly. I don't know exactly why, but I was never jealous of Will Mather—we were companions; and he was high souled and generous, and stood my friend in many perilous quarrels. I knew that my pathway in life was to be afar from that in which Nancy and Will were likely to walk and I felt in my heart that, dear as this beautiful rosebud was to me, I was not mean enough—I was not peasant enough to wear it in my bosom. Had Nancy on any occasion turned round to be kissed by me, I would have fled over muir and dale, to avoid her presence—and yet I had often a great desire to obtain that favor. Once indeed, and only once, did I obtain, or rather steal it. She was sitting beside a bird's nest, the young ones of which she was feeding and cherishing—for the parent birds, by the rapacity of a cat, had recently perished. As the little bills were expanding to receive their food, her countenance beamed with pity and benevolence. I never saw even her so lovely—so, in a moment I had her round the neck, and clung to her lips with the tenacity of a creature drowning. But feeling at once the awkardness of my position, took to my heels, becoming immediately invisible amidst the surrounding brushwood.

Such was "Will Mather," and such was "Nancy Morrison" at the period of which I am speaking. We must now advance about two or three years in our chronology, and find Will possessed of a piece of information which bore materially on his future fortunes. Will was an illegitimate child. His mother had kept the secret so well that he did not know his father though he had frequently urged her to reveal to him privately all that she knew of his parentage. In conversing, too, with Nancy, his now affianced bride, he had expressed similar wishes; whilst she, with a becoming and feminine modesty, had urged him not to press an aged parent on so delicate a point. At last the old woman was taken seriously ill, and on her death-bed and at midnight, revealed to her son the secret of his birth. He was the son of a proprietor in the parish, and a much respected man. The youth, as soon as he had closed his mother's eyes, hurried off, amidst the darkness, to the abode of his father, and, entering by a window, was in his father's bed-chamber and over his body ere he was fully aware.

"John Scott!" said the son, in a firm and terrible tone, grasping his parent meantime convulsively round the neck—"John Scott of Auchincleuch, I am thy son!"

The conscience-stricken culprit, being taken by surprise, and almost imagining this a supernatural intimation from heaven, exclaimed, in trembling accents—

"But who are you, that makes this averment?"

"I am thy son, father—oh I am thy son!"

Will could say no more; for his heart was full and his tears dropped hot and heavy on a father's face.

"Yes," replied the parent, after a convulsive solemn sob—(O Heaven! thou art just!)—"yes, thou art indeed my son—my long-denied and ill-used boy—whom the fear of the world's scorn has tempted me, against all the yearnings of my better nature, to use so unjustly. But come to my bosom—to a father's bosom now, for I know that voice too well to distrust thee."

In a few months after this interesting disclosure, John Scott was numbered with his fathers, and Will Scott (no longer Mather) became Laird of Auchincleuch.

Poor Nancy was at first somewhat distressed at this discovery, which put her betrothed in a position to expect a higher or a genteeler match. But there was no cause of alarm. Will was true to the back-bone, and would as soon have burnt his Bible as have sacrificed his future bride. After much pressing for an early day on the part of the lover, it was agreed, at last, that the marriage should take place at "Peat-casting Time," and that Nancy should, for the last turn, assist at the casting of her mother's peats.

I wish I could stop here, or at least proceed to give you an account of the happy nuptials of Will Scott and Nancy Morrison, the handsomest couple in the parish of Closeburn. But it may not be! These eyes, which are still filled (though it is forty-eight years since) with tears, and this pen, which trembles as I proceed, must attest and record the catastrophe.

Nancy, (the beautiful bride,) and I (for I was now on the point of leaving school for college) agreed to have a jump for the last time (often had we jumped before) from a suitable moss-brow.

"My frolicsome days will soon be owre," she cried, laughing: "the guidwife of Auchincleuch will hae something else to do than jump frae the moss-brow; and, while my name is Nancy Morrison, I'll hail the dules, or jump wi' the best o' my auld playmates."

"Weel done, Nancy!" cried I; "you are now to be the wife o' the Laird o' Auchincleuch, when your jumping days will be at an end, and I am soon to be sent to college, where the only jump I may be from the top of a pile of old black-letter folios—no heed me guid a point of advantage as the moss-brow."

"There's the Laird o' Auchincleuch coming," cried Peggy Chalmers, one of the peat-casters, who was standing aside along with several others. "He's nae longer the daft Will Mather, wha liked a jump as weel as the blithest swankie o' the barnyard. Siller makes sair changes; and yet who would exchange the Will Scott of Auchincleuch, your rich bridegroom, Nancy, for the Will Mather, your auld lover! Dinna tempt Providence, my hinny! The laird wunna like to see his bride jumpin frae knowe to knowe, like a daft gipsie, within a week o' her marriage."

"Tout!" cried Nancy, bursting out in a loud laugh; "see, he's away round by the Cauw Plantin, and winna see us—and what's the harm if he did? Come now, Tammie, just as spring and the last, and I wad gie my kaine against you cravat, that I beat ye by the length o' my marriage slipper."

"Weel dune, Nancy!" cried several of the peat-casters, who, leaning on their spades stood and looked at us with pleasure and approbation.

The laird had, as Nancy said, crossed over by what was called the Craw Plantin, and was now out of sight. To make the affair more ludicrous—for we were all bent of fun—Nancy took out, from among the high-built locks of auburn hair, her combs—a present from her lover—and impledged it in the hands of Billy Watson, along with my cravat, which I had taken off, and handed to the umpire.

"Here is a better moss-brow," cried one, at a distance.

And so to be sure it was, for it was much higher than the one we had fixed upon, and the landing-place was soft and elastic. Our practice was, always to jump together, so that the points of the toes could be measured when both the competitors' feet were still fixed in the moss.—We mounted the moss-brow. I was in high spirits, and Nancy could scarcely contain herself, for pure, boisterous, laughing glee. I went off, but the mad girl could not follow, for she was still holding her sides, and laughing immoderately. I asked her what she laughed at. She could not tell. She was under the influence of one of those extraordinary cachinnations that sometimes convulse our diaphragms, without our being able to tell why, and constantly without our being able to put a stop to them. Her face was flushed, and the fire of her glee shone bright in her eye. I took my position again.

"Now!" cried I; and away we flew, and stuck deeply into the soft and spongy moss.

I stood with my feet in the ground, that the umpire might come and mark the distance. A loud scream broke on my ear. I looked round, and, dreadful sight! I saw Nancy lying extended on the ground, with the blood pouring out at her mouth in a large stream! She had burst a blood-vessel.—The fit of laughing which preceded her effort to leap had, in all likelihood, distended her delicate veins, and predisposed her to the unhappy result.

The loud scream had attracted the notice of the bridegroom, who came running from the back of the Craw Plantin. The sight appalled and stupified him. He cried for explanation, and ran forward to his dead or dying bride, in wild confusion.—Several voices essayed an explanation, but none were intelligible. I was as unable as the rest to satisfy the unhappy man; but, though we could not speak intelligibly, we could act, and several of us lifted her up. This step sealed her fate. The change in her position produced another stream of blood. She opened her eyes once, and fixed them for a moment on Will Scott. She then closed them, and for ever.

I saw poor Nancy carried home. Will Scott, who upheld her head, fainted before he had proceeded twenty yards, and I was obliged to take his place. I was almost as unfit for the task as himself, for I reproached myself as the cause of her death. I have lived long. Will the image of that procession ever pass from my mind? The blood-stained moss-ground, and bleeding body, the trailing clothes, the unbound locks, are all before me. I can proceed no further. Would that I could stop the current of my thoughts as easily as that of this feathered chronicler of sorrow! But—

"There is a silent sorrow here,
A grief I'll ne'er impart;
It breathes no sigh, it sheds no tear,
But it consumes my heart."

I have taken up my pen to add, that Will Mather still remains a bachelor, and and that on every visit I make to Dumfriesshire, I take my dinner, sans cum solo, at Auchincleuch, and that many tears are annually shed, over a snug bottle, for poor Nancy.

THE RIGHT PERSUASION.—A soldier lay dying in the hospital, in terrible agony. A visitor asked him.—"What church are you of?" "Of the church of Christ," he replied. "I mean of what persuasion are you?" "Persuasion?" said the dying man, as his eyes looked heavenward, beaming with love to the Saviour: I am persuaded that neither death nor life, nor angels, nor principalities or powers, nor things present nor things to come, nor heighth nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate me from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus.

As you would be lovely in the sight of God strive to be Christ-like. Certainly it is the Spirit of Christ within you which only can make you lovely; the more you resemble him in holiness, the more will you manifest of his excellence; and the more

THE KU-KLAX-KLAN.

American society has been startled by the rise, suddenly as a storm-cloud at sea, of a mysterious secret society known as the Ku-Klux-Klan. This oddly-named organization is said to have originated at East Tennessee. From its birth-place it swept like wild-fire through Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana, Froride, Virginia, Maryland and Carolinas, until now it has extended its affiliations everywhere throughout the South. It has sprung up and thrown its gigantic sins, like Jonah's gourd, in a night; its doings and objects are as yet shrouded in mystery; but it is understood to be hostile to negro suffrage and congressional reconstruction. The first manifestation of the Ku-Klux-Klan, consisted of mystical placards with images of death, the skull and bones, gibbets, coffins, and pictures of horrible suppers. The members meet in obscure apartments at midnight, swear solemn oaths of secrecy and obedience, and recognize each other by grips and passwords. The superstitious negroes of the South are much alarmed, and few of them venture out after dark. Lately, however, the comparatively harmless orgies of the Ku-Klux-Klan have given place to acts of violence, and many negroes and whites suspected of not being "true men," have been assassinated in cold blood at the instance of the society.

The other day Governor Brownlow, of Tennessee, denounced the Ku-Klux-Klan in what the World calls 'hell-fire rhetoric,' and Gen. Meade, in the district of Georgia, and Gen. Shepherd, of Alabama have issued orders for the suppression of the organization. The movement is fraught with mischief, and will not readily be suppressed.—Evening Advertiser.

New Zealand.

That remote British Colony in the South Pacific Ocean, has for years past been so uniformly represented to be in a flourishing state, except a few Maorian wars, that it now seems strange to hear of hard, dull times, low wages, and high prices of provisions there. Yet such is the fact.

A correspondent of the London "Evening Advertiser," writing from Auckland, says:—"Business is very dull here; in fact, there is nothing at all doing in the way of trade or manufactures. The chief cause of the present stagnation is the fact that the land was allowed to go uncultivated during the Maori war, the farmers, as a general thing, leaving their farms and flocking to the towns for protection.

In speaking of labor, wages and mechanics, the writer says there are too many mechanics there already. Shoemakers command about the same wages as in Canada, with far less of a demand for them. There is very little doing for blacksmiths; a journeyman gets from $1 25 to $1 50 per day, and board himself, and it is very hard to get work at all. The charge for shoeing a horse all round is $2. Coopers find nothing to do.—There are six cooper shops in Auckland, and two years ago one of them did more business in two weeks than the whole of them do now in a year. Carpenters, he says, are there in great numbers; their business was good two years ago, but it is very low now. He thinks people would make a great mistake should they emigrate from Canada to New Zealand, now, for they can do much better in Canada than there. He gives the following as the prevailing prices: Beef, per lb., 10c to 14c; Mutton, 8c to 14c; Butter, 25c Cheese, 25c; Ham, 25; Milk, per quart, 6c; Eggs per doz 24 to 30c; Fowls, per pair, $1 50; Turkeys, each $1 50; Flour, per barrel, $9 50; Coals, per ton, $10 to $12.

Terrible Accident on New York and Erie Railroad.

New York, April 15.—A terrible accident occurred on the New York and Erie Railroad about three o'clock this morning, about 13 miles west of Port Jervis.—Twenty-five or thirty persons are reported killed and sixty or seventy wounded.—Chas. K. Loomis, of Buffalo, is among the killed; E. B. Phillips and Chas. Gray, of the M. S. R. R., were wounded. A portion of the train, including one sleeping car, was thrown from the track by a misplaced switch, and went over a bank some fifteen or twenty feet in height. Three passengers coaches and one sleeping car were burnt. Latest accounts put the number killed at twenty and the wounded at seventy.

FURTHER PARTICULARS.

New York, April 15.—One of the most terrible railroad disasters on record occurred early this morning at Carr's Rock on the Erie railway, 17 miles from Port Jervis. At the scene of accident, the bed of the road is cut in the side of a bluff overhanging the river. The ledge on which the track runs is very narrow, and the consequence was that the cars were thrown off the track by the breaking of a rail and down an embankment 20 feet thereby greatly increasing the loss of life, 13 dead bodies are at Port Jervis depot, 52 wounded not yet arrived. Mr. Lynch, sleeping car conductor, estimates that seven bodies are consumed which cannot be verified until the wreck is removed. The cars in going over the embankment turned several times before the bottom was reached, and were nearly demolished. The sleeping car was entirely consumed by fire. Seven person were burned to death, and six others killed by coming in contact with the jagged rocks &c.

Burning of a Steamboat on Lake Michigan with her passengers and crew.

UPWARDS OF ONE HUNDRED PERSONS ON BOARD, AND ONLY TWO SAVED.

The side-wheel steamer "Sea Bird," belonging to Godrich's line, which left Milwaukee lately was burned off Wankegan next morning.

The steamboat Sea Bird belonged to the Two Rivers, Manisowoe and Chicago line of steamers. She had made four trips this season, and was on her fifth when she met with the terrible disaster reported this morning. From the statement of one of the persons rescued, it appears that all on board became demoralized even the officers and no effort was made to lower the small boats. The only survivors, as far as known, are C. A. Chamberlin and Edward Hannabury, passengers from Sheboygan.

A NOBLE NEGRO.—James H. Harris, an educated negro, for some time resident in Libera, having been nominated to Congress for a district in North Carolina, declined the nomination, saying: "If you send me to Congress, we shall see all the Southern States following the example, and how will it look to have eight or ten big black men sitting in the House of Representatives! What fuel that would be to feed the flame of prejudice! I want this five thousand dollars a year as badly as anybody, but I am not willing to strike a blow against the Republican party. I am not willing to sell out my race, for such a sale would my acceptance virtually be."

THURSDAY, APRIL 23, 1868.

THE OTTAWA TRAGEDY.

This affair is still being investigated with rigor. The position of the murdered man and the large reward that is offered, unite to induce the utmost exertion of the authorities and the detectives to find out the assassin, if possible. From the evidence already given, the strongest suspicions are that Whalen is the murderer; of course, some new light may dispel these suspicions, hence, until he be found guilty, we must treat him in some degree as innocent. It also appears that he is only one of a gang who conspired to take away Mr. McGee's life, because of his opposition to Fenianism, and his bold denunciation of those cowardly murderers who came over to take away the lives of innocent and unoffending Canadians, whose only crime is that they treat with too much leniency those whom they even suspect of Fenian tendencies. There is now no doubt in the public mind but that the murder is the result of Fenianism, and what a diabolical ism it must be. The investigation reveals the facts that there have been (yes, we fear are) bands of Fenians in Canada shielded under the name of certain societies, on the members of which some suspicions were cast, and now, at least in some cases, it would appear that there were reasonable grounds for those suspicions. The Montreal St. Patrick's Society expelled Mr. McGee, for what? not because he was not as benevolent as the rest of the members, not because he loved Ireland less ardently than they, but because he would not permit their treasonable designs to go on unopposed. The Hibernian Society of Toronto, too, has Fenians among its numbers, and the conviction is becoming stronger, that there are not one of those societies but have some of these cut-throats on their list. We do not by this mean to say that all of them are either Fenians or have Fenian tendencies, but we know who in all societies are the most active and try to obtain the highest places that they may extend their unholy principles, and it is well known that one diseased sheep very soon infects the whole flock.

Mrs McGee has nobly refused to receive the condolence of the Montreal St. Patrick's Society, believing, as she must, that it is false and hypocritical, and believing that from among the members of that society came the assassins of her husband.

Buckley, too, appears to know more about the prisoner than he has yet revealed, for fear, as he asserted, that his house should be burned about him. Now, why did he fear if he does not know or believe that Whalen has many sympathisers. If the members of that society were desirous to wipe out the stain that has been cast upon them, they would, as one man, come forward and either clear the man or allow Buckley without fear to tell what he knows, so that instead of uniting to conceal the murder of their most illustrious countryman in the Dominion, they would unite to avenge the foul assassination of one who shed such lustre on his country by his varied and generally acknowledged talents as a writer, orator, poet, statesman and patriot. Whalen has made some admission that tend to fasten the crime on him. On one occasion, striking his breast, he said to Detective O'Neil, "I have it there, they can't take it from me." On being taken to jail, he said, "They are going to fix me, eh! I am used to that. I have been twice in Kilmainham Jail. They can't frighten me." Doyle, one of the prisoners, is greatly depressed, and rumour had it that he had confessed the whole matter, but this turns out not correct.

The latest is that one Lacroix actually seen the murder. This man left Hull on the night of the murder, and according to his own account happened to go along to the scene of the assassination shortly before the murder. He came along Wellington street near the theatre, crossed the vacant lot there and got on to Sparks street opposite Mrs. Trotter's. He observed a man come to Trotter's and apparently to open the door. Further east he saw a man on the walk, probably about twenty feet behind the man at the door, whom we might suppose was Mr. McGee. The man further east stopped behind Mr. McGee, within a few paces of him and fired. Lacroix says he saw Mr. McGee fall, whereupon his murderer ran back again eastward, stumbling in his haste against a post, and ejaculating the single word "Jesus." The murderer turned into Champion's Hotel yard, on the south side of Sparks street, not far from Trotter's, and then the witness saw him no more, but with the most incomprehensible and cowardly carelessness Lacroix passed on to his home in the lower town. Lacroix further says that though he did not see the features of the murderer, he (Lacroix) noticed that the coat worn by that man was dark. He wore light pants and cap, a description which corresponds closely with Whelan's appearance.

Lacroix went over the scene of the murder with Mr. O'Reilly, and described the position of the parties in the tragedy fully. The morning after the murder Lacroix mentioned what he saw, but no credit was paid to his strange tale. Subsequently the matter became talked over among the neighbours, and they threatened his life for the cowardly part he played. The threats became so alarming that he left home and went to work in some lumbering capacity eight or nine mile off, and there Sergt.-Major Cummins arrested him to-day. He is a French Canadian—very simple, apparently. Regarding Buckley's incarceration has affected him deeply. He completely broken down, and cries a good deal. A good deal of the evidence is kept from the public.

SPRING ASSIZES.

This court opened on Thursday last.—Judge, the Hon. Adam Wilson, presiding. The criminal business was very limited. There were, however, a large number of civil cases. At the opening of the court, the Sheriff, as is usual when there are no prisoners in his custody, presented His Lordship with a pair of white kid gloves. The following cases were disposed of.

FIRST DAY

Clark vs. Carabina.—Assessment of damages. Scott for plff.; no one for deft. Damages assessed at $1719.

Armstrong vs. Buck.—Referred to arbitration. Smith, Q.C., for plff.; Weller & Hatton for deft.

Chamberlain vs. McBurney.—Ejectment. Smith, Q.C., for plff. H. Cameron, Counsel; Edmison, Attorney, for deft. Verdict for plff.

Hopkins vs. Provincial Insurance Co.—Scott for plff.; Duggan, Q.C. for deft. Verdict by consent for $225.

Ledyard vs. Drain, et al.—Trespass to timber on south half of 10, 6th concession of Dummer. Defence, that Drain sold the timber by plffs authority. Verdict for defts. H. Cameron, for plff.; Armour, Q. C., and Fairbairn, for defts.

SECOND DAY.

Nicholson vs. Page, et al.—Cutting timber. Verdict for plff., $563. Weller & Hatton, Smith, Q. C., and H. Cameron for plff.; D. R. Armour & Holden for defts.

Wells vs. Cummings.—Trespass, cutting timber. Defence, that lot was under timber license, and that plff. had no title to maintain trespass. Smith, Q.C. and H. Cameron for plff.; J. D. Armour, Q.C., and Holden, for deft.

Boyd vs. Edsall.—Settled. Dunsford for plff.

The Queen vs. Montgomery.—Assault. Guilty, and sentenced to two weeks in gaol at hard labor.

THIRD DAY.

The Queen vs. John McDonald.—The deft appeared to have taken timber from the land of one Breen and was prosecuted criminally. Verdict, not guilty. Smith, Q. C., for the Crown; Dumble for Breen; H. Cameron for deft.

Township of Burleigh vs. Campbell, et al.—Trespass, cutting timber on land claimed to be road allowances. Verdict for plff, $300 damages. Smith, Q.C., Armour, Q.C., and Dumble for plff.; Weiler & Hatton and H. Cameron for deft.

FOURTH DAY.

King vs. Phelan—Verdict for plff, $138.40. Scott and H. Cameron for plff.; Smith, Q.C., and Armour, Q.C., for deft.

Strickland vs. Vansittart.—Verdict for defts. Scott and Smith, Q. C., for plffs.; Armour, Q.C., and H. Cameron for deft.

The Queen vs. Patrick Breen.—Charge of perjury. Verdict, not guilty. H. Cameron for the Crown; Dumble for deft.

PRESENTATION OF THE GRAND JURY.

The Grand Jury of our Soverign Lady the Queen, upon their oath, present—

That they have carefully enquired into and disposed of the Bills laid before them.

That they have examined the jail as directed by your Lordship, and found it in the best state of order, which they consider highly creditable to those appointed over that department.

The Grand Jurors found one man and three females, more or less insane, confined in the jail for safe keeping, and regret that a more suitable asaylum has not been provided for them. One of the females, we understand, has been nearly two years confined therein, without any prospect of getting to a place where she might, under proper treatment, be relieved, notwithstanding repeated application by the Sheriff.

The Grand Jurors have visited the Protestant Home, and find that a great amount of good has been done by that institution and reflects much credit upon the ladies of Peterboro, who have given their time and attention to it.

The Grand Jurors join with your Lordship in the satisfaction expressed that so little matter of a criminal nature required their attention, at the same time feel it not out of place to express regret that all parts of the Province is not similarly free from crime, and refer more particularly to the recent sad occurence at the City of Ottawa, where an unoffending and eminent States man was cruelly and brutally deprived of life by the hand of an assassin.

The Grand Jurors trust it will not be out of place to express the hope that no pains will be spared to bring the guilty parties to justice, and thus wipe out, so far as can be done, the blot which has been fixed upon our character as a humane and christian people.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

THOS. CHAMBERS,
Grand Jury Room, } Foreman.
Peterboro, April 18th, 1868.

Miles Wetherill and a man named Faherty were hanged at Salford, England, on the 4th instant. Wetherill is the man who murdered Mr. Plows lately for dismissing his sweetheart from service.

A SAD CASE.—The Toronto papers record the death of a young woman named Sarah Jane Wright, at the residence of Dr. Williams, where she was for the purpose of procuring abortion. The body of a prisoner named Baldwinske has been exhumed to hold an inquest, because of suspicion of her death from the same cause under the treatment of Williams also. It is to be hoped that if guilty he will receive the full penalty of the law. But what about old grey headed scoundrel who are the seducers of those unfortunate creatures? should they get scot free. Since the law cannot reach them, society should brand them with their mark of contempt, and force them to associate only with that class whose ways they follow, and whose company only suits them.

WHAT A TELEGRAM CAN DO.—The Napanee Express says:—A few mornings since the good people of Napanee were in an uproar of an excitement caused by a private telegram from a friend to the Rev. W. Brown. The telegram ran thus:—"Go to bed early—take a nap—great expectations." This was shown to the Mayor, and not being able to unravel it, constables were ordered to look out for strangers; the artillery were also ordered to be ready for any emergency. No Fenians, however, made their appearance, we hope the Mayor is again able to attend to his business. The whole affair was—the R. C. Priest of Port Hope, intending to call on his Rev. Brother of Napanee during the night, on a trip to Kingston, sent the missile that caused so much excitement.

DEATH OF LORD CARDEGAN.—Lord Cardegan, whose name was James Thomas Budenel, and who led the famous but fatal charge of the Six Hundred at Balaklava, died on the 28th of March, ult. He is said to have been very handsome, but haughty, cruel, impetuous and passionate, and of course a brave soldier. His private conduct was a reproach to any man. The influence of wealth and family position raised him to places he should not have occupied, and it appears, were the means of enabling him to give full vent to the most profligate and unscrupulous passions, which do not appear to have been under much control.

MR. MCGEE'S FAMILY.—On Friday last, the Commons in committee of the whole agreed to grant the sum of $1200 a year to Mr. McGee's widow, to commence on the day of the murder, the 7th day of April, 1868. In this we believe all parties in the country cordially unite. It was also resolved that $8000 be vested in the Minister of Finance of Canada, for the time being, in two separate sums, of $4000 each, for the use of the two children, in such manner as the Governor in Council may direct. Thus abundant provisions are made for the family.

There will be a meeting of the Peterboro Literary Club, this evening, at their Room over the Royal Canadian Bank. The subject for debate will be—"Is England rising or falling as a nation." On the affirmative—Messrs. Fairbairn, Carnegie, Hardy and O'Beirne. Negative—Messrs. Dixon, Eastwood, Hall and Burnham. The debate will be public.

The Prince and Princess of Wales are in Ireland at present. They arrived at Dublin on the 15th inst. They were received by the Lord Lieutenant and Officers of State, the Commanders-in-chief of the forces and others. The people's shouts, too, were long and loud, as the carriages that bore the royal party proceeded along the streets to the castle.

MONTREAL HOUSE.—We would invite the attention of our readers to the new advertisement of the Montreal House in this days issue. From all appearance they are determined to do a large business this Spring, and seem to offer goods very cheap. Our readers would do well to give them a call.

THE OGEMAH.—The Ogemah has commenced running between Bridgenorth and Lindsay. She leaves every Monday, Wednesday and Friday, returning the next day in each case. This will prove a great advantage to those who wish to travel by the back lakes.

BARBERING ESTABLISHMENT.—we invite attention to Prof. Connor's advertisement in another column. He has fitted up his saloon in the most fashionable style, where he attends to Shaving and Hairdressing in every style of the day.

THE CAVAN SPRING SHOW.—The Annual Spring Show of the Cavan Agricultural Society will be held at Millbrook, on Monday, May 4, 1868, at noon. Prizes will be offered for competition, subject to the rules of the Society.

SNOW.—Just as we go to press, snow is falling freely, and is already almost a foot deep on the level; there are drifts, too, of considerable dimensions.

The contest for the Reeveship of Burleigh is not yet decided, owing to the lawyers having to attend to business at the assizes during the past week.

We regret to say that the body of Mr. Nelson who was lost in Pigeon Lake, at the breaking up of the ice, has not yet been found.

SPRING FAIR.—The Spring Fair will take place here on Saturday 25th instant.

LESLIE'S LADY'S MAGAZINE.—The May number of this Magazine is received. It contains the usual fashion plate, colored; paper patterns, descriptions of engravings, and of fashions, and a great variety of information for the lovers of fashion. There is also a large space devoted to reading matter which of course will be valued according to the taste of the reader. This is an excellent number. The publisher is improving it and promises to publish in it the fashion plates of foreign journals, the fashions of Paris, Berlin and Vienna, simultaneously with their appearance at home. Paper patterns are also promised monthly.

A NEW PAPER IN MONTREAL.—We have received the first number of a new monthly called the "Canadian Scotsman." It contains 16 pages of closely printed matter; the selections are good, and the original matter well written. This periodical will no doubt obtain an extensive circulation.—Price only $2 a year.

LONDON SOCIETY, for April, has been received and is a very interesting number. It can be obtained from Messrs. W. C. Chesett & Co., Toronto, or at Stratton & Armstrong's Book Store, Peterboro.

THE ASSASSINATION.

WHELAN BEFORE THE MAGISTRATES.

From the evidence that has been given in this case, the following is the substance since our last. On Thursday he was brought into the Court House under a guard of six soldiers. Mr. Buckley, a barrister of Ottawa, was there on behalf of the prisoner. Mr. O'Riely, of Kingston, is on behalf of the Crown.

Alex. Turner sworn, testified to having come from Montreal in September, 1866. He was a waiter in the St. Lawrence Hall, and knew the prisoner well; had lodged in Whalen's house five months; was there during the election in which Mr. McGee and Devlin ran. Whalen took an active part in the election in favor of Devlin. On several occasions prisoner was out all night canvassing. He also said prisoner owned and I saw in his house a six shooter revolver; heard prisoner on several occasions threaten the late Mr. McGee; I was in the Theatre Royal once with Whalen and after we came out Whalen renewed his threats, this was before the election a few nights; a man named Kelly met us there; I was in Whalen's company on that occasion till four o'clock in the morning; Whalen was excited by liquor, and said in Mrs. Macdonald's house, in the presence of Kelly and myself, that he would not think any more of taking Mr. McGee's life than he would of taking a cup of tea; I saw the six shooter I spoke of in prisoner's room on his bed once; never saw a pistol with him, but after the election he told me he had a pistol in his breeches pocket, and I saw the shape of it. He said he would go up to McGee's house on another occasion.—Whalen had previously been reading a speech of McGee's against Fenianism, and Whalen had some words with his wife, after which he went out, and said he would blow McGee's bloody brains out. Whalen went out and stopped out all night.—The day after, I heard Whalen state he had been up to McGee's house all night. He said Michael Enright and Murphy were there. Subsequently in his house, I heard Whalen, while at tea, threaten McGee's life for the first time. This was two or three nights following the occurrence I last related. He said McGee was a traitor to his country, and now though elected, he would not reign long, that he would get his bloody brains blown out. This he said in presence of Inglis. I heard prisoner say, on another occasion, McGee was a traitor to his country; that he received money from the Feinns and he spent the money, and the bloody old pig turned over to the Protestants, at Mrs. Scanlan's, corner of Bleury and Hermine street heard prisoner say it was a good thing that McGee's house was not burned last night; heard Whalen also say that he did not care for the government or Her Majesty; heard Whalen warn Enright and others that I was an informer, and to beware of me; those that resorted to Scanlan's were nearly all thorough Feinans; Murphy, Whalen, Jas. Kraselia and Enright were that day in Scanlin's; all of them were thorough Feinans; I asked Murphy to drink, he replied that he would not as I was an informer; this was the same night; the day after or before I saw Mr. McGee pass up Notre Dame street in a cab; I went into Scanlin's and saw there Whalen, Enright, Murphy and three more men; as I was going in I heard one of the party, Murphy, I think, say, "I just saw the bloody old pig go up;" Whalen remarked, it is a good thing we did not catch the b——r last night; I knew Whalen was out that first night; did not hear them mention Mr. McGee's name, but saw him pass in a cab a little before; previous to this Whalen spoke freely before me, but subsequently he did not; on the last occasion I alluded to I made an attempt to enter where they were but the door was shut against me; saw them come out afterwards. There were about eight of them. I recognized the likeness shown me as the photograph of Whalen, myself, Inglis and others. I never gave any information to the authorities till Mr. McGee's death. He also testified to having heard Whalen both drunk and sober, threaten McGee.

John McGee, brother to the deceased, identified Whalen as having been at his brother's residence shortly after the election, when Whelan took the report to Mr. McGee that there was a plot to burn up his house, at that time Whalen gave his name as Smith.

John Downs, who drove home Sir J. A. McDonald from the Parliament Buildings, saw Whalen several times during the night of the murder; knew him at Quebec, he there went under the name of Sullivan. Saw Whalen going into the Parliament Buildings two or three times; saw him also just before the adjournment and asked if the House was near adjourned, when he replied he did not know. He then went and remained in about an hour and a half; he came out, but did not go far, and went in again; when he came out the last time, he said the House had adjourned and they were all coming out; I put the carriage to the door and when Sir John A. McDonald got in I drove off; Whelan was either standing or walking then.

Buckley, the messenger, who is also a member of the St. Patrick's Society, first saw Whalen at a meeting of that association when Whalen was appointed Marshall for St. Patrick's day—Eagleson proposed him, and one Michael Starr seconded him. He next saw him three or four times the night of the murder. Saw him also at the bar of the Senate, and in the House of Commons about ten days before the murder. On the night of the murder he was in the House a few minutes before two o'clock. I noticed him coming down from the gallery with eight or nine others; he went through the main lobby and out of the porch within the main entrance. After he went out I noticed he came back and stood inside the porch; he stood there from three to five minutes in the lobby on the Senate side of the building. I stood at the main lobby door and he was looking sharply in my direction, as if he was watching me or the door of the lobby. Mr. McGee had not left the House at this time; prisoner did not speak. I think Mr. McGee at that time was in the lobby behind me nearly opposite the post office. From the position in which the prisoner stood he could see into the lobby through the door. I saw Sir John A. McDonald into the carriage, shut the door and told the man to drive off. I did not see Whalen outside. Most of the members had left before Sir John A. McDonald. Immediately after Sir John drove off I went into the messenger's room, put on my overcoat and as I came out into the main entrance or vestibute I saw Mr. McGee coming out; he was half way down the vestibute towards the main entrance; he was walking with Mr. McFarlane and went out in front of me. They preceded me down to the north-west corner of Sparks and Metcalfe streets; they paused at that corner, Mr. McFarlane going along the north side of Sparks street westward to his lodgings, and Mr. McGee crossing over to Henton's corner where he turned eastward. He crossed Sparks street to this corner first, followed by my brother John, then Frechette and Bryce. My brother said "Good morning, Mr. McGee," and he replied "it is morning, Buckley, it is morning now." I did not hear him add, "and a fine morning it is." We then parted from him, and I went home with Bryce and my brother. I did not hear a shot fired. I was waked up about three o'clock by O'Neil and Davis who told me of the murder. They asked if I was in bed. I said "Yes," and they rejoined, "Then get up, Mr. McGee has been shot." It was Davis I think who added, "Get up quick and get your carriage for Sir John is there and may want it." I got up and went to the place where Mr. McGee was lying. There some enquiry then by the police and the persons assembled as to who had committed the murder. I had suspicion of the prisoner, having seen him at the door of the house and noticed his motions while there. His actions were quick and sharp and excited. This was my suspicion after I heard of the murder, but I had no suspicion he was the murderer. To Mr. O'Riely, he asserted that his suspicions led him to believe that Whalen was the guilty party. This same Buckley, at the very first, told the detectives to go to Eagleson's and arrest the man with the red whiskers, and that day they did arrest Whalen.

Louis Roydes Jardons testified to having seen Whalen with a pistol in the House on the Wednesday previous to the murder.

Patrick Groves, sworn—I am second head waiter in the Russel House. I know John Doyle, who was also a waiter there; have seen the prisoner four or five times before; he came to the Russel House on one occasion to ask for Doyle; that was a few days before the 17th of March. I do not think I saw him again till the night of the murder. I saw Whalen in the hotel that night at nearly 12 o'clock, in a glass pantry, speaking to Jno. Doyle; saw him there from five to ten minutes; did not hear what they were saying. Whalen went out towards the door. I asked him if he was off and he said "Yes." Saw him again next morning between two and three o'clock at the main hall door; asked him if Doyle had gone home. It was probably 10 or 15 minutes after I heard of the murder that I saw Whalen. He asked for Doyle. Doyle was waiting on the tea table when I heard of the murder. About 20 minutes after hearing of the murder I went to the spot. When I mentioned to Whalen that Mr. McGee had been shot, he wheeled about and said nothing. Doyle had gone out and had not then come in. I did not see Whalen again till he was arrested.

Jane Fanning and Eliza Tumy, servants in Star's, testified to the prisoner's keeping a pistol with him. Francis Kelly saw him at Stars', and when the murder was spoken of he appeared to pay no attention to it, but asked for some drink.

Several prisoners have been arrested. Their names are Murphy, Doody, Callaghan, Kinsella, Matthews. Murphy is regarded as a Fenian leader in Montreal; Murphy, too, it appears, had an interview with O'Neil at Fort Erie the week before the assassination. This is thought to be the man that was believed to be from the United States. Kinsella is another who is also a Fenian; all these are from Montreal and hated Mr. McGee. Murphy, on his examination, admits being a Fenian, but refuses to implicate others. Jno. Curran, before called Matthews, denies being a Fenian, but admitted that in a drunken frolic he said he would give ten dollars towards Whelan's defence. Doody is proved to be a Fenian Centre from documents now in possession of the government. Callaghan is Secretary.

Edward Armstrong sworn—I recollect last Saturday morning. I examined the yard in the rear of McKennas, facing on Wellington street. I had my attention called to these premises, from hearing that a shot had been fired from that neighborhood on the Thursday night preceeding the assassination. On the verandah at the head steps leading to the rear of the empty building, next to McKenna's inn, I saw on Saturday foot marks in the snow. I went into the house, which is vacant, passed through till I came to the door at the head of the stairs, and found all the doors open. Going down stairs into the hall, I found a slab of wood about three or four feet long. The square end of it rested against a projection in the hall. It was lying up against the door, and as the door opened the stick slide up. It offered no resistance to a person wishing to enter from the outside, but just kept the door shut. The ball door on Sparks street was not locked, and a person could quickly push it open and pass through the empty building and yard to Wellington street. There is no gate to the yard. It is quite open. I searched the front room on the second flat particularly, and found there a piece of newspaper, a piece of red blotting paper, and other pieces of paper, which I now produce. The tissue paper among them appeared to be soiled with powder stains.—There were scraps of writing on the papers. I watched the tracks on the verandah at the head of the stairs until detective O'Neill came with a pair of boots. The boots and tracks fitted exactly in every portion. They could not have fitted closer. The left foot track leading into the house was very distinct, and this we more particularly measured. The one leading out was not so distinct. The boot now produced I recognize as the one we compared with the tracks. The nail marks in the heel of the boot produced were marked distinctly in the snow on the verandah. From the front windows up stairs I could see Mrs. Trotter's clearly.—The house next to McKenna's must have been vacant some months. I remarked the window still in Mrs. Trotter's, where the bullet mark was. The shot could have been fired from Mrs. McKenna's door. The hall door of Mrs. Trotter's is to the west of the empty house. The window still is only about fifteen inches from the door and is east of it.

To Mr. Buckley.—My attention was drawn to this house on Tuesday morning, after the murder. I do not think it snowed after the murder. When I looked at the verandah on Saturday there only remained this patch of old snow which was shaded.—The rest was almost clear of snow. There were two foot marks plain as if made by one entering the door, and one of a person leaving, but not so plainly marked. The verandah runs the whole length of the block, but is boarded off in rear of each house. The lower part of the building is tenanted by Mr. Offord, shoemaker, but the upper portion is altogether untenable. The bullet mark at Mrs. Trotter's traverses the window sill from east to west.

At the close of this evidence the proceedings were adjourned, and since, they have been proceeding with closed doors.

Mr. Bright on the Irish Church.

The full report of John Bright's last speech on the Irish Church question, contains some interesting statements. He does not believe that the Episcopalians of Ireland number more than 700,000. When the census enumerators go round, if a man is not a Catholic or Presbyterian, he is put down, unless he can state that he belongs to some other sect, as an Episcopalian.—The number in actual connection with the church is not above five or six hundred thousand persons, or not much more than the population of Liverpool, Manchester, or Glasgow. "And yet," says Mr. Bright to the British Parliament, "for this small population you have no less than twelve bishops and two archbishops, and you devote to their religion not less an income than is derivable from a capital sum of some ten millions sterling." In the course of his speech, Mr. Bright related the following:—"Some years ago, I had the pleasure of spending some days at the house of the late Lord Aberdeen, after he ceased to be First Minister. He was talking of the disruption of the Church of Scotland, and he said that nothing in the course of his public life, he thought, had given him so much pain as the disruption of that church, and the establishment of the Free Church in the country. But he said he had lived long enough to discover that it was one of the greatest blessings that had ever come to Scotland.—There had been a vast increase in the number of churches, a corresponding increase in the number of manses or ministers' houses; schools, also, had been multiplied to an extraordinary extent; and there had been imported, he said, into the Scotch Church, a vitality and an energy which he had not known for a long period, while education, morality, and religion had received a wonderful impulse in consequence of that change."

Royal College of Dental Surgeons, Ontario.

A meeting of the Board of Provisional Examiners and Trustees of the Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario was held at the Queen's Hotel 14th instant. The full Board was present, viz: B. W. Day, M. D., Kingston; Messrs. C. S. Chittenden, Hamilton; H. T. Wood, Paton; J. O'Donnell, Peterboro'; J. S. Scott, M. D. Cobourg; G. V. N. Relzea, Belleville; A. D. Lalonde, Brockville; Charles Kahn, Stratford; J. B. Mercham, Brantford; G. L. Elliot, Toronto; and John Leggo Ottawa city. Mr. Relzea was called to the chair, and Mr. O'Donnell was requested to act as secretary.

The following gentlemen were duly elected officers of the Board:—B. W. Day, M. D., President; Mr. C. S. Chittenden, Treasurer; Mr. J. O'Donnell, Secretary; Mr. H. T. Wood, Registrar.

The chairman appointed the following a committee to draft By-laws for the government of the Board, and report to the meeting at 3 p.m., viz:—Messrs. J. S. Scott, M. D., J. B. Mercham, F. G. Callender, J. Leggo, and G. V. N. Relzea. The meeting then adjourned till 3 p.m.

At the afternoon session, the committee, through their chairman, Dr. Scott, submitted a draft of By-laws, which was adopted with slight amendments. After a good deal of discussion on important points connected with curriculum, &c., the meeting adjourned at 6 p.m. till 7:30.

Moved by Mr. O'Donnell, seconded by Mr. Lalonde, "That Messrs. Day, Relzea, Meacham, Leggo and Scott be appointed a committee to draft blank forms of application, affidavits, &c."

The following resolution was adopted on motion of Mr. Chittenden, seconded by Mr. Relzea. "That this Board most heartily approves of the proposal to publish the 'Canada Journal of Dental Science,' as announced by Mr. W. George Beers, of Montreal, and recommend the profession to support it."

Among the most important of modern Medical discoveries, stands

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER

As a Family Medicine, it is well and favorably known, relieving thousands from pains in the Side, Back and Head, Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Sprains, Bruises, Cramps in the Stomach, Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Bowel Complaints, Burns, Scalds, Frost-bites, &c. &c.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER

Has now been before the Public for a length of time, and wherever used is well liked, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction, where the Directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

We speak from experience in this matter, having tested it, thoroughly, and therefore those who are suffering from any of the complaints for which it is recommended may depend upon its being a Sovereign Remedy.

The astonishing efficacy of the Canadian Pain Destroyer, in curing the diseases for which it is recommended, and its wonderful success in subduing the torturing pains of Rheumatism, and in relieving Nervous Affections, entitle it to a high rank in the list of remedies for these complaints. Orders are coming in from Medicine Dealers, in all parts of the Country for further supplies, and each testifying as to the universal satisfaction it gives.

The Canadian Pain destroyer never fails to give immediate relief. All Medicine dealers keep it. Physicians order and use it; and no family will be without it after once trying it. Price only Twenty-five cents per Bottle.

All orders should be addressed to

NORTHROP & LYMAN.

MOTHERS READ THIS.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are suitable and self-administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

N B—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 22

VERY NATURAL.

When a person has proved an article and found it good, and answering the purpose for which it is intended he will not readily abandon it for one of doubtful reputation or concerning which he knows nothing. We are led to make these remarks owing to the course always pursued by those who have used that celebrated and truly valuable horse medicine known as "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy"—all are so well pleased with it that they will not use any other; many have waited several weeks until the agent could obtain a new supply. There is nothing equal to it as condition Medicine, or for any complaint affecting the wind of horses.

Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurlbut & Co. is on each package.

MONTREAL HOUSE,

VERY IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

The subscriber has much pleasure in announcing to his numerous friends that his stock of Spring and Summer Goods is now complete in every department, and that for quality, style and variety it cannot be surpassed in town, while in cheapness it cannot at all be equalled.

His Staple Goods were purchased before the late rise in Cotton, and are consequently over 30 per cent cheaper than they can now be purchased. It is his intention to give his customers the full benefit of this advantage, as he is offering these goods at a rather lower advance on cost than usual, and will continue to do so as long as they last.

In his stock will be found several cheap lots which were purchased at a bargain, and which will be offered much below their usual prices.

One lot of DRESS GOODS is offered at from 4½d to 9d per yard,

And a lot of first quality ALL WOOL CANADIAN TWEEDS is offered at from 3s to 3s 6d per yard. The 3s lot of these Tweeds cost 3s 6d to make them, and the 3s 6d lot were sold wholesale at 4s 6d per yard.

Good FACTORY COTTONS, we are selling at 4d, 5½d and 6½d per yard.

Good BLEACHED COTTONS, we are selling at 5½d, 6½d and 7½d per yard.

PRINTS, at 5d, 6½d and 7½d; the best ever seen at the money.

DRESS GOODS, in Lustres, Challies and Barèges, at 9d, 1s and 1s 3d per yard—very pretty and good.

Dress MUSLINS, very good and pretty, at 7½d per yard.

PARASOLS—a large assortment, from 3s up.

LADIES' HATS AND BONNETS,

FLOWERS—New Style.

STRAW TRIMMINGS,

BUGLE TRIMMINGS, &c., &c.

At about 25 per cent. lower than they are sold other places. We make it a point to sell our Millinery Goods at less than the customary profits.

Good Striped TICKINGS at 9d per yard,

Stripe SHIRTINGS, Blue and Brown Derrys, Straw TICKINGS, &c., &c., at very low prices.

SHAWLS—We are clearing out our Stock at cost price and under.

FANCY BONNET RIBBONS, we are selling out in cheap lots.

BELT BUCKLES selling off at cost and less than cost.

BLACK VEILS, we are selling off at almost any price.

Our reason for offering some of these things under Cost is that our stock of them is too large and we wish to reduce it.

We hope our friends will call and judge for themselves that we do not advertise what we cannot show.

CLOTHS.

We invite particular attention to our Stock of Cloths, which is one of the best assorted to be found.

Our CANADIAN TWEEDS at 3s and 3s 6d per yard, already mentioned as one of the cheap lots, every person should buy.

In FINER CLOTHS, also, we can suit any person who favors us, as our stock is so varied, and our rule is to sell on very small profits.

This department of our business is under the charge of MR. BAKEWELL, who is now so well known as a first-class Cutter, that it is needless to make any remark upon his ability.

READY-MADE CLOTHING.

We have now on hand one of the largest assortments in Town of Spring and Summer Clothing, which we are offering at very low prices.

CALL AND EXAMINE OUR STOCK WHETHER YOU PURCHASE OR NOT.

Gentlemen's Hats, Caps, Shirts, Gloves, Hosiery, Ties, Paper Collars and Cuffs in any quantity.

Peterborough, April 23rd, 1868.

The Great English Remedy.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition, but a safe and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorised Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalising the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

SCOTCH WORDS.

They speak in riddles north beyond the Tweed
The plain, pure English they can deftly read;
Yet when without the book they come to speak,
Their lingo seems half English and half Greek.

Their jaws are chafts; their hands, wames; their elbows closed, are neuks;
Their brow's not cut in slices, but in sheuchs;
Their armpits are their oxters; palms are loofs
Their men are chields; their timid fools are cuffs;

Their lads are callants and their women kimmers;
Good lasses dusty queens, and bad ones limmers;
They thole when they endure, scart when they scratch;
And when they give a sample it's a swatch.

In holding to fights, add a long palaver
Is nothing but a blether or a haver.
The room they call the butt, and that the ben;
And what they do not know they dinna ken.

On keen cold days they say the wind blaws snell,
And they have the words that Johnson could not spell,
And when they wipe their nose they dicht their byke;
As wapt'm, which means anything you like.

While some, though purely English, and well known,
Have yet a Scotch meaning of their own:—
To prig's to plead, bent down a thing in cost;
To cough's to purchase, and a cough's a hoast;
The crack is to converse; the lift's the sky;
And banes are said to greet when children cry.
They spier the guts; and when they yawn they gowst.
Deals with them is cleck; a flame's a lowe;
Their straw is straes; chaff cauf, and hollow howe;
A bittle means a few; muckle means big;
And a piece of crockery ware is called a pig.

Speaking of pigs—when Lady Delacour
Was on her celebrated Scottish tour,
One night she made her quarters at the Goose,
The head inn of a well known county town.
The chambermaid, in lighting her to bed,
Before whisdrawing, curtsied low, and said—

'This nicht is cauld my leddy, wad ye please,
To has a pig i' the bed to warm yer taes?'

'A pig in the bed to tease! What's that you say?
You are impertinent—away, away!'

'Me impident! no, mem—I meant nae harm,
But just the greybeard pig to keep ye warm.'

Insolent hussy, to confront me so!
This very instant shall your mistress know,
The bell—there's none, of course—go, send her here.

'My mistress, mem, I dinna need to fear;
In sooth, it was herse!' that bade me spier.
Nae insult, mem, we thoucht you would be gled,
On this cauld nicht, to has a pig i' the bed.'

'Stay, girl, your words are strangely out of place,
And yet I see no insult in your face,
Is it a custom in your country, then,
For ladies to have pigs in bed with them?'

'Oh, quite a custom wi' the gentles, mem—
Wi' gentle ladies, ay, and gentlemen;
And, trooth, if single, they wad saftly miss
Their hot pig on a cauld nicht like this.'

'I've seen strange countries—but this surely beats
Their rudest makeshifts for a warming-pan.
Suppose, my girl, I should adopt your plan,
You would not put the pig between the sheets?'

'Surely, my lady, and nae itherwhere,
Please, mem, ye'll find it do the maist guide there.'

'Fie, fie, 'twould dirty them, and if I keep
In fear of that, you know, I could not sleep.'

'Ye'll sleep far better, mem. Take my advice:
The nicht blaws snell—the sheets are cauld as ice;
I'll fetch ye up a fine, warm, cosy pig;
I'll mak' ye sae comfortable and trig,
Wi' coortains, blankets, every kind o' hap,
And warrant ye to sleep as sound's a tap.
As for the fylin' o' the sheets—dear me,
The pig's as clean outside as pig can be;
A weel-closed mouth's enough for ither folk,
But if you like, I'll put it in a poke.'

'But, Effie—that's your name, I think you said,
Do you yourself take a pig to bed?'

'Eh! na, mem, pigs are only for the great,
Wha lie in feather beds, and sit up late.
Feathers and pigs are no for puir riff-raff—
Me and my neighbour lassie lie on cauff.'

'What's that—a calf? If I your sense can gather,
You and the other lassie sleep together—
Two in a bed, and with the calf between;
That, I suppose, my girl, is what you mean?'

'Na, na, my lady—'od ye're jokin' noo—
We sleep thegether, that is very true—
But nocht between us; wi' cor class a' al,
Except our sarks, we lie upon the cauff.'

'Well, well, my girl! I am surprised to hear
Such barbarious customs—Effie, you may go;
As for the pig, I thank you, but—no, no—
He, ha! good night—excuse me if I laugh—
I'd rather be without both pig and calf.'

On the return of Lady Delacour,
She wrote a book about her northern tour,
Wherin the facts are graphically told
That Scottish gentlefolks, when nights are cold,
Take into bed fat pigs to keep them warm;
While common folk, who share their bed in halves—
Denied the richer comforts of the farm—
Can only warm their sheets with lean, cheap calves.

ROBERT LEIGHTON.

Mr. Billings on the Crow.

Next to the monkey, the crow has the most deviltry to spare. They are born very wild, but kan be tamed as eazy as the goat kan, but a tame crow is actually wuss than a sore thumb.

If there is eny thing about the house that they kant git into it is because the thing aint big enuff. I had rather watch a district school than one tame crow.—Crows live on what they can steal, and they will steal enny thing that aint tied down.

They are fond ov meat vittles, and are the first tew hold an inquest over a departed horse, or a still sheep. They are a fine bird to hunt, but a hard one tew kill; they can see you 2 miles first, and will smell a gun right through the side of a mountain.

They are not songsters, although they have a good voice to cultivate, but what they do sing they seem to understand thoroughly; long practiss has made them perfekt.

The crow is a tuff bird, and kan stand the beat like a blacksmith, and the cold like a stun wall.

They bild their nest among a tree, and lay twice, and both eggs would hatch out if they was laid in a snow bank. There aint no such thing as stopping a young crow.

They are always thin in flesh, and are like an injun rubber shew, poor inside and out.

They are not considered fine eating altho' I have read somewhere of biled crow, but still I never heard of the same man hankering for some biled crow more than wonst.

This essa on the crow is copied from natur and if it is true I aint tew blame for it, natur made the crow, I didn't, if I had I won'd have made her more honester and just tuff enough to make soop ov.

EVERLASTING FLOWERS.—It is said at Stirling Castle, Scotland, flowers are still in full health and vigor which were planted by Mary, Queen of Scots, three hundred years ago. The daffodil and polyanthus still survive the ruin of the parterre, spring up among weeds and grass, and contend for existence with plants of "baser quality." The peony will grow in the same spot for a thousand years, and well merits the name of "everlasting," and among woody plants some varieties of rose, even when subjected to neglect and ill-treatment, are exceedingly tenacious of life.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONESS REMEDY

IN CANADA.

MESSRS. Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq., Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once, which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, pain in the lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr. Lewis Joss plus. of the Distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees, British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

THIS all-possessing Great Indian Remedy wanted, and in broad and emphatic language, we can safely say may be replied upon to make a permanent cure of all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, Digestive Organs, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from Impurity of the Blood, excepting the third stage of Consumption. In the Western Country where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has indeed effected some of the most Marvellous Cures, ever recorded in the annels of Historical Medicine. Such being the case, in addition to its former renown and celebrity, we defy humanity to dispute the fact that this, the Great Shoshonees Remedy in connection with the Shoshonees Vegetable Restorative Pills, is the Remedy of Remedies of the 19th Century, and the greatest boon ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity.

SUGAR-COATED.

ARE a safe and reliable remedy in all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary people, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

CANCERS CURED!

By a new, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay is required, until the cure is complete. The moment a cancer is discovered, it should be cured, as it will cost less and is more speedily cured than when of longer standing, and there is nothing to gain, and everything to lose by delay. What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, eye-lid or elsewhere, or small wart or sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given to parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS.

Are you sick, bilious, and constipated? Do you need relief, when you read of remedies that are claimed to cure all the ills that flesh is heir to? Then why suffer from Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Jaundice, Headache, Colic, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Dropsy, Erysipelas, Scrofula, Ulcers, Humors, Tumors, Worms, Female Complaints, Gout, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Piles, Blotches, Eruptions, Fever, Ague, and all the numerous ailments that arise from impure blood, or a disordered condition of the stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys, or other vital organs? Ayer's Cathartic Pills will cure you. A solid outlay now and then in taking these Pills will save you many times the cost in doctors' bills, and make you feel better. Nothing else can do this. Every dose will benefit your health. Why not try them? Why not let them cure you? Why not let them relieve your friends and neighbors, who are suffering around you? Why not keep them by you, for use when needed? Why not, indeed, when you know that they are the best Cathartic Pill that can be made? Why not? Because you are prejudiced against them? Because you have been deceived by worthless pills, and don't believe any pill can be good? Because you think we want your money, and don't care whether you are cured or not? Because you think we are interested in your sickness? Because you think we are not? Because you think we are not? Because you think we are not

Poetry.

PARTING.

Take back your letters and lock of hair,
Treasured till now: 'tis your own request:
No mine, believe me, 'twill be to bear
The pang of obeying your behest.
It seems to me that in the days gone by,
We both of us vowed that our hearts were one;
Whatever may happen. I told no lie.
No your wish is mine, and pass unheed)

'Forgive you? Boy, what have I to forgive?
Knowing your mind, my mind to know,
This thing won't kill me, and you will live,
And another I fancy, will live alone.
You gave me a dream of happiness,
And you have the right to bid me wake:
Even though you route me to loneliness,
I owe you thanks for the sweet dream's sake.

Oh, child! Had I seen you dead at my feet
My life would have been one lasting moan
Losing the other heart that beat
In heaven-made unison with my own.
But now!—You have spared me the terrible dread
Of seeing my dearer self pass by,
And be you living or be you dead;
As a friend and only friend, save I.

I love you truly, and still believe
Your love for me was as mine for you;
I feel no hunger, nor do I grieve
That here was no transient so 'twas true.
Think not that, though we twain must part,
Your happiness parts itself from mine;
'Tis true that you give up an honest heart,
Yet in all good wishes 'tis ever thine.

And now for the last time, let me warn
Those who will fling true hearts away,
Sooner or later meet with scorn
From the very thing they have made their play
The easier thing for a man to bear
Whenever his dreams of love have fled,
Is to send back letters and locks of hair
Glad that his love is false,—not dead.

GOOD GIRLS.

There are many things peculiar to that class of women known as good girls, and some bordering slightly upon the mysterious. So far as their name goes in its indication of girlishness, it means very little; for they may be anywhere from sixteen to forty years old, and still be called girls—with only that never absent adjective prefix, good, which so qualifies the appellation as to set them apart from all other women, as a class by themselves of very uncertain age. Still this is a matter of the smallest consequence to them, and to those who have ought to do with them, because there is that about them, their acts, looks, words dress and general appearance, which scorns deception at the very moment it is deceiving you most flagrantly. So, nobody ever knows how old a good girl is, who has any right to feel a curiosity in the matter, and very few ever feel even the curiosity.

This similarity of doubt regarding age, however should never be allowed to confound good girls, with that other entirely distinct class, known as old maids. The latter differ from the former, as a class, in almost every essential particular. Old maids may unquestionably be, nay, often are, good girls; but good girls cannot be, and never are, old maids in the generic sense. The comprise in their ranks representatives from all classes, all ages, all conditions, and although a large majority of them are unmarried, it is by no means uncommon to find among them wives and mothers, who, besides, discharging all their manifold domestic duties faithfully, still find time to distinguish themselves among their single sisters for those acts of goodness which fairly entitle them to a high rank in the sisterhood. By all means, Place aux Dames, then, as all honor, for there worthy luminaries, who are large-hearted, strong-handed, clear-headed enough to beautify wedlock, and at the same time ennoble their own sex, as a sex.

Why good girls for the most part lose a life of single blessedness, has never been, and, we fear, will never be satisfactorily explained It is one of those special problems which grow more intricate with the lapse of time, and defy progressive enlightenment with even more subtlety than they once did stupid ignorance. With a thousand good qualities to one that is bad; with a modest grace of manner, speech and action; with faces beautiful with the radiant glow of charity, love, peace, long-suffering and good will to all, if not with that perfection of feature and delicacy of complexion which go to make up your pretty creatures, so courted, admired and flattered; with eyes that are always calmly, spiritually luminous and tender, alert and watchful in times of danger, sweetly pitying when best upon suffering, sympathetic with joy, but never lured with unholy passion, or glittering with unwomanly temper; with forms that tell of health, strength, endurance, but are still nobly developed and without the faintest hint of masculinity; with hands soft, white, warm and supple, gentle in their touch as the fall of a snow flake, but strong and tenacious where strength is needed; with feet that tread the ground firmly and lightly at once, that can step seemlessly in the presence of suffering and death, and still seem tireless, never counting the many miles they traverse in useful, friendly or benevolent quest; with affections true, loyal, tender and strong; with hearts large and grand, full of all noble emotions, full of a great yearning love for humanity; with souls pure as the breath of angels, white as the untrodden snow—with all this and more, there is a strange something in good girls that makes them seem undesirable as wives to the great mass of men. As sisters, as confidants as helpers, as nurses, in every other capacity they are invaluable—but they will not do for a life partnership.

After the assertion is made, it seems incomprehensible, until we remember the intense selfishness of men, and their stereotype ideas connected with family duties.—Young Brown wants a wife to be exceedingly domestic in all her traits. She must require no companionship but his own; and all the long day she must devote herself to every possible preparation for his reception when he returns from his business at night. Slippers, study-gown, and easy-chair, must be ready before the fire, her deft fingers must untwine his overcoat and hang away his hat, and then smooth his tangled hair and knit brow with gentle caressings; her rosy lips must kiss the perplexities of the day into a charmed forgetfulness; and after supper her voice must be ever so musical as the wailes through the stupid Congressional debates and heavy editorials of the ponderous daily, while the all-wearied Brown smother his utterances or unconsciously-uttered dreams himself into a state of profound peace, lulled by the sweet tones. In short, Brown's wife must be a household angel, whose life shall be devoted to his comfort and happiness.

Young Jones, on the other head, while he wants his wife to be as wholly devoted to him, requires a very different kind of devotion. His wife is to be a pretty little pet, whose sole duty it will be to keep herself bewitching all the time. She shall have servants without number; her tiny hands must never do any harder work than piano-playing; he will get his own slippers and light his own pipe and read his own paper, only she must not be out of his sight a moment, but be ready always to spring upon his knee at a nod, and twine her pliant little arms around his neck. Her shining hair must be always in reach of his caressing fingers, her sweet mouth always made up in a tempting pucker for his ardent kisses. He don't care what she does in his absence, if it is nothing that will spoil her head or wreary her or injure her complexion; but he will be very jealous of her and could bear terribly if you ever finds it treasons to be simply a good-natured, fascinating little pet.

Young Robinson, the club man and society man, casts his vexed countenance into a very superb mess as he listens to the romantic ideas of his friends. His wife is to be a distinguished belle in society, a devoted to fashion a woman of the world, in the largest sense of the term. She shall dress with exquisite taste and richness, and her jewels shall be regal. She shall shine resplendently at balls and parties; be sought after as an indispensable, in her sex; give the costliest and most magnificent entertainments and, in fact, lead the ton, and have a host of satellites revolving around her and following in her train—among which he will be one of the most insignificant. He won't mind that—bless you, no! He will play billiards and drink champagne at the club, and ogle the other pretty women at the opera, while she makes innumerable conquests elsewhere.

But none of these good fellows ever think of making good girls their wives; those fair and gentle Samaritans who are always going about to deeds of kindness. To search for life-companions in hospitals, in mission schools, in charitable institutions, among the poor and outcast, by the sick-bed and in the chamber of death, does not occur to them. Why should it, indeed? Yet it is in such places and amid such scenes that good girls are found always—and it is there that all those rare qualities which make them what they are, shine with a radiance like that of the soft sunshine which chases away the storm clouds and makes the world a fairy land.

It must be one of the happy dispensations of a beneficent Providence that good girls are thus left to work out their beautiful destinies alone; and as such, it would be regretful indeed for us to find fault with a condition which seems so strangely abnormal. Rather, since all of us, in a thousand ways, are beholden to them for kindnesses which none other could bestow so well, let us accept their fate with the same graciousness that they themselves do, happy in the thought that if their sweetness does not go to render married life more silent it should be, it is never wasted on the desert.

NOW.

BY REV. NEWMAN HALL.

Now! A short word; a shorter thing.—Soon uttered; sooner gone.

Now! A grain of sand on a boundless plain. A tiny ripple on a measureless ocean! Over that ocean we are sailing, but the only part part of it we possess is that on which our vessel at the moment floats. From the stern we look backwards and watch the ship's wake in the water; but how short a distance it reaches, and how soon every trace disappears! We see also some landmarks farther off, and then the horizon closes the view; but beyond, that ocean still rolls for, far away.—Memory contemplates the few years of our individual life; history shows us a dim outline of mountains; science tells us that further back out of sight, stretches that vast sea; reason assures that, like space, it hath no boundary; but all we we possess of it is represented by this small word—Now!—The past, for action, is ours no longer.—The future may never become present, and is not ours until it does. The only part of time we can use is this very moment.—Now.

But the multitudes waste what they actually possess in vain regrets for what they once had, or vain intentions respecting what is not yet their's. "Alas!" says one, "I have thrown away the choicest opportunities, and the best part of my life is lost! O, if those years might return, how differently would I now act!" Those years cannot return. But you have the present moment! Why add what you can to improve to the heap of lost opportunities which are now far beyond your reach?

A passenger comes hurrying into the railway depot. He is just too late, for the engine has sounded its whistle, and the cars are gliding rapidly out of sight. He looks after them in despair. He had important business to transact. Ruinous may be the consequences of delay. He sits down on his trunk, leaning his head upon his hand, and shakes it in vain regrets, gazes vacantly forward. But one! another train is at the platform, just about to start for the same destination. Other passengers have arrived, and are eagerly crowding in The bell rings. Again the whistle sounds; again the engine bears away its living freight; and starting up, our friend again bewails an opportunity lost! O, sit not down again despondingly! There is yet another chance. Throw not this away, too, but at once take your seat in the third train which now is preparing to follow the other two.

But should we never look regretfully after the past? Certainly; but for this purpose, that we may be stirred up to improve the present. Let us think about past sins we may repent anew. Let us meditate on former dangers that we may watch and pray against similar dangers anew. But let us not be so foolish as to lose what yet remains while poring over what is gone forever. Rouse thee, self-reproaching, desponding sinner! Thy guilt has been great, but thou canst not lessen it by merely regretting it. Bring it now to Christ, that he may pardon it! You cannot atone for the past, but you may improve the present. Often in by gone years you might have sought God in an "accepted time," and have rejoiced in a "day of salvation." Great is your guilt and great your folly in having lost such opportunities. Yes, think of this, and be ashamed. Think of this and mourn. But so think of it as not to add to that guilt and folly. So think of it as to set at once on the Divine word, "Behold, Now is the accepted time; behold, Now is the day of salvation."

It is said to be satisfactorily demonstrated that every time a wife models her husband she adds a wrinkle to her face. It is thought the announcement of this fact will have the most salutary effect, especially as it is understood that every time a wife smiles on her husband it will remove one of the old wrinkles.

OTTAWA TRAGEDY.

STARTLING REVELATIONS.

Whalen and Doyle on the Murder.

The following startling, although expected to come in some way, news, was received here on Saturday. This affords another link in the chain of circumstances that tend to fasten the murder on Whalen:—

OTTAWA, 24.

Mr. O'Reilly, district Crown attorney, continued the investigation in the examination case throughout the whole of to-day, before Mr. O'Gara, Police Magistrate.

The depositions of a number of witnesses were taken, their evidence it is understood, being chiefly directed against Doyle, who was to day formally charged as accessory before the fact to the murder. He thus being made a principal in the crime.

The enquiry was adjourned to the jail for the purpose of hearing the testimony of a man named Hess, who happens to be in jail at present on a simple charge of assault.

It may have been remarked that for some time past there have been hints of certain admissions which Whalen was said to have been overheard making to Doyle. The origin of the affair was as follows:—Doyle was confined in a certain cell in jail, and the day when Whalen was brought back he was placed in another cell close by in the same corridor. Detectives Cullen and Hess then took a position near at hand, and a slight noise attracting Whalen's attention, he called out, "Who's there?" Doyle, recognizing the voice, replied, "It is me, Jim." A conversation then ensued between them, during which, according to the evidence of the two witnesses, Whalen made admissions to Doyle which amount to a confession of the crime. The facts, as related by Cullen and Hess, are as follows:—

We went when the court adjourned at half-past five to the jail, and after the Governor and officials left the corridor on which Whalen and Doyle are confined, we took up our positions immediately outside the door forming the entrance to the corridor, and heard the following conversation:

Whalen said—Are you there, John?

Doyle said—Yes.

Whalen then said—I was nailed bloody tight to-day.

Doyle said—You don't say?

Whalen—Yes, by J——s; you don't know who's the informer.

Doyle—No.

Whalen—Alick Turner.

Doyle—No! (in a loud tone.)

Whalen—Yes, by Jesus Christ; I would'nt give sixpence for his carcass. There were boys there to-day that "spot him." I saw a great deal of them here from the country; from Gloucester and all round.

At this time from the other ward a voice called out to Whalen and asked him how did he get on to-day?

Whalen answered—Bloody bad. I was nailed very tight.

The voice answered—I am sorry to hear it.

Whalen then said—I had a nod from Slattery's brother to-day.

The voice again said—Is he in town?

Whalen said, yes. You keep as mute as a mouse here.

Whalen then spoke to Doyle and said—It I'll go bloody hard with me; I'll either swing or get to Penetentiary for life. I don't care; I'm prepared for the worst. That bugger Turner swore bloody hard against me. He swore we were all bloody Fenians. There were fourteen witnesses examined.—He swore that he was an Englishman.

Doyle replied—You're in a bad fix.

Whalen said—I don't care a damn; all I depended upon is in a good jury.

Doyle then asked him if he had a lawyer.

Whalen said—Yes, Buckley—He's not worth two sheets of paper. He's afraid of O'Reilly. O'Reilly's little finger is worth his whole carcass.

Doyle often said—What will happen to me? What will become of me? They can do nothing to me.

Whalen answered him, saying, that nothing would happen to him as they could prove nothing against him.

Doyle said—I wish you'd never done it, and I wish you never came near me that night.

Whalen said—I would not have come near you only I was drunk.

Doyle said—I am sorry James, you ever done it.

Whalen said—I don't care a damn; I am prepared for the worst, I'll either swing or go to the Penitentiary for life. I'd sooner swing than go to penitentiary for life. I wouldn't care a damn only for one thing.

Doyle asked—What's that?

Whalen said the old woman; the bloody gets will fall out of her.

Doyle said—Jim, I'm sorry for you; the whole world will know it.

Whalen said—Yes, I'm a great fellow.—I shot that fellow. Have you, your badge, here, and here I am myself, which makes three of us.

Doyle asked him what he said at the same time.

The witness turned round to Hess leaving his head to call attention to the word, and said—Whalen again repeated the same using these words—I shot him like a dog; you're here, I'm here; I'm a great fellow; my name will go down to posterity.

Doyle said—Jim, Jim, I am sorry for you.

Whalen said—I do not care a damn only for my poor mother.

Doyle said—Is she alive?

Whalen said—Yes, and added, my brother is in prison too.

Doyle asked—What for?

Whalen—Feniarism; for firing the police barrack in Tullough, Ireland. What a fine family my mother had! What a fine lot of boys! One thing they were fond of—Ireland. One was shot at the firing of the police barrack; one is in prison for the same, and I'm here.

Whalen then sang a couple of songs, and there was a long silence. He danced and whistled, and told Doyle about what Murphy and Enwright brought from Montreal here by Cullen.

Doyle asked him what for?

Whalen said—Feniarism. That b——r Turner, swore that Murphy was with me at McGee's, and that was a lie. John, I was in prison before for 18 months.

Doyle—What for?

Whalen—Feniarism.

Doyle—Where?

Whalen—Out of England.

Whalen then said, Buckley was before the court to-day. He told O'Reilly he didn't care a d——n for him. When he was giving them the names of the people in the gallery that night, he kept mine out.

Doyle said that was very good of him.

A long silence then ensued.

Doyle then called him, saying—I do not know what they'll do with me.

Whalen answered—You are all right, my boy. They can do nothing with you. They may keep you a week, or perhaps a fortnight. Life is sweet. I wish I was as safe as you.

Whalen said further—They have treated me step by step ever since I came into the country. Every bloody thing I have done they have traced it. It all came out in the court to-day. That O'Reilly is a bugger. I thought I'd faint when Turner came up, but I bore it up like a man. There was not the slightest sign on me.

Doyle then said—Ah, he's the last man I ever thought they'd bring up. So he'll get the reward. Whalen said—He will, but his evidence amounts to nothing. All he knows is what was said and done in Montreal; but what's to some is the worst. All I depend upon is a good jury.

Whalen said, During the time the above conversation occurred,—"John, you and me must quit telling about what you know. You understand these buggers might be listening around." Doyle—All right.

There was a long silence and a talk about indifferent matters. Then Doyle called to him and asked what would his poor wife and two children do.

Whalen said—There're all right; you'll get out in a few days. They have your pension if you're kept.

Doyle said—No, they'll lose it.

Whalen said—We are four married men.

Doyle—Who?

Whalen said—Enwright has three or four children; Murphy has two: you have two; I have none.

Doyle said—You are the best off.

Whalen said—Yes; the old woman can scratch for herself. I saved Cullen's life once; a fellow had him covered at 15 yards.

The following is a memorandum of a conversation held by Robert Hess with the prisoner Doyle on Monday, the 13th April:

On the night of the murder Whalen called to see him (Doyle) at the Russell House, and exhibited to him a revolver, and at the same time asked him to accompany him to the Parliament buildings to hear Mr. McGee make his last speech. He (Doyle) went out to the door of the Russell House with Whalen and Buckley; who was standing on the platform. Buckley asked Whalen on what bad kept him so long inside. In reply Whalen said, "Nothing particular," or something to that effect. Buckley and Whalen then left, walked on, and turned towards the Parliament buildings. That was the last he saw of Whalen until about half-past two o'clock in the morning, when there came a gentleman into the Russell House and called out that Mr. McGee was shot. When he, with the members, ran out he saw Whalen standing at the corner of the Russell House. Whalen asked them what was up. Doyle answered—D'Arcy McGee is shot. Whalen answered, saying, "that's nothing, I know that." Doyle remained at the corner for a few minutes with Whalen. He then left, walking towards Lower Town. Doyle went into the Russell House. He asked Hess what he would advise him to do, and Hess said—"I can't tell you what to do."

After these statements had been obtained, the enquiry was adjourned again to the magistrate's room. There were other witnesses examined, but it is considered advisable to withold their evidence at present. It is understood that the investigation will be resumed on Tuesday next.

It is believed that Quinn and Lawrence, arrested the day before yesterday, will be liberated to-morrow, should sufficient bail be offered, they to appear to give evidence when called upon, it not being considered that there is cause to commit them under the habeas corpus suspension act.

Mitchell, who was arrested about ten days ago, being then just from Toronto, was yesterday discharged on bail for his good behaviour for a year, and to appear whenever called upon to give evidence in the cases now pending. He was merely arrested on suspicion at the outset.

Patrick Buckley, the prisoner, now in jail, has been dismissed from his post in the House.

The authorities connected with the investigation are going out to-night on an expedition, which has for its object the verification of evidence already given with reference to the bearing of the fatal shot and the time necessary to pass from the positions occupied by different witnesses.

OTTAWA, April 24 (midnight)

The result of the firing experiment which was made half an hour ago showed that when Fraschette heard the shot on the night of the murder, Mr. McGee must have just got to his lodgings and the Buckleys about 75 yards from their house Macfarlane had just got about to Hope's store, corner of Elgin and Sparks street. The party who walked to-night in the direction of Buckley's house heard the shot fired at Mrs. Trotter's, but not very distinctly. It was also heard but not loudly by Macfarlane, who was present at the experiment, and walked at the same pace as he did after leaving Mr. McGee. All the parties who participated in the experiment accommodated their walk as nearly as possible to that of Mr. McGee and the others on the night of the murder. The revolver used was a Smith & Wesson, resembling that found on Whalen, but a size smaller. It was fired with half cartridge.

PROBABILITIES OF A RAID.

Respecting the chances of a Fenian invasion of this Province this season, the Globe's Ottawa correspondent on Saturday writes: "If I may digress I will do so to say that good authority for asserts that that invasion is a fixed fact, and that, although there has been a great deal of nonsense talked about Fenian cannon and small arms, yet it is still a fact there are sympathizers on the other side of the line who have offered very large sums to aid the project." In confirmation of this belief we give the following extract from a letter to the Kingston Whig dated Buffalo, April 14th: "It is mooted here that some combined movement of the Fenians against [illegible] Mr. McGee's murder, although a part of the programme, together with the destruction of other prominent men of the Dominion, was premature. The Fenians have been in a state of unusual activity for a long time, and from the secrecy and zeal with which they conduct their preparation for mischief, it is apparent that they intend to burn Canada in earnest and with a will—rapid determination to accomplish their devilish design. The boldness of the Fenians in the procession on Friday, and the ease with which they marshalled and drilled, was a matter of general remark. The arms, too, with a hundred battalions of them were supplied, several the latest breech-loading pattern. The people of Canada should be prepared."

Irish Emigration.

It is likely that the coming will witness emigration from Ireland at least equal if not superior to that of 1866. Of four large Atlantic steamers advertised to sail for America, one left for New York on the 20th ult., with three hundred passengers on board, and it was estimated that one thousand would leave by the three other steamers—if there should be sufficient accommodation for them. A correspondent writing to the N. Y. Herald says: "Queenstown was crowded with emigrants, and parties numbering from fifty to hundreds were to be met with on the throughfares leading to the termini of the great Southern and Western Railroad, and from the other railroad depots, en route to "the States." Nearly all of these emigrants are described as being between sixteen and twenty-five years old. The rush of emigration is likely to exceed that which followed two years ago. The futile attempt at insurrection made by the Fenians."

It may be asked is there anything being done at home to divert a little of this emigration to our New Dominion?

SINGULAR DREAM.—The Canadian Freeman relates the following: Palm Sunday—two days before the assassination—Mr. McGee spent with an esteemed friend in Ottawa—from the members of whose family we learn the particulars of what we are about to narrate. He dreamed went to Holy Communion in the morning at early Mass. During the forepart of the day he wrote letters to the Lord Mayo and Dr. Tupper, who is now in London. After dinner he retired to the library and had a short sleep. Upon returning to the family circle, he said he felt somewhat annoyed at a singular dream he had had. Upon the ladies asking him to repeat it he said: "I dreamt I was standing by the Falls of Niagara, and saw a boat containing two men sailing down the rapids, and approaching the brink of the cataract. Seeing their danger and apparent ignorance of it, I rushed forward to warn them. The boat turned round and proceeded up the rapids, and I went over into the gulf beneath." These are as near as possible, the words in which Mr. McGee told a dream which seems to have been a premonition of that death which soon followed. It certainly derives great significance from its awful fulfilment.

MR. MCGEE'S LITERARY LABORS.—The Ottawa Times says:—There is abundant evidence of the ceaseless industry of the late Hon. T. D. McGee in the magazines of the month. The "New Dominion," for April, contained his beautiful poem of "Prima Vista"; the "Catholic World" has other in print or in hand, a paper from his pen, which was forwarded but a short time ago; and "Stewart's Literary Quarterly Magazine," for April, contains an article on "The City of Colleges," which was revised under his own hand in the latter part of March; and all this, in addition to his laboring almost daily upon a work of no more importance, and destined, had he been spared, to occupy a more prominent place in the historic literature of our age. The latter will, no doubt, appear in due time, under the supervision of the editors selected to bring out his works.

MR. MCGEE'S WRITINGS.—The Montreal Gazette learns that Mrs. McGee has given authority to Mr. Chamberlain, M.P., Mr. T. K. Ramsay, and Mr. Geo. Murray, to edit and publish the lectures, speeches, &c., of her late husband. The publication, which will be of great public interest, will be for the benefit of the family. It will be, we understand, accompanied with a memoir of Mr. McGee's life, founded upon authentic data; and such historical notes as will connect and make consecutive the different pieces. The work will be published by subscription.

A BAR OF GOLD.—Mr. J. T. Bell of this town, exhibited this afternoon, at this office, a bar of gold, weighing 12 oz 9 dwt. 6 grs., value $250. This is the product of fourteen tons and a half of quartz from the Moira mine, lot 19, in the 5th concession of Madoc, and crushed at the works of Wallace & Co., (late Turley & Gilbert.) The rough amalgam was brought to Belleville on Friday morning, and given to Mr. Bell, Assayer, who smelted and refined the same. It is will not be the whole yield of the 14½ tons, as all of the mercury was not retorted. The average per ton is about $18.—Belleville Intelligencer.

OUR RAILWAY.—We are pleased to see that business for the season has been resumed on the way to and from the mines. Last week, the first train passed to Harwood; and the lake and river being clear of ice, the steamer left for its first load of ore on Monday. This was expected at Harwood on Tuesday night, and shortly afterwards at Cobourg wharf. The Company have now upwards of ten thousand tons of ore at the mines, waiting for transport; and we trust they may experience a good business season. The first shipments will be to Erie.—Cobourg World.

Cornwall, April 24.—The four men arrested by Dr. Allen last Sunday, on a charge of robbing Mr. Mattice's safe, turn out to be valuable prizes. The one calling himself Smith, turns out to be one E. Innis, who was one of the parties that robbed Lyall's office, in New York, some two or three years ago. There is a standing offer of $20,000 reward for his apprehension. Frederick H. Bamburgh, who here calls himself Belmont, is wanted for a large robbery of diamonds from a residence in Madison avenue, New York. The others are well known to the police, both in Canada and the United States.

A few days ago his Worship the Mayor received an anonomous letter, stating that a plot had been prepared to set fire to the drill shed on either Saturday or Monday night. The letter bore evidence of being genuine, and was written in such a way that his Worship felt it to be his duty not to neglect it. He therefore informed the military authorities who decided [illegible] to detail a [illegible] to watch the building. It was made to put it into execution. The matter was kept perfectly quiet, until about 9 o'clock on Saturday when a number of auxiliaries were sent for, were told of the plot, and were then armed and [illegible] around the drill shed. They remained on the watch all night, but no attempt was made. Last night another lot kept guard and with the same result. If any such plot were intended these full vests of Guy Fawkes must have deterred that the conspirators were lying in wait for them, or were, from some other cause, afraid to make the attempt. Recruiting is quiet, all is declared on the shed at Alpin, and if an incendiary should be caught it is questionable if he will be shielded with the formality of a writ before a court.—Toronto Telegraph.

MYSTERIOUS WARNING.

Those who have the best means of judging are of the opinion that we may experience some further trouble from the Fenian [illegible] here. It would [illegible] preparing for [illegible] the [illegible] have the effect of still further inflaming the public mind against them. However, it would seem as if some of them were determined to run their necks into the halter, and it is to be [illegible]

[illegible] LEAVING MONTREAL.

During two or three days of last week no less than 400 Irishmen, believed to be Fenians, left Montreal for the United States. The evidence and papers now in the hands of the government have revealed the extent of this diabolical organization, and in consequence not less than 400 of them have fled from Canada. The words of McGee during the election, that he had papers that would convict hundreds of them, now appear to have been too true. Many thought that he was only using this cry as an electioneering dodge, while others considered it true, and considered him innocent in his profession of loyalty, while he knew of so many traitors and sworn enemies, but did not give such information as would have dragged them to justice. The unwillingness of the government to punish those who were taken, together with the unwillingness that must have actuated Mr. McGee not to become an informer against his foolish and misguided countrymen may now be considered a sufficient excuse for his conduct; but late events show that his words were too true, and that so many had, if not now, not only sympathisers but real, live Fenians in Canada. As a general thing, these Fenians are a heedless, reckless set of ragamuffins who infest grog shops and saloons, who have no property in the country and consequently have nothing to lose except a very worthless and wretched existence.

SENATE HALL.

There is in connection with the late sad event and the career of those who have been engaged in it, a something that leads beyond Fenianism as the immediate cause of the assassination as well as the progress of Fenianism, and that is whiskey. A very intelligent Catholic once said, in speaking of the religious strife of Protestants and Catholics, that if there were fewer groggeries there would be less bigotry, for the greater part, if not all, the bitterness of religious strife originated in whiskey. "All the parties connected with the late tragedy were frequenters of the saloons of Montreal and Ottawa, and armed themselves for their fiendish work by the accursed bowl. But what do we think of those in high places who still retain their Bar in the Senate of the Dominion? We were led to believe that this relic of the devil was removed from our legislative halls, but now we learn only removed to another and perhaps more secret corner, whither honorable members can withdraw and enjoy their potations without fear or hindrance and with less chances of detection than heretofore. Whalen, too, could gain access to this unholy spot; he, too, could go and get his maddened fury increased at the Bar of the Senate of Canada. There, too, he could enter and along side of honorable members imbibe that fire that could deprive him of reason, remove fear and fit him for the awful deed of murder for which he is now being tried. But then we are told it is to be closed to such men in future. Can our worthy senators and members of the Commons of Canada so easily satisfy their consciences in this? Is that nuisance still to be retained for the use of legislators? Is law making such a foul, fiendish work that law makers must nerve themselves with the fire of hell to prepare themselves for it? If so the sooner we know this the better, that we may try to find out some new way of fitting our worthy senators and commoners for their terrible duties. Is it not a sad reflection that those men who above all others, should be a terror to evil doers and a praise to those who do well, are the great authors and abettors of crime, by refusing to remove from the reach of would-be murderers that vile stuff, and by setting the example of drunkenness to high places. Let us console ourselves, however, with the reflection that in future only honorable members and their intimate friends will be permitted to assemble in the Great Bar Room of the Dominion of Canada! Perhaps they will remove it when two or three more of their number have fallen by the shot of the assassin, maddened by their forty-rod death-shot whiskey, obtained at their own Bar. Much as we might bewail their loss, it such would drive the work-shop of Satan out of the Parliament buildings, the boon would not be purchased at too dear a rate.

LECROIX AND WHALEN.—The chief part of this testimony was taken with closed doors. During the investigation, Lecroix was taken to the jail to see if he could identify the man who fired the shot at Mr. McGee. He was shown some fifteen men in one room, but refused to pick out any one unless they put on their coats; they were in their shirt sleeves only when he was introduced. Lecroix was taken back as soon as they put on coats, and after looking carefully at the whole, he stepped forward to Whalen, and said he was the man. Some parties who were present state that after this the prisoner became violent and abusive in his language against the witness and the law. This evidence of Lecroix strengthened by the confessions overheard by Detective Cullen and the man Hughes, seems to leave no doubt of Whalen's guilt.

Latest intelligence from Ottawa, says that the Parliament buildings are being secured by double gratings in addition to the present ones, in consequence of information obtained at the late examination. This would lead us to suppose that another Guy Fawkes plot has leaked out. What diabolical intentions those miscreants must have had, but it is some satisfaction to know the examination into the foul crime caused by their own hands will be the means of frustrating their schemes.

FENIANS IN ENGLAND.—On the 22nd inst., a report gained currency in London, England, that two men were arrested at a late hour near the Servants gate of Buckingham Palace. The party were carrying a hamper which contained a gallon of liquid Phosphorus or Greek fire. They made a desperate resistance and were with difficulty secured, one of them, and those bearing the basket escaped.

WHAT NEXT?

The sad intelligence reaches us from Australia, by Atlantic Cable, that Prince Alfred, who is on a visit to Australia was shot at, and dangerously wounded by an Irishman named Farrell, who is a well-known Fenian. The Ball was not extracted for two days. It is asserted, however, that he is recovering. This sad news has aroused a general spirit of indignation against those Fenian gut throats and assassins. The feeling was stirred up on account of the Ottawa tragedy; but this last act of inhuman, cowardly treachery, and fiend-like manifestation of that vile association has stirred it up to an intensity that will not be easily or soon allayed. So long as they confined their actions to frothy, although boisterous boasting, or even resorted to open outbreaks, we could bear with them and give, at least some of them, a little credit for an apparent desire to liberate Ireland. But the midnight assassin, the perpetrators of such foul crimes as blowing up persons, by which they must have known that many innocent persons would suffer, and their cowardly raid into a country where their countrymen as well as their peculiar religious principles are more respected than in any other country under the sun, and now their last infamous act of endeavoring to take away the life of an innocent boy, his only crime being that he is of the Royal Family of England; all these acts tend to make Fenianism stink in the nostrils of thousands who once sympathised with their efforts for redress of Irish grievances. But when we add the latest telegram, that some wretches were discovered a few days since with a quantity of Greek Fire at the very entry to Buckingham Palace with the intent of destroying it, and with it our noble and generous Queen whom the world delights to honor for her many noble, generous and truly womanly qualities; this will stir up the nation to the very centre, and must assuredly bring down vengeance on those who may come within the power of the law. The course they are pursuing is sure to make them execrated everywhere, and it does indeed reveal their true character; bar room loafers, renegades and off-scouring of society; they resort to the dastardly practice of shooting men as they pass along unprotected. They concoct their schemes of murder in the low groggeries of the cities, and thence send out their demons to carry out their infernal designs. Such a cause can never prosper. But what can we think of the people who harbour them, who by their presence at their meetings, their harangues and their money, aid and encourage them? or rather what can such people now think of their own conduct? The people of the United States have encouraged all their plans and approved of their designs; they harangued them as they set forth on their bloody schemes of plunder and death in reference to Canada, and they received them with open arms on their return. They permit them to concoct their schemes of evil towards unoffending neighbors in their midst, and in not a few instances they try to palliate their part in the murder of Mr. McGee by endeavoring to attribute it to some private enmity. Perhaps they will now see the vileness of the association, and by the stern hand of force trample out such a villainous combination. The news of the shooting of Prince Alfred reveals the fact that there are Fenians wherever there are Irishmen; this is the only consolation we can arrive at, and that among Fenians there

ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITION.

The news by cable in another column brings us the agreeable intelligence that the expedition has been entirely successful and has resulted in the capture of the [illegible] the submission of the Emperor, [illegible] 60 guns. The [illegible] are now hope that [illegible] as is [illegible] receiving that [illegible] not be [illegible] that the [illegible] will now [illegible] that the Fenian [illegible] and a resting place [illegible] Canada torn up root and branch. This is [illegible] and [illegible] obtain.

[illegible] are [illegible] [illegible] have been taken. Heavy guns, shells and [illegible] are all taken, and his son is now in the hands of General Napier. It is not to be presumed that anything will be done to him, but the lesson taught him will cause him and the other chiefs of the country to show that respect to the demands of Great Britain that she has a right to expect.

SPRING SHOW.

The Spring Show took place on Saturday last. There was a large number of people in town, who, it would appear, took advantage of the day for [illegible] purposes, as [illegible] supplies, all that could be desired [illegible] and people generally appeared to think that there is not much advancement in this kind of stock.

HORSES.—The prizes for horses. The first prize was awarded to a horse owned by Mr. Isaac Gardener, Cavan; the 2nd to a bay horse owned by Mr. Wm. Ferguson, and the 3rd to a horse owned by Mr. John Fennessy.

BLOOD HORSES.—The Judges recommend a horse owned by Mr. A. F. Lee, and Sir Tatton owned by Mr. Thos. Downing.

DURHAM BULLS, AGED.—Mr. J. H. Walton exhibited a fine animal which took first prize. He says himself he will give you hops; Mr. J. Hall received the second prize.

TWO YEAR OLD DURHAMS.—The only one exhibited was one owned by Mr. H. Collins, of North Monaghan. He is certainly a fine looking animal. He weighs 1838 lbs, and as his owner assures us, is only 2 years old.

GRADE BULLS.—George Scott, first prize; Thos. Youmans, second prize.

COMPARATIVE STATISTICS, 1868.

	PETERBORO.	GUELPH.
Total Real Property...	$1,051,980	$1,220,366
Taxable Income.....	83,500	170,700
Taxable Personal Prop'y	182,300	154,780
Non-res. Real Property.	59,000	62,040
Total Real and Personal Property.....	1,267,090	1,555,785
Inhabitants	4,620	5,901

The most remarkable difference in the two towns are the items of Income and Personal Property. Guelph, with only 1281 inhabitants more, has an Income considerably more than double that of Peterboro, while Peterboro has $27,500 worth of Personal Property more than Guelph. Guelph has $298,093 more as a basis of taxation than Peterboro.

Upper School.—This institution seems to be in a very satisfactory state. At the late visit of Mr. Inspector Young, every pupil presented for advancement passed from the examination creditably, viz., 15 from Mr. McKaul's room; all Miss Carmichael's senior class; none of the junior class were examined; and the whole of the form Mr. Hardie's division who had not previously passed in examination. We hope those who have been thus promoted to the Grammar School will continue to improve and thus be able at all times to permit themselves honorably. The last time the class who have passed Mr. Young have not appeared to advantage at the public examinations. To know them in time may save some front losing the honors they have already acquired.

The vote on the By-law to provide $5,000 for the Mud Lake and Pigeon Creek bridges at 4 o'clock was:—

East Ward, for By-law	14,	against it	3.
North Ward, "	8,	"	6.
South Ward, "	6,	"	3.
Centre Ward, "	10,	"	1.

There was very little interest taken either for or against, as is evident from the number of votes polled, 51 in all. We trust, however, that both town and county will see that the Municipality of Ennismore provide a sum proportionate to its interest in the work. The people of Ennismore should not reap the entire profits at the expense of the town and county.

LITERARY CLUB.—In consequence of a resolution passed two weeks ago, the club will, this evening, take into consideration the advisability of changing it into a Mechanics' Institute. Every member is requested to be present. The subject for debate this evening is—"Was the character of Napoleon Bonaparte worthy of admiration?" Leaders—Messrs. Huggart and Mason. Members only admitted.

The Teacher's Association will meet on the first Saturday of May at the usual place. We have in some way lost the programme of the day's work. It will consist of exercises in Reading, Arithmetic, Geography, English Grammar and Algebra. We trust that there will be a full meeting.

The Leader says that the Senior Proprietor of the St. Catherines' Journal has received warning that unless the articles appearing in that paper, in reference to Fenians and Fenianism are drawn more mildly, his personal safety is in danger.

ROBBERY AT CORNWALL.—Mr. Mattice, of Cornwall, had his safe blown open on the 19th April and $600 extracted; the burglars were taken in the United States and brought back. Cornwall is finely situated for escape.

EMIGRATION.—The Quebec Mercury learns that there is every intimation of an extensive emigration to America this summer, via the St. Lawrence. The emigration from Norway alone will reach about $15,000.

The Rev. J. Farrell, R. C., of Lindsay, was presented with an address and $300 in cash, by his congregation on the occasion of his removal to take charge of the Parish of Kingston.

Mr. McGee's Lectures and speeches are about to be published by Messrs. T. K. Ramsay and George Murray, of Montreal. It is to be published by subscription.

We invite attention to the sale of silverware, to commence on Monday evening, in Henthorn's block. We are informed that there will be an extensive stock.

MURDER.—On Thursday night, at Mount Forest, a Dr. Dunbar killed a man named Chaloner with a blow of a crutch. They had been drinking.

The Rev. Mr. Pancheon, of England, arrived in Montreal on Saturday evening, and preached in the Wesleyan Methodist Church on Sunday.

Good Pictures of the Hon. Mr. McGee can be obtained at Mr. J. A. Hall's Photograph Gallery, Hunter street.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Monday, April 27th, 1868.

The Council met pursuant to adjourn ment.

Present—His worship the Mayor, Messrs. Reid, J. Dixon, Stevenson, Hartley, Hall, Gordon, Smith, St. Dochene, English, Clax ton and Burnham.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

Petitions from W. Sheridan and others, C. Ormond and others, and Thomas Carlile and others, asking for improvements on streets and side walks, were read and referred to the committee on streets and bridges.

A report from the Inspector of streets and bridges, submitting the amount required for the improvements recommended by the report of the street and bridge Committee, was read by the clerk and received.

Mr. Clarkson, auditor of the Finance Committee, read and submitted the following report:

The Finance committee beg leave to report that they have examined the following accounts and found them correct and recommend payment of the same:—

Adam Dobbin, filling tank, $8; Burring F. Grimm, $6.50; R. A. Morrow, side walks, $59.10; J. Rule, teaming, $8.; J. Martin, teaming, $8.; Wm. Thurston, $1.; H. Crean, $6.66; Enos Thompson, streets, $26.56; A. Jackson, $20.

Your committee do not recommend that one hundred dollars be granted to the Protestant Home, and another hundred on the first of July next.

With regard to the application of Messrs. Fitzgerald & Bolger, your committee cannot recommend the payment or grant on any other condition than those adopted by the Council last year.

Your committee find that an error has been made in selling the land belonging to the estate of the late Dr. Hay, and recommend that the sum of $14.67 be paid to the Trustee Mr. Dunlop.

Your committee also recommend the payment of Mr. Chambers claim of $2, for laying a side walk on Hunter street.

Your committee also recommend that in future when applications are made by persons erecting buildings, or claims for laying down platforms in front of their premises, that such allowance, if allowed, is only for the material necessary to make the platform the necessary width. The applicant to be at the other expenses connected with such platform.

(Signed) WILLIAM CLUXTON, Chairman.

The report was received and adopted.

Mr. Helm, as Chairman of the Street and Bridge Committee, submitted a report which was received.

Mr. Stevenson introduced a By-law to repeal By-law, No. 182, passed on the first day of May, 1863, appropriating $1,500 for the Harvey road, which was read a first time.

The By-law was read a second and third time and passed.

The report on Streets and Bridges was then brought up for discussion, and on motion of Mr. Stevenson, it was agreed to have four planks wide from Mr. Moffatt's shop, on the south side of the street, to the Catholic Church. Carried.

$60 were granted to grade Bethune street.

On motion of Mr. English, the Chief Constable was instructed to get the lires set on the hose cart.

On motion of Mr. Dickson, the Street Inspector was instructed to have Hunter street opened to Water street, and Water to Simcoe, and Simcoe to Mr. Burnham's Office. Mr. Carlisle was also instructed to have George street cleared from Brock to Charlotte street.

Messrs. Toole, Burnham, Kennedy, English, Doherty and Cluxton were appointed a Special Committee to consider Mr. Hall's application to enlarge the Town Hall and to report to this Council.

The Council adjourned for two weeks.

The Burleigh Road Settlement.

A correspondent in the county of Peterborough furnishes a few interesting details of the settlement of the Burleigh Road country:—"The settlement commenced about five years ago, and was attended with many hardships at the outset, the chief difficulty being the want of means of ingress and egress. A contract was let in 1861 for the construction of twenty miles of the road, but the portion made, up to 1865, was so imperfectly constructed, that it was frequently impassable for even men on horseback. This deficiency for some time retarded the settlement and discouraged those who had already ventured into the interior. In 1865, Mr. Carroll, Crown Land Agent, received instructions to commence at Burleigh Bridge and improve the road from that point North. Thereupon, twenty-three miles of good waggon road were completed, over which loads of a ton and upwards could be drawn. In 1866 eleven miles more were completed in a like manner at a moderate expense compared to similar works. The extension of the Bur eigh road five miles further North will carry it to the Monck road line, which runs nearly east and west. This junction render about sixty thousand acres of land, ranging from fair to good, accessible to settlement. There are about a hundred families in the Burleigh road settlement. It possesses a gristmill, two saw mills, four post offices, four good schools, together with stores, blacksmith shops, and the inevitable taverns. A neat frame church, Methodist, has been built, and a Presbyterian church is in progress of erection. The settlement has been organized into a municipality, and the Council has expended about $3,000 during the last two years in aid of schools, and in opening roads, the money being chiefly derivable from the sale of timber on the road allowance and the sale of non-resident lands for taxes. Up to the present no settler has abandoned his lot, and the whole settlement may be said to be a prosperous condition. Excellent crops are grown, for which the settlers obtain high prices at their own doors. The extensive lumbering operations carried on throughout the whole back country create good cash markets everywhere. By a liberal land policy and a judicious system of roads the whole region known as "the back country," where available for settlement, would be speedily occupied."—Globe.

TRIAL OF NOTMAN.—A despatch from Montreal states that the trial of Robert Notman on a charge of procuring Dr. Patton to administer certain noxious things to Margaret Galbraith to procure miscarriage commenced yesterday in the Queen's Bench. Dr. Patton, fearing exposure in this case, committed suicide by poison at the time the facts were disclosed. Margaret Galbraith, the young lady injured appeared to be nursing Dr. Patton in Notman's office last Dec. while she was pregnant and receiving medicine from him intended to procure miscarriage.—Witness was labouring under intense emotion, and frequently burst into tears.

To the Editor of the [illegible]

Sir,—My object in [illegible] columns is not for the purpose of [illegible] for the [illegible] but merely to [illegible] for [illegible] [illegible]:—Neither I nor any person with [illegible] his pecuniary [illegible] will [illegible] attempt to evince him of any error in any matter however [illegible] to his own mind, be infallible when [illegible] necessarily wrong. Indeed, I doubt if any one ever convinced him of a single error or got him to admit it, since he came to these parts thirty or forty years ago. A striking illustration of this occurred last year in the municipal council, and as it was an official act and as such was known in the township, I can, by charged with dragging private or personal matters into print. An unauthorized report of a council meeting containing statements intended to damage a respectable inhabitant, whom it is said Mr. Y. did not love very affectionately, of the township, appeared in the local papers. He was accused of this transaction but, of course, he denied it entirely, and although three other members of the council, all honorable and truthful men, corroborated their denial in writing, settling the charge on him, yet he persistently [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] it not, therefore, be about as easy to battle down the rock of Gibraltar as [illegible] to convince such a man of error? Again, as he in his note has not advanced any arguments I cannot reply them. My motto is not semper [illegible] cavendum, hence, in my opinion, to retire "saving for nothing" would be sound maxim. Nor do I refrain from personal abuse because I can find no more, places to sit, quite the reverse; but I do not wish to indulge in what is always stigmatized as the outburst of puny spleen. I consider such a display alike unworthy of myself or a respectable newspaper. I hope it will be a relief to him to know that this is not intended as a reply to his note, as he has to employ a person to write for the press, it may be something "material" to him.

However, as I have not merely a pecuniary interest in the township, but, I trust, one of a much higher nature, in the dissemination of the benefits of that noble system of education which I in common with others have been fervored in the Common and Grammar School, I desire to throw out a few suggestions to those who can be affected by reasoning.

Some say "the Grammar School is of no service to the County inasmuch as pupils from it cannot attend a school for town." This is not a fact; our argument for, sake of argument, that not a single pupil or teacher from the rural districts could ever attend the Grammar School, still it can be proved that the County is benefited by it in several most important ways. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] judge, that education coupled with religion tends to prevent crime. The town is the chief source of crime. That crime is purchased at the expense of the county; therefore, a good school in town that diminishes or prevents crime is undoubtedly a financial gain to the county, not to mention the infinite benefit to the criminals. Let us look at the would-be-arguments on the negative side of this question. Some persons still assert "The people of the county have no right to pay for a school in town when their children do not attend it." This argument proves the town's side, therefore [illegible] Let us apply it to the Common Schools as any man having property but no children, may do, thus: "I have no children to send to school therefore, I have no right to be taxed for other peoples children; let their parents tax themselves." Or take the analogous case of a man, who though he may have children, [illegible] school in the section for the property in another He may press the same argument, urging that he has no right to pay for the education of other people's children, since he pays tax already for his own in the section in which his children attend school. But this argument is alike fallacious in all these cases, as much as in reference to the Grammar as the Common Schools; or on the other hand if it is cogent or valid (which I dispute) in one case it is so in the other. I may merely adduce in proof of the fallacy of the above arguments against the Grammar or Common Schools, the broad general principle which lies at the foundation of civilized society, viz.: that what is for the good of the whole is for the good of each individual. Another absurd plea is sometimes heard, viz.: "That the people in the country have no right to pay for the education of rich men's children in town. Well, I consider this little short of a libel on the wealthy citizens of Peterboro, since I am credibly informed that that the leading men in town have repeatedly sought to be allowed to pay specially for their own children and throw the school open to outsiders gratis.

It might be shown by referring to ancient or modern history, did your space permit, that the vulgar cry against tax in general and school tax in particular, as tending to impoverish a nation or people or retard their progress in civilization, &c., is without the shadow of force. Greece and Rome in ancient, and Britain, United States, Prussia, &c., in modern times are examples showing that the most powerful, wealthy and influential nations have been the most heavily taxed. However, this is far from asserting that taxation per se will make a people or nation great, wealthy or enlightened. I have merely to add that I have touched in a desultory manner only a few of the numerous arguments in favor of the Grammar Schools.

NORTH MONAGHAN.

OTTAWA, April 24.—A man whose name the authorities withhold testified under oath yesterday as follows: I was in the employment of Patrick Buckley as driver in September last; I remember that during the week after the election of Dr. Grant I had a conversation with Buckley at his own door; we were talking about the business (celebrating); I said I knew a good many members of Parliament, and I believed I could get as much business as any other person; I named, amongst other of my patrons, Mr. McGee; Buckley then said Mr. McGee was a traitor, and if he went to the United States he would be killed; I remarked how could that be, he was a smart man and a good Irishman, and they could get no one again so good. He was a good man and a good pay too. Buckley then said, "You will see I don't believe he will see the last day of next session." He said there might be some from the United States to kill him, or some one from Montreal might come and do it. He also said that Mr. McGee was a mean man, that it was his fault that Father McMahon was in the Penitentiary. I did not think much about this conversation at the time, but after Mr. McGee's murder it came to my mind, and I remarked to Patrick Conway how soon Buckley's words had come true, telling him what Buckley had said about Mr. McGee. Conway then told me to keep quiet or I might get into trouble.

Buckley has been committed for trial at next assizes on a capital charge of being accessory before the fact to Mr. McGee's murder, and was consequently remove from the police station to jail.

TWO QUESTIONS EASILY ANSWERED.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25 cts. per box.

Severe sickness is often prevented by timely use of Colby's Pills.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and safe administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

MONTREAL HOUSE,

VERY IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

The subscriber has much pleasure in announcing to his numerous friends that his stock of Spring and summer Goods is now complete in every department, and that for quality, style and variety it cannot be surpassed in town, while in cheapness it cannot at all be equalled.

His Staple Goods were purchased before the late rise in Cottons, and are consequently over 30 per cent cheaper than they can now be purchased. It is his intention to give his customers the full benefit of this advantage, as he is offering these goods at a rather lower advance on cost than usual, and will continue to do so as long as they last.

In his stock will be found several cheap lots which were purchased at a bargain, and which will be offered much below their usual prices.

One lot of DRESS GOODS is offered at from 4½d to 9d per yard,

And a lot of first quality ALL WOOL CANADIAN TWEEDS is offered at from 3s to 3s 6d per yard. The 3s lot of these Tweeds cost 2s 6d to make them, and the 3s 6d lot were sold wholesale at 4s 6d per yard.

Good FACTORY COTTONS, we are selling at 4d, 5½d and 6½d per yard.

Good BLEACHED COTTONS, we are selling at 5½d, 6½d and 7½d per yard.

PRINTS, at 5d, 6½d and 7½d; the best ever seen at the money.

DRESS GOODS, in Lustres, Challies and Barages, at 9d, 1s and 1s 3d per yard—very pretty and good.

Dress MUSLINS, very good and pretty, at 7½d per yard.

PARASOLS—a large assortment, from 2s up.

LADIES' HATS AND BONNETS,

FLOWERS—New Style.

STRAW TRIMMINGS,

BUGLE TRIMMINGS, &c., &c.,

At about 25 per cent. lower than they are sold other places. We make it a point to sell our Millinery Goods at less than the customary profits.

Good Striped TICKINGS at 9d per yard,

Stripe SHIRTINGS, Blue and Brown Derrys, Straw TICKINGS, &c., &c., at very low prices.

SHAWLS—We are clearing out our Stock at cost price and under.

FANCY BONNET RIBBONS, we are selling out in cheap lots.

BELT BUCKLES selling off at cost and less than cost.

BLACK VEILS, we are selling off at almost any price.

Our reason for offering some of these things under Cost is that our stock of them is too large and we wish to reduce it.

We hope our friends will call and judge for themselves that we do not advertise what we cannot show.

CLOTHS.

We invite particular attention to our Stock of Cloths, which is one of the best assorted to be found.

Our CANADIAN TWEEDS at 3s and 3s 6d per yard, already mentioned as one of the cheap lots, every person should buy.

In FINER CLOTHS, also, we can suit any person who favors us, as our stock is so varied, and our rule is to sell on very small profits.

This department of our business is under the charge of MR. BAKEWELL, who is now so well known as a first-class Cutter, that it is needless to make any remark upon his ability.

READY-MADE CLOTHING.

We have now on hand one of the largest assortments in Town of Spring and Summer Clothing, which we are offering at very low prices.

CALL AND EXAMINE OUR STOCK WHETHER YOU PURCHASE OR NOT.

Gentlemen's Hats, Caps, Shirts, Gloves, Hosiery, Ties, Paper Collars and Cuffs in any quantity.

J. W. DUNNET.

[illegible] Village Incendiary Case.

It is said that [illegible] committed the foul deed, was one of his own children, a girl of [illegible] years of age.

He is pictured out on paper about the size of a four year old fat boy, with a pair of wings about as large as a bam blackbird's and is armed with a bow and arrows that might possibly answer to kill hundred bugs at four paces.

The little fellow has begged more guns with his wooden shooting irons, than all the powder and shot that has been hit out brags on.

I suppose that it is generally known that he skeers from under cover, at both long and short range, and is never seen to stand.

He has in his quiver innumerable arrows, few of them dipped in gunpowder tipped and feathered with good excuse, but most of them seem too trifling for he or she to [illegible] with, if I hadn't with my own eyes, noticed him at work with them, both male and female game, both scaling and flying, and seen the many dead shafts he has made.

I have been at some pains for the past few seasons two watch his manoeuvres where I have happened to be, and the following reckord is a faithful history of this little chap's bloody bizn:

Ben Gleason, aged 19 years, weight about 200 pounds, and a good eater, at work by the month for Former Brown, hoeing corn, received his death wound from a gurun belong to Rastus Tucker. Brown's hired girl, on the east Timber was learning to jump the rope down in the garden.

Kate Frothers, youngest daughter of I. S. Frothers Esq., who could play big on the pianner, and had studied Latin one quarter, was shot thro and thro by a paper of Stearns mixed Caps that Frank Fever sent her.

John Davis got his mutton cooked by a spit curl that was dangling on Angeline Brown's forehead.

Bill Weatherby, a dry goods clerk, died suddenly by getting in range or I or Roxy Matthew's sweetest smiles darted across the counter.

Sally Munson diseased without a struggle. Cause—Dick Foster's No. 6 patent leather boots and Calloway colonia.

Master David Munter, aged 12 years, parted this life in a district school house while sharpening little Labby Sherman's slate pencil.

Sam Squire, Butcher, wounded with a hoopskirt, got better, then was struck plumb dead by a false calf in the Bowery.

Lawrence Peters, aged 60, and for 30 years a intolerant bachelor, lived only an hour, in grate agony, after eating worm apple pie at Widow Stebbins'.

Matt Marshall, worth 250 thousand in 7.30's, was given up for ded, the arrow passing directly thro his heart, from Maggie Moore's tanker, but recovered instantly upon learning that Maggie's father was only worth seventy-five thousand.

Frank Munter, ensnared for life by a black Balmoral with a yellow stripe in it.

Tobitha Spencer, slightly tuff, had been shot at a hundred times and always miss, was finally fetched by the Revd. Purbush in his grate net, reading the 146th hymn, common meter.

Seth Perkins, tailor, was slain, goose in hand, by a pucker in the eye of Hanner Hemstitch's cambric needle.

Matilda Alabaster Jones, caught her death by a squeeze from the hand of Fairherbert Augustus Bolivar, only son of Duke Moses Bolivar. The squeeze took place last Friday.

Jack Tinder, killed instantly at Saratoga, on the 15th of last August by 6 shots at once from the eyes of Jane Smith and her Adam Tidy.

Spencer Richards was wantonly murdered by a chance shot in a crowd, from an opera glass.

A Loafer's Soliloquy.

"I wish I knew where to get a cent, I do!—Blast it' I don't emigrate to Madoc, to dig gold. Money's scarcer than wit: can't live by neither—at least I can't. Sold the last old shirt, pawned my boots for three cents and went home as rich as a lord.

I told my landlady I had a hundred thousand dollars, and wanted the best room in the house. Insulted me by saying the attic was too good for me.

I'm an injured individual. Society persecutes me. I don't do society no harm as I knows on. I don't rob widder's houses—don't know widder's. I don't put the bottle to my neighbor's lips. I sin't got no neighbor's; and the fact is I don't owe any bottles—couldn't tell 'em if I did.

I'm an innocent man. Nobody can look me in the face and say I ever hurt 'em—nobody; and yet I haven't got a roof to lay my head into. My old landlady rated me—why? I couldn't pay, and left. Cause why? sin't it better to dwell in the corner of a house top than with a brawling woman in a wide house? But I sin't got a house top; and if I had a corner it wouldn't be safe, would it?

I'm a dead'rit man. I'd go to work if it wasn't for my excessive benevolence. I'm afeared of taking the bread out of somebody's mouth. Besides, wisdom's the principal thing; don't the good book say so? What's money to wisdom? Ain't I studying character? If a man kicks me because I can't pay for my liquor, ain't I getting understanding? sin't it a lesson in human nature? I'm told the world owes me a living. When is it going to pay—I wonder. I'm tired waiting."

MINISTERIAL SUPPORT.—Dr. Guthrie in a late speech, said, "I think all ministers are underpaid. I am not one now, and am free to say so. I hold that doctrine, and have learnt it from bitter experience—all underpaid, every one of them. I was stating this to a Free Churchman, who said, 'Oh, but ministers should not be rich men.' 'My good fellow,' said I, 'so more should any other body.' I do not want ministers to be rich, but to be delivered from the cares and the nightmare and the distress of poverty. I want a man to be able to walk the streets of the town in which he lives, and not be compelled to jark round a corner when he sees the butcher or the baker whose account is not paid. I asked my friend, 'Do you think the prayer of Augur was made only for ministers—'Give me neither riches nor poverty?' I tell you more, that I believe money would be of more use in the hands of ministers than of some other people."

A kiss on the forehead denotes respect and admiration: on the cheek, friendship; on the lips love. The young men of our acquaintance have not much "respect" for young ladies.

At a recent railroad celebration the following sentiment was given: "Our mothers—the only faithful trackers who never misplaced a switch.

The most sentimental engrain yet known is said to woman's eyes swimming in tears.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

IN CANADA.

MESSRS. Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq. Willington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once, which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

TREAT THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr. Lewis Jacobus, of the Distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees, British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

THIS all-possessing Great Indian Remedy is wanted, and in broad and emphatic language, we can safely say may be replied upon to make a permanent cure of all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, Digestive Organs, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurity of the Blood, excepting the third stage of Consumption. In the Western Country where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has indeed effected some of the most Marvellous Cures, ever recorded in the annals of Historical Medicine. Such being the case, in addition to its former renown and celebrity, we defy humanity to dispute the fact that this, the Great Shoshonees Remedy in connection with the Shoshonees Vegetable Restorative Pills, is the Remedy of Remedies of the 19th Century, and the greatest boon ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity.

SUGAR-COATED.

ARE a safe and reliable remedy in all disease of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary people, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

CANCERS CURED!

By a new, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay is required, until the cure is complete. The moment a cancer is discovered, it should be cured, as it will cost less and is more speedily cured than when of longer standing, and there is nothing to gain, and everything to lose by delay. What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, eye-lid or elsewhere, or small wart or sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given to parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. AYER'S Sarsaparilla

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

And for the speedy cure of the following complaints:

[illegible]

J. C. Ayer & Co. Gents: I find it my duty to inform you of the speedy cure of my wife by your Sarsaparilla. She had been afflicted for a long time with a humor of the blood, which finally settled in her limbs, and for three years she was unable to walk a step. She was under the care of two physicians, and took a large amount of their medicine, but received no benefit. I was induced to try your Sarsaparilla, and procured three bottles. Before she had taken the contents of one bottle she found relief, and by the time she had taken three bottles she was able to walk about the house. She has now taken five bottles, and is entirely cured. She has not been able to do her housework for three years before taking your medicine. Her case was pronounced by physicians and others who knew her, to be a confirmed case of scrofula. I am a farmer, and have a large family to support, and consider your Sarsaparilla worth its weight in gold to me. Yours truly, ALFRED B. TALLEY.

St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworms, Sore Eyes, Scurvy.

Dr. Robert H. Proctor writes from Salem, N. Y., May 3rd, 1865, which is but one of many we receive from all parts of the country, to prove the wonderful curative power of this Sarsaparilla in the cure of the above complaints.

Leucorrhœa or Whites, Uterine Obstructions, Ulceration of the Uterus, Female Weakness, Barrenness, Sterility or Unnatural Barrenness, Sudden or Unrelieved Suppressions, Painful Menstruation, and Incipient Consumption.

Dr. J. S. Cheesman of New York City, writes: "I am willing to bear testimony to the wonderful virtues of your Sarsaparilla in the cure of diseases of the uterus and ovaries. I have used it in my practice for many years, and have never found anything to equal it as a remedy for the class of diseases for which it is recommended. I have cured many patients with it, who had come to me with their health entirely broken down by the use of mercury, and who had been drugged for years by quacks and professional bunglers, and who were troubled with all the evils that result from the use of that deadly poison, and I have never failed to cure them when their vitality was sufficient to warrant a reasonable hope of life. I have cured many cases of Female Weakness, Irregularities, Prolapsus Uteri, Leucorrhœa or Whites, Ulceration of the Uterus, Barrenness, Sterility, Painful Menstruation, and Incipient Consumption, with your Sarsaparilla, when all other remedies had failed, and I do not hesitate to say that it is the most reliable remedy for these complaints that I have ever used in my practice. I have used it in my own family, and it has never failed to relieve the most severe headache in a few minutes, and in a few days to restore the general health to a perfect condition. I have no hesitation in pronouncing it the best blood purifier that has ever been introduced to the public, and I feel confident that all who use it will be satisfied with its virtues. Yours truly, ALFRED B. TALLEY.

Syphilitic and Mercurial Diseases.

Dr. J. C. Ayer: Sir, I have been afflicted with a painful disease for a long time, which baffled the skill of physicians, and grew to me to quite as full the worst I ever had, until I tried your Sarsaparilla. Four bottles cured me to two months, and restored me to good health so much that I am the better [illegible] I was considered. I think it a wonderful medicine. A. FRASER.

John T. Goodsell, of St. Louis, writes: "I have been afflicted for years with an affection of the Liver, which destroyed my health. I tried every thing, and every thing failed to relieve me; and I have been a living skeleton for some years from no other cause than the disease of the Liver. My beloved pastor, the Rev. Dr. Bugg, advised me to try your Sarsaparilla, because he said he knew you, and any thing you made was worth trying. I have taken but one bottle of it, and feel as well as ever I did in my life. I am to me a new man of me. I feel young again. No one but God can tell me how I feel. I thank him for it."

Scirrhous Cancer Tumors, Enlargements, Ulcerations, Caries and Exfoliations of the Bones.

A great variety of cases have been reported to us where cures of them formidable complaints have resulted from the use of this remedy, but our space here will not admit them. Some of these may be found in our American Almanac, which the agents below named are pleased to furnish gratis to all who call for them.

Dyspepsia, Heart Disease, Pile, Epilepsy, Melancholy, Neuralgia

Many remarkable cures of these affections have been made by the alterative power of this medicine. It stimulates the vital functions into vigorous action, and thus overcomes disorders which would be supposed beyond its reach. Such a remedy has long been required by the physicians of the people, and we are confident that this will do for them all that medicine can do.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the Relief of Consumptive Patients in Advanced Stages of the Disease.

This is a remedy so universally known to surpass any other for the cure of throat and lung complaints, that it is useless here to publish the evidences of its virtues. Its unrivalled excellence for coughs and colds, and its truly wonderful cures of pulmonary disease, have made it known throughout the civilized nations of the earth. Few are the communities, or even families, among them who have not some personal experience of its efficacy, or some living trophy to their medical skill in the relief of the subtle and dangerous disorders of the throat and lungs. As all know the deceitful fatality of these diseases, and as they know, too, the efficacy of this remedy, we need not do more than to assure them that it has now all the virtues that it did have when making the cures which have won so strongly upon the confidence of mankind.

Poetry.

The following stanzas, headed "The Exile's Devotion," which were written, it is said, after Mr. McGee's first arrival on this continent, may be taken as a key to the spirit that characterizes all his patriotic songs:—

If I forswear the art divine
Which deifies the dead—
What comfort then can I call mine,
What solace seek instead?
For from my birth our country's fame
Was life to me and love,
And for each loyal Irish name,
Some garland still I wove.

I'd rather be the bird that sings
Above the martyr's grave,
Than fold in fortune's cage my wings
And feel my soul a slave:
I'd rather turn one simple verse
True to the Gaelic ear,
Than sapphic odes I might rehearse
With Senates listening near.

O, native land, dost ever mark
When the world's din is drowned,
Betwixt the daylight and the dark,
A wandering, solemn sound,
That on the western wind is borne
Across the dewy breast?
It is the voice of those who mourn
For thee, far in the west!

For them and their I oft essay
Your ancient art of song
And often sadly turn away,
Deeming my rashness wrong:
For well I ween, a loving will
Is all the art I own,
Ah, me! could love suffice for skill,
What triumphs I had known!

My native land, my native land,
Live in my memory still!
Break on my brain, ye surges grand,
Stunt up, mist covered hill!
Still in the mirror of the mind
The land I love I see.
Would I could fly on the western wind,
My native land, to thee!

Selections.

Mr. McGee's Adventures in 1848.

After the secession of the Young Ireland party from Conciliation Hall, in 1846, under the leadership of the late Mr. Smith O'Brien, the confederation was established, and at all its meetings McGee was one of the most forcible and prominent speakers. He was not a favourite with many of the leading spirits of the party with whom he was associated; but he and Charles Gavan Duffy, also those two conspicuously figured as a statesman in Australia, were always the fastest friends, and carried on with each other a friendly correspondence up to the time of his death. When the British Government suspended the Habeas Corpus Act in 1848, it was resolved at a meeting of the Executive Council held at their rooms in D'Oliver street, that this act of despotism should be resisted by force of arms, and for that purpose an appeal should be made to the country, and the prominent leaders sent into those districts where their influence with the peasantry was greatest. According to this arrangement, the late Smith O'Brien, the late Colonel Dobeny, and the late John B. Dillon, the late Gen. Meagher, Richard O'Gorman, and others, left Dublin and proceeded to their assigned localities; but McGee was charged with bringing over from Glasgow an expedition which had been organized and armed in that city. Descriptions of the leaders were published in the Hue and Cry—a sort of private police gazette—and rewards offered for their apprehension. The country was swarming with detectives; the railway depots were closely watched, and the stage coach lines placed under strict police scrutiny. The proclamation of the suspension of the Habeas Corpus Act was made in Dublin on a Sunday morning in July 1848, but Mr. McGee departed suddenly from the city on Saturday evening and arrived in Londonderry on the following morning, where he met a friend, as he was taking his matutinal walk upon the historic walls of the maiden city. The meeting occurred on a much frequented spot of this very public promenade—it was exactly over Bishop's gate—McGee placed his finger on his lip, which his friend at once understood; no name was mentioned, and they walked passed Walker's monument, out of Butcher's gate, through that suburb of Derry called the "bog side" into the country and up on the green hills which look upon fair Lough Swilly, where Wolfe Tone was captured, and upon the mountains of gray Donishowen.

"Where coward or traitor there never was none."

Mr. McGee briefly explained the proceedings of the previous forty-eight hours, the plan of action, and the duty to which he was destined. The assizes, which were about to commence the next day in Derry, brought many professional men from Dublin to the city, and it was therefore deemed prudent not to return to his hotel, where he stayed under the name of Doyle until night had cast her shadows athwart the waters of the Foyle. The evening was spent in McGee's bedroom, where future prospects of success were enthusiastically discussed. His companion wrote a letter to his wife in Dublin, simply stating that Mr. Doyle had passed through Derry, and was in good health and spirits. He was then sent of money, but expected to find a draft on his arrival in Glasgow, for which place he left by steamer the next evening. When he arrived in Glasgow he met his friends, and put up at a hotel to await some intelligence of South O'Brien's movements, and consequently no expedition to Ireland. When he had been there a fortnight he was discovered by the detectives, and a warrant was being made out for his arrest, when intelligence reached the ears of Glendwyer Scott, who was a wealthy citizen and a prominent member of the Repeal Association. He hastened to inform Mr. McGee of his danger, supplied him with funds, and took the next train for Newcastle-on-Tyne. There within a few miles of that place, they returned towards Glasgow, got out at a way station, and took the stage coach for a little port on the Scottish coast where a steamer plies daily to Belfast, and makes the trip in about three hours and a half. This was lucky, for the police had hired a special train, passed them on the way, and were awaiting Mr. McGee at the Newcastle station. There was another passenger in the coach, but to his great horror that passenger was no other than the renowned Rev. Tresham Gregg, who was the great champion of the Orange and Government party in Ireland. Mr. McGee thought he would be delivered over by the reverend loyalist to the first policemen they should meet. But he was agreeably disappointed; Tresham did not take the slightest notice of him, and soon himself and his travelling carpet bag were stowed away on the steamboat. He arrived in Belfast about midnight, walked to the station of the Ulster railway, took the train for Armagh, which he reached about daylight. From Armagh he proceeded to Omagh, in the County Tyrone, by jaunting-car thence to Enniskillen, and from that to Sligo, where the Ribbon men took charge of him, and concealed him during a fortnight at the base of the Benbulben Mountain. Here he remained in perfect security until he commenced with his friends in Glasgow, and Tuesday were forwarded him to enable him to escape from the country. His object was to reach Donegal or Derry, and get away by some ship leaving either of those ports for America. He moved from Benbulben, first to Donegal, and was concealed in the town and in the very house where Sir Thomas Bake, of Menio Castle, County Galway, was then stationed as one of Her Majesty's "Resident Magistrates." He remained there a week, and Sir Thomas got information of the fact on the very day he took his departure. The worthy Baronet gave close pursuit, and traced him up to Derry, where the late Bishop Mellon and some of his clergy rendered him effectual aid. He was provided with a clerical suit of clothes and a breviary. In the garb of a Catholic priest he was passed through the enemy's lines and put on board a ship anchored off Moville at the mouth of the Foyle, called the "Shamrock," and commanded by Captain John Moore, of Galway. He was several days at sea before he let the Captain know his real character, but his confidence was not misplaced. The Captain treated him hospitably, and brought him safely to New York.

YOUNG LADIES.

In these days, when so much is said both justly and unjustly in regard to the useless education and frivolous lives of many of our young women, the careful and judicious mother, in every station of life, will think seriously of how she can best train her young daughters to a practical knowledge of those things which will most contribute to their future usefulness and happiness. Mental and moral education, knowledge of books and accomplishments, of household duties, and of the world at large, are to be combined in such proportions that circumstances render suitable and possible. A young girl may have a special taste or capacity which she should be encouraged to develope, but not to the exclusion of all other branches of education.—And though, while under the mother's eye, perfectness may not be attained in any department, a wise training of the powers will tend toward a harmonious and happy development of character and abilities in after life, as circumstances shall require.—No mother, therefore, should excuse herself from giving her daughter a suitable instruction in those household duties which so much affect the comfort of a family.—Whatever position in society she may occupy, the knowledge thus gained, and the unperceptible influence on the character, not merely of the knowledge itself, but of the early impressions of its importance, are genuinely valuable. It is by no means necessary to keep your daughter in the kitchen half the time to accomplish these results; nor is it essential that she should be skilled on her marriage day to every kind of cookery, and be able to get up a first-class dinner on short notice; this should not be expected any more than that she should go to the black-board and unerringly demonstrate the 47th proposition of Euclid three or four years after she had graduated at some excellent seminary. If the elements of domestic knowledge are thoroughly mastered, and a suitable amount of practice given to important details, the intelligent girl will know how to order her household aright when the proper time comes, and to put her own hand to labour if there be occasion.

In regard to this matter, mothers who are themselves genuinely interested in the proper management of their own households, will find but little trouble if they would lead themselves of the natural imitativeness of children. The little ones like to be useful if they see others about them useful; they like to follow the mother about the house under pretence of helping, though often hindering her; they enjoy using their little hands about something that older people do; they like, generally, to work, until false notions are instilled into their minds. We know a little girl of six years—and there are many others in quiet homes all over the country who exhibit similar tastes—who already bids fair to be the nicest little housekeeper possible. Ever since she has been old enough to understand her mission—three years at least!—she has been eager to do what she fancies is useful to others. She takes her tiny duster and flourishes it over the chairs and sofas with positive results. After breakfast, she demurely gathers up the teaspoons from the table, and thinks it very nice to wipe them on the soft cloth after they are washed; nothing suits her better than to make some mince pies, and have them actually put upon the dinner-table; with her little broom she forestalls the servant, and sweeps down the front steps before breakfast in the morning. She puts a particular room in order every day, and quite of her own accord, has assumed so much the care of her father's wardrobe that her mother will gradually be supplanted in that duty. "Papa, you've put on the wrong cravat," she seriously says some morning; "that's your best one." She reminds him to put on a clean collar and wristbands; says: "Why, papa, you haven't brushed your coat," and herself seizes his beaver and plies the brush. She seems to consider herself responsible for his neat appearance. Almost all the little girls delight to have some household duty committed to their care; and if the disposition should be fostered, instead of being discouraged, as it often is, on the ground that they can not do the thing so well as an older person, they would, with rare exceptions, grow up with sufficient knowledge of, and interest in, those home matters about which, nowadays, there is so much complaint that young ladies know so little and care less.

THE FIRST WEDDING.

BY A DISTANT RELATIVE.

A great many years ago—long before it had entered into the mind of man to build the Tower of Babel, or lay out the city of Buffalo, or do many other foolish and wicked things—there dwelt in a distant land a gentleman called Adam, whose surname was Firstman, who became enamoured of a beautiful young lady known as Eve B. Guiled. His attentions appear to have been accepted and reciprocated by the young lady, and she became convinced that he was "the only man who she could ever love," if we may judge by the following communication which she made to John Milton, who followed the rather singular vocation of advertising things lost and found upon her Father's estate; "Confirmed then I resolved Adam shall share with me in bliss or woe; so dear I love him, that with him all death I could endure, without him live no life."

Thus being equivalent to the modest declaration that the lady is willing that her lover should begin to "pay her board," arrangements were immediately made to have the union consummated, and in the absence of any official clergyman, the ceremony was performed in the most simple and unostentatious manner, in the beautiful garden of Eden. The auspicious moment having arrived, the groom took the white and little hand of his bride, an ordained even by a "plain gold ring," and, affectionately, imprinting upon it a kiss, reverently said: "This is now bone of my bone, flesh of my flesh, therefore shall a man leave his father and mother and cleave to his wife, and they shall be one flesh." No cards. Thus was joined in holy bands of wedlock, the first couple of which we have any knowledge. There was no "retained, spectacled" father-in-law, no interested mother-in-law, with her legendary smelling-bottle, no dear unmarried aunt present.

Nor was the ubiquitous "Jenkins" there to "write up the affair" so the readers of the Daily Post Diurnus could not take in, with their coffee and cakes, next morning, a detailed account of what was done, and said, and worn, at the wedding, much to the regret, doubtless, of the jolly Post Diurnus. But Jenkins had he been there would have found it difficult to get up a sensation article, for there was an entire absence of all obtrusive display and reckless extravagance upon the occasion, refreshing to contemplate. The outfit of the groom was plain and simple, perhaps the most noticeable thing about it being the absence of the "dress coat," prescribed on such occasions by "our best society." The bridal costume was marked by perfect simplicity and the absence of all extravagance upon the occasion, refreshing to contemplate. There must have been something very becoming in the costume, as certain ladies in fashionable life, at the present day, imitate it as closely as possible, when in "full dress."

Dispensing with the practice now so prevalent, of indulging in a wedding tour, and not caring to publicly proclaim themselves as newly-married by the occupation of the bridal chambers in the hotels and on steam-cars, the happy couple settle quietly down to enjoy the cares of married life in the Garden of Eden, and were noted for their plain and unpretending manner in living. They kept no carriage, hired no opera-box, gave no costly entertainments, but contented themselves with the simple, inexpensive and satisfactory pleasures of enjoyment incident to their circumstances and surroundings. Adam was a good husband; he spent his evenings (and a good many of his days) at home; he had no business engagements "down street" after dark, nor did he belong to a club. He spent his evenings at house with his wife, whom he never humiliated by coming home late o'nights with a "buck in his hat" and a very ambiguous dialect. He did not even "colour a meerschaum," but retained in his cheeks the color which she had been transmitted in deeper hue to the bowl of the pipe. His sleep was undisturbed by the effects of dissipation or the nightmares of the stock market; hence it was calm and refreshing. Undoubtedly he was an early riser, and loved "the dewy morn," as we are sure he did the gentle Eve. Eve was, doubtless, a very beautiful woman. Milton testifies that "grace was in her steps, heaven in her eyes, in every gesture dignity and love." She deserved, if any of her sex ever did, the credit of caring little for the blandishments of dress. Her tastes and habits were eminently domestic, and for her in train there was no place like home.

Her entrements were few; she cared little for opera or ball, but she probably attended matinees of nature's songsters in the open air, where ushers, programmes and reserved seats were unknown, and it is not unlikely that she frequently accompanied Adam to see the menagerie or collection of animals in the garden. We know that Adam went, for the Scriptures tell us upon one occasion he called the animals names.

Eve, so far as we know, spent little time and money in "shopping," and it is not probable that she had ever heard of Stewarts', the Mecca of American women. She never sent Adam to a restaurant for his meals on Mondays because they were "washing days," nor made his life miserable by reason of a semi-annual "house-cleaning." She was not a beatless woman of the world, nor did she ever indulge in gossip or scandal; she had no affinities with Mrs. Grundy and knitted spirits, and never troubled herself about the ownership of any "extra pair of stockings" dangling from her neighbour's clothes line. Eve was frugal, contented and happy, moving serenely in first circles, and undoubtedly, Adam loved her devotedly. Mr. Milton who appeared to have witnessed the family highly intimated as much, and we have no doubt that he knew. We regret to add that misfortune eventually came upon this happy family. Eve unfortunately became involved in a transaction to front—apples, principally—in which Adam was involved, and their property, including the "homestead," passed out of their possession, and they were obliged to seek a residence elsewhere. From this time we know little about them, except that Adam, by careful attention to his diet, managed to live to the age of nine hundred and thirty, and died in the prime of manhood, his life being shortened, doubtless, materially by the loss of his property. Which Eve survived him or deceased first, we cannot say, but presume she did.

THE BRITISH ARMY.

A writer in the Monitor de Soir gives the following description of the English, Scotch and Irish soldiers of the British army:—

"The Englishman, properly so-called, has but little taste for the profession of arms; but he soon gets into the habit; and for the Englishman above all others, habit soon becomes a second nature. Once drilled and instructed, he does admirably whatever he does. He marches with perfect regularity, almost like an automaton; and he manœuvers with wonderful precision. As a marksman he is astonishing—true, powder is abundantly supplied to him for practice. He obeys with remarkable punctuality; he is actually nailed to the post where he is put; he never stirs from it. With respect to intrepidity—that is, the courage of remaining stationary, he is one of the finest military types, and of him it may be said that if the field of battle were swallowed up before him he would stand still unmoved on the ruins. But he has, too, the defects of his qualities. He is somewhat slow on the offensive. He requires to be commanded and directed. He has no sudden inspiration under fire. He must get precise orders, which he will execute punctually. He is somewhat of a grumbler, which by the way is no great fault. He is not expensive, yet he is more noisy and bustling than one would suppose. In a word, he is a solid combatant, and one of the good soldiers of Europe, though it is not his vocation that has brought him under his colours.' So much for the Englishman. Now for the Irishman:—

"The Irish is more warm, more impulsive in his intercourse with others than the Englishman. He is quite as brave, but he is a little too fond of whiskey; he is very ignorant, consequently superstitious, fantastic and rough. But he has an excellent heart, he is devoted, and does not want a certain ardour which the general temperament of the army prevents utilizing. Moreover, he has the intelligence of the combat, and gets quite impassioned in it. It is to the Irish soldier that are owing certain fiery charges which nobody expected, so little are they in the British character.'

The sketch would not be complete without the Scotchman. Here is what M. Noir says of him:—

"The Scotch soldiers form, without contradictions, the cream of the British troops. The Highlanders are the prototype of the excellent soldier. He has all the requisite qualities and not one defect. Unluckily for Great Britain, the population is not numerous. Saving it is true, to the point of putting by penny after penny, the Scotchman, for all that is honest, steadfast, amiable in his intercourse with others, enthusiastic and proud; chivalrous when the question is about shedding his blood. The old traditions of clanship subsist; each company is grouped around an illustrious name, all and every man in it is sure to be the captain's cousin. The Highlanders have a strange sort of bravery, which partakes at once of French fire and English calm. They rush on with impetuosity; they charge with vigour, but they are not hurried away by anger. In the very hottest moment of an attack a simple order suffices to stop them. Formed in square one would take them for Englishmen; in charging with the bayonet you would swear they were French. For the rest they are of Celtic origin, and the blood of our fathers flows in their veins; but the blood has a little cooled down by the severity the climate. In the eyes of the Times the Scotch had one enormous fault, that of showing their legs. In our eyes they have but one defect, a slight one, but still annoying—the depraved tastes for the screeching of bagpipes. We know the Highlanders would not get under fire without being excited by their national airs, played on this discordant instrument. One of our Generals having put down this piercing music, they attacked the enemy so furiously that the bagpipes had to be restored to them. And then they took the position. In a word, we repeat, the Scotch are magnificent soldiers."

A learned professor in a New England college was accustomed to demand of students an excuse when they were delatory at recitation. The excuse given, he invariably added: "Very well; but don't let it happen again." One morning a married student happening to be late in time was promptly interrogated as to the cause. Slightly embarrassed, he replied: "The fact is, sir, I had an addition to my family this morning, and it was not convenient to be here sooner." "Very well," replied the professor, in his quick nervous manner, "very well; but don't let it occur again!"

The gentleman who knocked off his servant's beer has since been knocked down by his own porter.

Riches should be admitted into our houses, but not into our hearts.

The end of philosophy is to subdue the passions, and prepare man for every condition of life.

History of King Theodore—Origin of the War.

King Theodorus or Theodore of Abyssinia, with whose name and recent history, every reader of newspapers throughout the world has become familiar in consequence of his war with England, has been slain at the storming of his capital, Magdala, by the English army. The original name of Theodore was Dejej natch Kassi. He was born of humble parentage in Quarel, on the borders of Western Amhara, and was educated in a convent, in which he was placed under restraint by his mother. He escaped from the convent to his uncle, Dejatch Comfu, a noted rebel, who soon inspired a taste for warlike pursuits, and eventually became a ruler of a large portion of Abyssinia. Naturally ambitious and politic, he succeeded in enlarging his authority steadily at the expense of the other "Ras" or Chiefs of Abyssinia. His power especially increased, when in 1853 he defeated his father-in-law, Ras Ali, and took him prisoner. At length, in 1855, he felt himself strong enough to formally claim the throne of all Abyssinia, and he was crowned as such by the Abuna Salama, the head of the Abyssinian Church. His reign soon proved to be the most effective Abyssinia had ever had. As soon as he came into power, his attention was directed to the importance of being on terms of friendship with the government which rules India, and which has established itself in the neighboring stronghold of Aden. He therefore, resolved to assert the rights assured to him by virtue of the treaty made between Great Britain and Abyssinia in the year 1849, and ratified in 1852, in which it was stipulated that each state should receive ambassadors from the other. Mr. Plowden, who had been for many years English Consul at Massawad, although not an accredited agent to Abyssinia, went to that country with presents for the people in authority, and remained during a war which broke out at the accession of Theodore. Unfortunately, Mr. Plowden, who had succeeded in winning the favour of the Emperor, to a large extent, was killed, and his successor, Mr. Cameron, was informed, soon after his arrival, in 1862, by the king that he desired to carry out the above-mentioned treaty; he even wrote an autograph letter to Queen Victoria, asking permission to send an embassy to London. Although the letter reached England in February, 1862, it remained unanswered; and the supposition is that this circumstance, together with a quarrel with Mr. Stern, a missionary, who, in a book on Abyssinia, had spoken disrespectfully of the king, and who had remonstrated against the flogging to death of two interpreters, roused the king's anger; and a year after having despatched the unanswered letter he sent an armed force to the missionary station, seized the missionaries, and put them in chains. He also cast Mr. Cameron into prison, and had him chained continually to an Abyssinian soldier. Great excitement prevailed in England on the arrival of the news of this outrage against British subjects; but in consideration of an armed expedition having to undergo many hardships in such a warm climate, it was deemed best by the English Government to use diplomacy in its efforts to have the prisoners released. It was not until the second half of August, 1865, that Mr. Rassam, an Asiatic by birth, was sent on a special mission to the Abyssinian potentate, and was received on his arrival in February, 1866, in a truly magnificent style, the release of the prisoners being at once ordered by the king.

But the hope thus raised was soon to be disappointed, for when Mr. Rassam and the other prisoners were just on the point of taking leave of the Emperor, they were put under arrest and notified that they would have to remain in the country as State guests until an answer could be obtained to another letter which the King was going to write to the Queen. Hypocrisy, falseness, and mendacity seem to have taken a prominent part in the character of King Theodore; for while he, in an unctuous letter to the Queen, ostensibly attributed the detention of Mr. Rassam to his wish of consulting with him in what way the friendly relations of the English and Abyssinian monarchies might be best extended he treated the prisoners with leniency only for a short period, and soon used rigorous measures toward his victims. As a reason for his change of conduct, he afterwards gave an alleged report that English, French, and Turkish troops were on their way to invade Abyssinia.

Theodore's letter was conveyed to England by Mr. Flad, a German missionary, who was also the bearer of a letter from Mr. Rassam, in which he requested that English artisans be sent to be engaged in the Abyssinian service. The English Government engaged some artisans for the service, and having sent them to the coast of Abyssinia, notified the King that they would enter his territory if he would previously liberate the captives. The condition being not complied with, the artisans returned to England. After exhausting all diplomatic resources to obtain from Theodore the release of the captives, the English Government last year declared war against Theodore. The war was chiefly to be carried on with the troops, European and native, which in India had become accustomed to the hot climate. The first English troops made their appearance in Oct., 1867, but it was not until the close of the year that the whole of the army arrived. The expedition was commanded by Gen. Sir Robert Napier, heretofore Commanding General at Bombay. Under him acted as commanders of divisions, Sir Charles Steevely and Col. Malcolm, while Col. Merewether commanded the cavalry. The distance from Massowah, the landing place of the troops, to Magdala, the capital of Theodore, is about 300 miles. The English had to overcome great difficulties, but they have overcome them with great energy. King Theodore gradually retired before the English without risking a battle until he reached his capital. Then, as the cable informs us, he made a stand and fought bravely for his crown, but in vain; he was defeated, the capital captured, and the King himself slain.—King Theodore was, on the whole, the greatest ruler Abyssinia has ever had; even, according to English accounts, he excelled in all manly pursuits, and his general manner was polite and engaging. Had he avoided that foolish quarrel with England, and proceeded on the way of reform which he entered upon in the beginning of his reign, he would probably have played an important part in the political regeneration of Eastern Africa.

Two Questions Easily Answered.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. THE IRISH CHURCH.

This question is being agitated in England, and it does appear as if with a determination to deal with it immediately. Too often there are party cries got up for mere agitation and kept alive for many years, while those that get them up have no serious intention of acting in the matter. This one does not appear to be of that sort, as every one is ready to acknowledge that Mr. Gladstone is a practical man, and by no means like his rival, the present Premier, who is too ready to resort to any subterfuge to gain his object—the retention of office, which has so lately been his good fortune to obtain. We are glad to learn that the principles of the Reform party are entire separation of the state from every religious denomination, and we trust that this will not only be the case as regards Ireland but also in reference to England. The grant to Manooth will also have to go, for there could be no justice in taking away from the establishment while this would be continued for its present object. Mr Gladstone's explanations show that his plan would be to use the funds thus taken from the establishment for the benefit of Ireland, but, of course, it is not said in what way those funds would be used, but we doubt not but that they would be applied to the purpose of secular education. We may expect that the church will not easily submit to be deprived of those emoluments which she has so long enjoyed, and we may prepare ourselves to witness a struggle of no little magnitude. Just as tenaciously will they hold on as religious denominations cling to the little pickings in every country. Already, Mr. Disraeli has sounded the note, the church in danger, and of course popish ascendancy as a consequence, and we need not wonder if the ministers of the establishment take up the cry and endeavor to make the greatest possible amount of political capital out of it. This they will do, yea, are doing; the unmeaning cry of the "church in danger" is however only a myth, and it is not, we fear, the result of conviction or even the outburst of a heated imagination, but merely the means that is believed most powerful to arouse the religious animosities of the people.

The establishment has failed to induce the great body of the Irish people to adopt the doctrines of the reformation, yet no man will say that it has been of no advantage to Ireland. Too often it is true that men have had parishes and livings who cared more for the fleece than the flock. But there have been men in the Irish Church that would have been a credit to any church, and were an ornament to the christian religion. Other protestant denominations have labored to extend the principles of truth and righteousness among the people, and with considerable success, and we believe that when distinctions are levelled that all the churches will work just as energetically for the truth once delivered to the saints as they do now, yea more so. The great barrier of legislative erection between the denominations has done much injury in Ireland as well as in every other country where it exists. We are not of those who imagine that churchmen think so little of their religious connection that it must go down for want of means to support it if the state ceases to do so. If this should be the case it will be a proof of the worthlessness of the laborious work the establishment has been at during many years. We believe, however, that churchmen will be found ready to support their ministry, and we believe, too, that they will then have men ready to spend and be spent in the work of the Lord, and not be employing curates to do that they were too lazy to do themselves. The Globe of Monday appears to step too far out of its way to get a crack at the probable or possible disloyalty of Orangemen, citing as he does some outburst of one or two ministers of the establishment and some Orangemen who were at the meeting referred to. The Globe cannot have failed to perceive that the key note of the Rev'd. Speakers was "Protestant vs. Popish ascendancy," a cry that is too much calculated to lead men away from the real issue; even Mr. Flanagan put its—"Dare to lay hands on the church." Can it be wondered then that Orangemen, Protestants, would assert that their duty to God is paramount to their duty to any sovereign. Their duty to God they put first, for this is how they have been induced to look at the matter. Further on, Mr. Flanaghan speaks of the coronation oath—"to maintain the Protestant religion," in all this we see the demagogue misleading the people, teaching them that their religion is in danger, and under this impression, though a false one, they think they would be unworthy of their ancestry, presuming them to be of Scotch origin, if they would quietly submit. The charge of even possible disloyalty we cannot see any grounds for in what took place at New Blun. In reading the quotations in the Globe one would be ready to imagine all Orangemen were members of the Episcopal church, while this is by no means so, many of them belong to the dissenting churches and feel the burden of the establishment; and hence would vote heartily for its dis-endowment, but not for its destruction. If they saw the Protestant religion in danger, as was represented to them, they would follow the example of their forefathers, and shed their life's blood rather than submit to the teachings of Rome, if not they would be unworthy of the name they bear.

BURLEIGH AFFAIRS.

This Municipality has more than once or even twice appeared in our columns of late, not because there has been any transaction of an illegal or irregular nature more than in other municipalities of this County, but because of a strong desire in a certain quarter to injure the Reeve of Burleigh. The trial to appeal that gentleman has failed entirely, Mr. Dennistoun having given judgment to that effect. Mr. Carroll therefore retains the seat, and Mr. Golborne, or some one for him, having to pay costs. The ground of this trial, as our readers are aware, was that two dots merely appeared in the assessment instead of the letter "R," for Freeholder—so much for two dots—they have caused a nice little law suit at an expense of, perhaps, 75 or 100 dollars; yet every Township Clerk, every Reeve, every Councillor, and every Lawyer, too, knows they are of very common occurrence.

Mr. Castiday's seat, we learn, is declared vacant, on the grounds of his being a inn-keeper. Mr. McDonald, however, does not obtain the seat; he is disqualified because of his being a contractor with the municipality. In this case there is the right of appeal, which extends to about two weeks, after which time, if no appeal, the judge will order a new election to fill Mr. Castiday's place. In connection with this we may remark that the rumour that the defendants in this case sought to retain their seats, owing to the simple neglect to attach a stamp to the legal documents, is not true. The writ was made out in such a way that if the plaintiffs should be defeated they could not collect cost, and owing to the neglect of attaching the necessary stamps the documents were objected to, unless surity for costs was given; but $100 having been lodged in the bank for that purpose the case went on. Our readers will, therefore, see that it was not a desire to evade the trial, but the desire to make sure of being able to collect the costs of the case that caused the irregular proceedings to be objected to.

The following motion was unanimously passed at a meeting of the legal profession, held at Peterborough this morning, and we gladly give it a place:—

Moved by T. M. Fairbairn, Esq., seconded by D. G Hatton, Esq.,—That we, the members of the legal profession of the County of Peterborough, having learned, with regret, that petitions are being circulated throughout this County, asking for the appointment of John Sinter Smith, Esq., as a successor to the present County Judge, in the event of a vacancy occurring, desire to inform the public that we have no connection or sympathy with the said petitions and that we disapprove of them.

Fenians Caught.—At last the Government detectives are at work, and several arrests have been made in Toronto and Guelph. The Irish Canadian office, Toronto is virtually closed. Its Editor, Boyle, and proprietor, Hynes, are in jail, and the Secretary of the Hibernian society also. The Police and detectives have been on the look out for some time, the books and papers taken throw some light on the organization in Canada, which will now come to grief.—The government is acting from information received at Ottawa, and let us hope that this society of cut throats will now be broken up. Those Hibernian Benevolent societies are dangerous. What strange ideas of Benevolence they must have.

Galway Mine.—We have seen some specimens of minerals taken from the above mine, which appear to be very rich in lead and silver. The specimens consist of large blocks taken from the mine at a depth of about 23 feet. The vein is a true one, and the miners say it promises to be a very rich one. The indications of this mine being a paying one are very strong; we are told that an assay by Mr. Robb of a portion of the surface ore sent him, showed gold $5.27 to the ton. The company are so satisfied of the richness of the mine that they propose erecting smelting works at the place. They have already nearly $10,000 stock subscribed and are confident of success.

Missionary Box Robbed.—Some party entered the St. Andrew's Church Sabbath School room during one of the nights of this week, and breaking the missionary boxes, 6 in number, abstract the contents—the collection of the children for about three months—they then piled the boxes together and left by the window at which they entered. The pity is those collections were, for the support of a little orphan girl at Madras, whom the St. Andrew's Sabbath School had undertaken to support. Merchants and others would do well to look out for parties offering quantities of small change.

Disraeli tendered his resignation to Her Majesty, on account of his late defeat on Mr. Gladstone's resolutions on the Irish Church. She, however, has refused to accept it until an appeal is made to the country and the new franchise tested. Gladstone is determined to push the matter to a successful termination if possible.

Notman, who was found guilty of aiding in procuring an abortion in the case of Miss Galbraith, was sentenced to ten years in the Provincial Penitentiary. The address of Judge Drummond in passing sentence was very affecting.

Dr. Williams, of Toronto, who was charged with same crime, is missing.

PARLIAMENTARY.

In the Senate, on the 4th inst., Senator Campbell said it was the intention of the Government to adopt a particular route for the Intercolonial Railway, after having submitted the same for the approval of the Imperial Parliament.

In the House of Commons the subject of a petition of Thomas Rigney, praying for a settlement of claims for payment and services in connection with obtaining the Reciprocity Treaty, was laid over till the next day.

Mr. Fortin presented a report from the Fisheries Committee, recommending the erection of 15 new light houses and beacon lights in lower ports and lakes, and insisting on such lights on Bird Rock in the Gulf of St. Lawrence and Red Island Reef.

Hon. J. H. Cameron introduced a bill to permit the bishops, clergy and laity of the United Church of England and Ireland in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, to be represented in the synod of said Church of Canada.

Mr. Holton objected; said that we had no church in the Dominion established by law, and consequently the bill was a private bill and should have been introduced by petition. Mr. Cameron determined to have precedent for his scheme, referred to the Synod Bill of the Parliament of Canada.

The number of Cabinet Ministers.

Mr. Jones, of North Leeds, moved a resolution declaring that the number of His Excellency's advisors receiving salaries shall not exceed nine, and contrasted the Dominion with the United States, showing that the Dominion had 106 more employees than are at Washington, while they had 35,000,000 of inhabitants against 4,000,000 in the Dominion. Departmental salaries at Washington amounted to $308,540, at Ottawa, $321,545. Mr. Jones also referred to the extravagance in the different departments especially in the public works department. As to the question of the expense of the present session, he would state that in 1851 the whole expenditure for the Civil List was only $132,412; in 1867 it is increased to $651,366. In the Militia Department the increase in one year, 1867 '68, was $18,045. The Finance Department in 1867 and 1868 showed a surplus expenditure of $15,920, and that was not all—in the items of contingencies for this department with its subdivision there was an increase this year of $93,542, taking into account the previous $15,000 mentioned. Then again, he asked the House to look at the following expenditures:—Secretary of State department, including contingencies, $60,089; Customs, $64,622; Inland Revenue, $49,486; and Board of Works, $63,611. The latter three items included contingencies. With regard to the Public Works department, it had disgracefully conducted the public business entrusted to it. Last year the increase in the expenditure of this department amounted to $63,043. Now, if there was one Department more than another which plunged the country into debt, it was the Public Works. Every public work undertaken by that Board for fifteen or twenty years past had been a total failure. Witness the Grand Trunk, and that extraordinary, incomprehensible undertaking, the Chats Canal.—Then came the grand swindling connected with the erection of the Parliamentary and Departmental buildings in Ottawa, on which millions of dollars had been wasted. All through, this Department had fearfully entrusted to it. As to the number of departments, if it was decided not to reduce them, then he had no objections to the present occupants retaining their seats.

Motion lost on a division.

Interference with the local parliaments.

Hon. Mr. Holton introduced a motion for an address praying His Excellency to withhold his sanction from a bill that had passed the Quebec Legislation to incorporate the St. Lawis Hydraulic Company. This Act had failed to receive the sanction of the Lieut.-Governor of Quebec.

Sir John A. Macdonald was glad his hon. friend had brought this matter up, as the subject was one of great importance. This was a measure which affected one of the greatest properties they had—the river St. Lawrence. It was therefore a subject on which the Government were justified in not acting hastily. It was obvious that this was of a class of motions which ought not to be encouraged. It ought only to be moved and approved of by Parliament where a strong case had been made out. In such a matter it devolved on the general government to see first whether the local government had acted in excess of its jurisdictions; secondly, if the matter were with in the local jurisdiction, whether it involved anything so much at variance with the great interests of the Dominion that the advisers of his Excellency would assume the responsibility of refusing the Royal assent. It was highly inadvisable that the action of the Local Parliaments should be supervised or checked by the General Government. (Hear, hear.) The only two cases in which such interference would be justifiable were in the first place where, in the opinion of the Responsible advisers of His Excellency, there was an excess of jurisdiction. Then if the General Government think so they are bound to say so, and disavow the measure. Secondly, if a case should arise where, though the jurisdiction were undoubted, the effect of the legislation would be monstrously prejudicial to the Dominion as a whole, or contrary to the first principles of legislation. (Hear.) In every way possible it was well to discourage interferences with the Local Parliaments.

Mr. Blake was very glad to hear the statements of the leader of the Government on this question of jurisdiction. He quite agreed with the hon. gentleman that to render the interference of the General Legislature justifiable, the case must be an extreme one.

Hon. Mr Holton having obtained that which he sought in moving his motion, withdrew it, with the consent of the house.

The Governor General's Salary.

Mr. Oliver moved for Committee of the Whole for Friday next to consider a resolution declaring it expedient to alter the provision made under 105th sec. British North American Act, 1867, and to fix the salary of his Excellency the Governor-General at $35,000 per annum.

Mr. Dufresne moved, in amendment, to strike out $35,000 and insert $30,000.

Mr Oliver said he had in the sum of $35,000 in order to meet the views of gentlemen on both sides of the House.

Sir John A. Macdonald said with respect to this motion by his hon. friend opposite, and the motion in amendment, he must say he regretted exceedingly that this question had been brought up. He thought it would have shown a wise direction to have left it as a fixed in the British America Act. It would have been more for the credit of Canada to have done so. Formerly, the Sovereign paid the salaries of colonial government out of Crown revenues of the colonies belonging to the sovereign. When these revenues were given up to Canada, it was on condition that the Colony should pay the governor's salary, and this not by an annual vote, but by a permanent enactment. In 1841, Canada, which had been a much smaller population than now, fixed the salary in accordance with the Union Act at £7,777 currency. Looking at the large increase to her population which had since taken place, and the present and prospective addition of other provinces to the old Province of Canada, he did not think $50,000 was too much. It should be remembered that this salary was the only return the people of Canada gave for all that England did for this country. If we took the course now proposed, it would be felt in England that we were not acting fairly, justly, or generously, and that we were not realising the position in which England had placed us. So long ago an 1851, the then Colonial Secretary, Earl Grey, urged that the salary of £1,000 sterling was not sufficient to afford a temptation to any of those who had taken a leading part in public affairs at home to abandon his position there in order to accept this office. A public man in England sacrifices a great deal when he became a Colonial Governor. He knew that when he returned after five years, he would be in a great measure forgotten and the avenues to further preferment in a manner closed against him.—Lord Elgin came here chiefly because he was not a wealthy man, and the abilities he afterwards displayed had not there been developed. In his return to England, in consequence of his connection with certain public men, he was declared to a much higher position for which he proved himself fully qualified. Having referred to the cases of Cathcart, Bagot and Metcalfe, he said that Sir Edmund Head, after having filled subordinate Government positions in England, was appointed Lieut. Governor of New Brunswick, and from that position, much to his own surprise and that of the people of Canada, was raised to the Governor General of Canada. No one from his antecedents, or the weight he possessed in England, could have anticipated such a thing. The present holder of the office was entitled to every respect. He had not, however, in England held a position which it might be thought a man should have held who was qualified to be the Governor-General of Canada. He then proceeded to state the salaries paid to a number of other Colonial Governments, to show that, in proportion to the population and importance of those colonies, they were generally greater than here. In Mauritius with a population of 1,183,090, there was a salary equal to that paid to the Governor General of Canada. In New South Wales, the salary was £7,000 sterling.—In Victoria, Australia, with a population of 550,000, the salary was £10,000 stg.

Hon. Mr. Holton inquired whether the clause in the Union Act, with references to the Governor's salary, was the work of our own delegates, or was inserted there in compliance with the expressed desire of the British Government.

Sir J. A Macdonald said he thought then the hon. member for Chateauguay should resume d his hon. friend from Oxford in withdraw his motion. It was true there had been no formal statement of a desire on this point on the part of the British Government, but it was equally true that this clause, as every other clause, was the subject of conference and agreement between the Imperial Government and the Colonial Delegates. They had met day by day at the office of the Colonial Minister. Clause by clause was read and there was continual interchange of opinion between the delegates and the Government as to every one of those clauses. He did not say that the Imperial Government recommended this sum, but he did say that this clause with the other clauses was submitted to the Imperial Government, and that they accepted it at the hands of the delegates after full conference.

Hon. Mr. Johnson said he did not wish a shred of the Union Act altered and therefore he should vote against any reduction of the Governor's salary. He could not, however, acquiesce in the Tory doctrine laid by the Premier when he spoke of the Crown revenues. He (Mr Johnson) held that these revenues belonged to the people. The people help the purse strings and they must be administered by the Crown according to the advice of Ministers responsible to the people. In the conference he had gone for £8,000, but was overruled, and the compact having been made, he did not wish it to be broken in any particulars.

Dr. Parker said that if the salary were allowed to remain at its present rate, as advocated by the Minister of Justice, hereafter it would be held that Parliament thought the present the fitting remuneration. As to reducing it hereafter, that would be found next to impossible. If it were to be reduced, it must be now or never.

Mr. Blake said that as they had the power to make this change, he did not see why they should be told that they should not exercise that right. The Act itself furnished a strong indication that this sum was merely a temporary and not a fixed sum. As had been remarked, that sum of $50,000 did not comprehend all the pecuniary advantages of that position. The fact was that even cutting it down as was proposed it would still with contingencies reach the the handsome sum of $50,000. Although perfectly agreed as to the importance of not paring down the salary too closely, yet he was bound to say it was not the question of a few additional thousand dollars which should induce a statesman to accept the position of Governor General, as it was the career and position it opened up that should determine the choice of such an important office. Looking at the present financial condition and prospects of the Dominion he thought the member for Oxford had done his duty in bringing forward the motion, and it would obtain his (Mr. Blake's) support.

Hon. Mr. Gray strongly opposed the sudden alteration of the Union Act here proposed. It had not yet had a twelve months' trial, and hon. gentleman sought to change it. Such a course could not but have a prejudicial effect on the English mind, and was not worthy of the Dominion.

Mr. Bodwell hoped his hon. friend from North Oxford would not consent to withdraw the motion. Now-a-days the great argument was—do not give offence to England. Hon. gentlemen seemed to forget they were the representative of a poor people already heavily oppressed by taxation, a people to whom the saving here proposed was one of considerable importance, and as had been properly remarked this sum of $50,000 was not his Excellency's full allowance—he had various additional remunerations, such as raised this the nominal sum attached to the office to a very large amount. His (Mr. Bodwell's) idea was instead of it being an inconsistency for them to take up this subject during the present session, that now or never this charge should be made.

Sir G. E. Cartier considered that it would be both unwise and unjust to disturb the arrangement of the British American Act as to the Governor General's salary.

Hon. Mr. Holton replied and remarked specially, that he had failed to hear from the mouth of either the Minister of Justice or Minister of Militia, any statement that the Imperial Government desired such a salary.

Hon Mr. Galt adhered to the salary as fixed in England, believing it to be to the interests of Canada that the amount should remain thus fixed.

Mr. Jones (Leeds) said that from some of the remarks it would appear as if they lived under a despotic Government, and that the people had very little to say in this matter. It had been strongly urged that unless the Dominion paid such a sum, a first class man could not be got. Now he (Mr Jones) scorned all such mercenary considerations, and if they could not get a first class man on no other terms he would gladly do without the gentleman. A good deal had been said about aristocracy; but the specimens in England or this country were not such as to induce the people to regard them with much favour, He would far rather see nature's noblemen, and would expect far better service from them. He did not want to encourage the English aristocracy to come here and take root.

Mr. Mackenzie did not see that the instances cited of other Colonies in the Empire were at all in point. There were many considerations making the cases in those instances very different. On this occasion, he would vote as before for the sum of $35,000, believing that to be a reasonable amount. He would not therefore vote for the amendment. It was to be regretted the Government had not taken this matter in hand, but it was quite evident that in all matters of retrenchment the present Government always suffered itself to be dragged at the heels of a Committee or some way or other was forced to fall in with the sentiments of the house (Hear)

Mr. Scatcherd had no confidence in the professions of gentlemen on the Opposition side of the house They said one thing and voted another. They professed retrenchment, and then declared they would oppose the motion for retrenchment made by the member for Montcalm. He (Mr. Scatherd) would vote for that amendment.

The amendment was then put and carried. Yeas, 90; Nays, 45.

Majority against the Government, 45.

The House then went into Committee—Mr Stirton in the chair, and adopted Mr Oliver's resolution, fixing the salary of the Governor-General at $35,000 a-year.

The Committee rose and reported the resolution, and the report was ordered to be received to-morrow.

The House adjourned, on motion of Sir John. A. Macdonald, at one o'clock.

BELMONT COUNCIL.

Council met at Garrison's School House, on Saturday the 25th day of April, last. Members were all present. The minutes of the last meeting were read and signed.

A petition was presented from the inhabitants of Blairton, for money to open a road to that village, and in compliance with the same, the Clerk was instructed to communicate with the Secretary of the C. P. and M. Railway and Mining Company, and with R. Birdsall, Esq., to enquire if a free grant of the land for a road across the 2nd concession, between lots 7 and 8, could be obtained from the parties mentioned.

On motion of Mr. Preston, the Reeve was instructed to have the side line run between lots 5 and 6 in the first concession, and to cause the centre of the road marked out from the east end of the 2nd concession to where the railroad intersects the present Marmora road, and also to have the centre of the road marked along the west part of the 3rd concession at lot No 6.

On motion of Mr. Dafoe, the Treasurer was ordered to procure 100 pounds of flour for Widow Godfrey, as charity.

The Reeve submitted a communication from the Secretary of the Railway committee of the village of Brighton.

On motion of Mr. Wilde, the Reeve was requested to call a public meeting of the ratepayers of this Municipality to appoint a committee to act in unison with the committee of Brighton, in taking the necessary steps for the construction of a Railway from Presque, Isle Harbour, to the Township of Lake.

On motion of Mr. Young, Mr. Robt. Wegg was heard before the Council in regard to the improvement of a certain road.

On motion of Mr. Dafoe, the Council allowed Mr. Joshua Garrison to have temporary occupation of the allowance of road between lots 5 and 6 in the 2nd concession, from the railroad, eastward, to the concession line.

On motion of Mr. Young, the Council adjourned, to meet again at this place on Saturday, 30th inst.

Accident.—While Mr. T. J. Armstrong, of Douro, was gathering together some logs, on Thursday last, his horses started rather quicker than anticipated, and drew the log on his leg, jamming him up against a stump and fracturing his leg severely. Both the bones of the lower part of the leg, we understand, were broken. Dr. Kincaid was immediately called in and set the fracture, and we are glad to learn that he appears to be doing well.

Teachers' Association.—The above association will meet on the 1st Saturday of June in Ashburnham. The subjects for that day are: Reading from the 18th to the 29th page, new 5th book; parsing, the "Anchor." time—11½ to 12½; arithmetic, proportion, 12½ to 13½; algebra, factoring, 1½ to 2½.

British Order of Good Templars.

The Representatives from the different Lodges of the above Order, in the County of Peterborough, met at the Village of Norwood, on Friday, 1st of May, for the purpose of organizing a County Lodge. Bro. Rev. D. Cantlon, as senior P. D. of the County, took the Chair, when the Lodge was opened under the solemn Degree of the Heart, after which he explained the object of the meeting and the benefits to be derived from a County Lodge. The following are the names of those elected to office for the ensuing term:—

Bro. Geo. W. Holcomb, County Chief.
Sister Ellen Condon, County Vice.
Bro. Jas. C. Dafoe, County Past Chief.
" F. J. Jamieson, County Secretary.
" John McNamarra, County Treasurer.
" Rev. Mr. Halsteid, County Lecturer.
Sister Holcomb, County Counsellor.
Bro. Jas. Agnew, County Chaplain.
" Chas. L. Sarney, County Financier.
Sister Martha Larmour, County Recorder
Bro. Mark Scott, County Marshal.
Sister Garrison, County Dep. Marshall.
" Rea, County Inner Guard.
Bro. James Henry, County Outer Guard.

After the election of officers the regular routine of business was gone through with, during which several important resolutions were brought before the Lodge; it was then Moved by Bro. Jas. C. Dafoe, seconded by Bro. Charles L. Sarney.—That this Lodge now adjourns, to meet again at Victoria School House ("Belmont Star" Lodge Room) on the last Friday of September next, at 3 o'clock, p. m.

F. J. JAMESON,
Co. Secretary.

Silver-Plated Ware, Watches, &c.—We would again invite the attention of our readers to the Auction sale of Bankrupt stock of the above ware, every night, in Henthorn's Block. The sales are conducted by Mr. Reid, and there is no reserve. The goods, we are informed, are first class, and bargains may be obtained. Those requiring such articles would do well to go and see for themselves.

A Man Shot.—We have been informed that a pedlar named Sandy Hoskin, well known around here, was found dead near Cold Springs lately. It is believed that he was shot and robbed of whatever valuables he had with him. We have not yet learned particulars.

Ashburnham.—The Council met on Monday evening—three members present. The only business transacted was appointing a day for holding the Court of Revision.

Accident at Chicago.

From the Chicago Tribune, April 24.

Last Night Healey's Hall was filled to its capacity with eager and enthusiastic Irishmen. A grand meeting of the Fenian organization was taking place. General O'Neil, the President of the Brotherhood and Mr. Gildemire, the second in command, were both present. The latter had just concluded a strong and exciting appeal to his countrymen to arise and strike for the redemption of their native land. The applause, which was frequent while he spoke, redoubled at the close. It was a paroxysm of cheers, of clappings and stampings.

In the very height of this frantic and tumultuous applause, which continued despite the warnings given a moment before by the proprietor of the place, the floor of the hall gave way, and nearly all of the shouting, applauding multitude were swept down on the floor below.

These unfortunates beings thus participated together with broken beams and boards, upon the billiard room below, the flooring to that in turn gave way, and all were hurled a distance of six feet more to the cellar. Fortunately but very few people were in the billiard room, nearly all having gone up stairs to hear the speeches.

Almost immediately steps were taken for the rescue of the wounded, and they were as soon as extricated, taked to their own homes, or where that was not possible, to houses in the vicinity.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, anquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away o. flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and safe administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalising the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, coloring the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

FANCY BONNET RIBBONS, we are selling out in cheap lots.

BELT BUCKLES selling off at cost and less than cost.

BLACK VEILS, we are selling off at almost any price.

Our reason for offering some of these things under Cost is that our stock of them is too large and we wish to reduce it.

We hope our friends will call and judge for themselves that we do not advertise what we cannot show.

C L O T H S.

We invite particular attention to our Stock of Cloths, which is one of the best assorted to be found.

Our CANADIAN TWEEDS at 3s and 3s 6d per yard, already mentioned as one of the cheap lots, every person should buy.

In FINER CLOTHS, also, we can suit any person who favors us, as our stock is so varied, and our rule is to sell on very small profits.

This department of our business is under the charge of MR. BAKEWELL, who is now so well known as a first-class Cutter, that it is needless to make any remark upon his ability.

READY-MADE CLOTHING.

We have now on hand one of the largest assortments in Town of Spring and Summer Clothing, which we are offering at very low prices.

CALL AND EXAMINE OUR STOCK WHETHER YOU PURCHASE OR NOT.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

IN CANADA.

MESSRS. Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died. I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours: had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq. Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got heavy and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever. I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

Look, Read, and Learn,

THAT THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr. Lewis Josephus, of the Distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees, British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

THIS all-possessing Great Indian Remedy wanted, and in broad and emphatic language, we can safely say may be replied upon to make a permanent cure of all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, Digestive Organs, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from Impurity of the Blood, excepting the third stage of Consumption. In the Western Country where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has indeed affected some of the most Marvellous Cures, ever recorded in the annels of Historical Medicine. Such being the case, in addition to its former renown and celebrity, we defy humanity to dispute the fact that this, the Great Shoshonees Remedy in connection with the Shoshonees Vegetable Restorative Pills, is the Remedy of Remedies of the 19th Century, and the greatest boon ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity.

Poetry.

FORGIVE AND FORGET.

O! forgive and forget, for this life is too short
To waste it in brooding o'er wrongs we have met;
It is better, far better, to smother our anger,
To teach the proud heart to forgive and forget.

In the path we must tread, leading down to the valley
Are crosses and trials to lift and to bear,
And the chalice of life from which we are drinking
Oft bears to our lips drops of sorrow and care.

But life is so short, be it sunshine or shadow
That we cannot afford to brood over a wrong,
Let us lift up our burdens and bear them as bravely,
We'll lay them down shortly, it can not be long.

Then forgive and forget—if the friends you love fondly
Prove themselves to be false, and unworthy of trust,
Deal with them kindly, for they are but mortals
Erring like us—for we too are dust.

Deal with them tenderly, pity their weakness,
We know every heart hath its evil and good;
We all have one Father and hence we are brothers,
Then let us forgive and forget as we should.

JOSH BILLING'S PROVERBS.

The principal difference between a luxury and a necessary is, the price.

Wise men don't expect to do away with the vicissitudes of life, they only expect tew blunt the edge ov them.

Gravity is very often mistaken for wisdom, but there iz as much differ as there iz between a side board and the man who maid it.

Honesty is the best policy, but don't take mi word for it, try it

Genowine proverbs ar like good kambric needles—short, sharp and shiney.

A man running for office, puts me in minde ov a dog that's lost—he smells ov everybody he meets, and wags himself all over.

Moste ov the advice we receave from others is not so much an evidence of their affekshun for us, as it is an evidence of their effekshun for themselves.

If you want to git a sure, crop, and a big yield for the seed, sow wilde oats.

What a man spends in this life, he earns; what he saves, he borrers.

When a feller gits a going down hill, it duz seem as if everything had been greased for the okashun.

If there wasn't anything but truth in this world, a fool would stand just as good a chance az a wise man.

Rise erly, work hard and late, live on what you kant sell, give nothing away, and if you don't die rich, and go to the devil, yu may su me for damages. N. B.—The above remarks are not intended to be personal.

We are apt to hate them who won't take our advise, and despise them who do.

It is dreadful easy tew be a phool—a man kan be one and know it.

Real happiness don't consist so much in what a man don't hav, as it duz in what he don't want.

"Large bodies move slo," this here proverb don't apply to lims, for the bigger the are the faster the go.

It is highly important, when a man makes up his mind to becum a rascall, that he shud examine himself closely, and see if he ain't better konstructed for a phool.

I argy in this way, if a man is right he kant be too radikal, if he is rong he kant be to conservatiff.

There is 2 things in this life for which we are never fully prepared, and that is—twins.

A BABY SOLILOQUY.

I am here. And, if this is what they call the world, I don't think much of it. It's a very flimsey world, and smells of paregoric awfully. Its a dreadful light world too, and makes blink, I tell you. And I don't know what to do with my hands: I think I'll dig with my fists in my eyes. No, I won't. I'll scrabble at the corner of my blanket and chew it up, and then I'll holler; whatever happens, I'll holler. And the mor paregoric they give me the louder I'll yell. That old nurse puts the spoon into the corner of my mouth in a very uneasy way, and keeps tasting my milk herself all the while. She spilled snuff in it last night, and when I hollered she trotted me. That comes of a being a two days' old baby. Never mind, when I'm a man I'll pay her back good. There's a pin sticking in me now, and if I say a word about it I'll be trotted or fed, and I would rather have catnip tea. I'll tell you who I am. I found out to day. I heard folks say, "Hush, don't wake up Emmeline's baby." That's me. I'm "Emmeline's baby," and suppose that pretty white-faced women over on the pillows is Emmeline.

No, I was mistaken, for a chap was in here just now and wanted to see bob's baby, and looked at me, and said I was a funny little fellow and looks just like bob." He smelt of cigars, and I'm not used to them. I wonder who else I belong to. Yes, there's another one—that's "Granma." Emmeline told me, and then she took me up and held me against her soft cheek and said "It was Granma's baby, so it was." I declare I do not know who I do belong to; but I'll holler, and may be, I'll find out.

There comes Snuffy with catnip tea. The idea of giving babies catnip tea when they are crying for information! I'm going to sleep. I wonder if I don't look pretty red in the face! I wonder why my hands won't go where I want them to?

A FEW HARD THINGS.—Experience and observation have taught men that it is—

Hard to quit chewing tobacco.
Hard to keep from eating too much.
Hard to bring liquor and not be intemperate.
Hard to pay our debts.
Hard to resist temptation.
Hard to believe a man you know to be a liar.
Hard to turn the other cheek when we are struck.
Hard to love our enemies.
Hard to borrow money from our friends when we need it.

You are disappointed when you go to dinner, expecting to find a warm saddle of mutton, and get nothing but the cold shoulder.

Working for bare life—Making clothes for a new baby.

When is a ship like a nobleman's wife? When she is fastened to a pier.

Sleight of hand—Refusing an offer of marriage.

What is the best thing to do in a hurry? Nothing

SUGAR-COATED.

ARE a safe and reliable remedy in all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from ignorant pretenders, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS.

Are you sick, feeble, and complaining? Do you want an appetite, with good digestion, prompt, and your bodily organs in healthy action? Then your troubles are often the products of certain Wants. Some of these want is sufficient to derange the whole system, and the only sure way to find it out is to try a remedy. Take Ayer's Pills, and cleanse out the disordered humors—purify the blood, and let the health relive an unobstructed flow of the life-fluid through all the channels of the body. In this way, purify the system from the contaminations which make disease. A cold, chills, fever, pains in the back, and aching limbs come from the presence of the first effects of impurity in the blood. Nature throws off the poisonous matter through the skin, and the effort produces a fever. This is Nature's own method of relief, and assistance should be rendered by the use of proper purgatives. Ayer's Pills are the best aperient to relieve Nature, because they are sufficiently searching to reach the inmost recesses of the disease, and they are mild enough to avoid unnecessary irritation of the system. Thus they cure the disease by working in accordance with the laws which govern the human economy. Nature is relieved of the burden which oppresses her, and she at once begins to recover her healthful power. Ayer's Pills, by their penetrating power, purify the entire circulating fluid of the impurities which make disease. A cold clothes somewhere in the body, and disorders its natural functions. Those, if not relieved upon themselves and the surrounding organs, producing general aggravation, suffering, and disease. While in this condition, oppressed by the derangement, take Ayer's Pills, and see how directly they restore the natural action of the system, and with it the buoyant feeling of health again. What is true and so apparent in this trivial and common complaint, is also true in many of the deep-seated and dangerous distempers. The same peculiar effect expels them. Caused by similar derangements and disarrangements of the natural functions of the body, they are rapidly, and many of them surely, cured by the same means. None who know the virtues of Ayer's Pills will neglect to employ them when suffering from the disorders they cure.

Perhaps one from leading physicians in some of the principal cities, and from other well known public persons.

From a Practicing Physician of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1866.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the paragon of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of wherms more upon her hands and feet that had proved incurable for years. Her mother has been long grievously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and in her hair. After our child was cured, she also used your Pills, and they have cured her.

ABA MORGANER.

As a Family Physic.

From Dr. E. W. Chittenden, New Orleans.

Your Pills are the prince of purges. Their excellent qualities surpass any cathartic we possess. They are mild, but very certain and effectual in their action on the bowels, which makes them invaluable to us in the daily treatment of disease.

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach.

From Dr. Edward Boyd, Baltimore.

DEAR DOC. AYER: I cannot answer you what complaints I have cured with your Pills better than to say all but one are cured with a purgative medicine. I have given dozens on dozens on editorial authority. It may daily succeed with disease, and believing as I do that your Pills afford us the best we have, I of course value them highly.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 1, 1865.

DR. J. C. AYER: Sir: I have been repeatedly cured of the worst headache any body can have by a dose or two of your Pills. It seems to arise from a foul stomach, which they cleanse at once.

Yours with great respect, ED. W. PEPPLE,
Clerk of Monongahela Co. Court.

Bilious Disorders—Liver Complaints.

From Dr. Theodore Bell, of New York City.

Not only are your Pills admirably adapted to their purpose as an aperient, but I find their beneficial effects upon the Liver very marked indeed. They have in my practice proved more effectual for the cure of a host of complaints than any one remedy I can mention. I consequently rejoice that we have at length a purgative which is worthy the confidence of the profession and the people.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, D. C., Feb. 15, 1868.

SIR: I have used your Pills in my practice and personal practice ever since you made them, and cannot hesitate to say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are an admirable remedy for derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of bilious disease on obstinate that it did not readily yield to them. Fraternally yours, ALONZO BALL, M.D.,
Physician of the Marine Hospital.

Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Relax, Worms.

From Dr. J. G. Green, of Georgia.

Your Pills have had a long trial in my practice, and I hold them in esteem as one of the best aperients I have ever found. Their alterative effect upon the liver makes them an excellent remedy, when given in small doses for bilious dysentery and diarrhœa. Their sugar-coating makes them very acceptable and convenient for the use of women and children.

Dyspepsia, Impurity of the Blood.

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in this distrct. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood, they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

WARSAW, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Oct. 24, 1865.

DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MACHAM, M.D.

Constipation, Costiveness, Suppression, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Dropsy, Paralysis, Piles, etc.

From Dr. J. P. Vaughn, Malvern, Canada.

Too much cannot be said of your Pills for the cure of costiveness. If others of our fraternity have found them as effectual as I have, they should join me in proclaiming it for the benefit of the multitudes who suffer from that complaint, which, although bad enough in itself, is the pro-genitor of others that are worse. I believe unfeignedly in originating in the liver, but your Pills affect that organ and cure the disease.

From Mrs. E. Stuart, Physician and Midwife, Indiana.

I find one or two doses of your Pills taken at the proper time, are excellent promoters of the natural surroundings when wholly or partially suppressed, and also very effectual to cleanse the stomach and expel worms. They are so much the best physic we have that I recommend no other to my patrons.

From the Rev. Dr. Flanders, of the Methodist Epis. Church.

POLAKI HOUSE, Savannah, Ga., Jan. 6, 1866.

HONORED SIR: I should be unpardonable for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not report my case to you. A cold settled in my limbs and brought on excruciating neuralgic pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians, the disease grew worse and worse until by the advice of your ex-ellent agent in Baltimore, Dr. Mackenzie, I tried your Pills. Their effects were slow but sure. By persevering in the use of them, I am now entirely well.

SENATE CHAMBER, Baton Rouge, La., 8 Dec. 1865.

DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured by your Pills of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years. VINCENT SLIDELL.

☞ Most of the Pills in market contain Mercury, which although a valuable remedy in skilful hands, is dangerous in a public pill. From the dreadful consequences that frequently follow the incautious use, These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

Price, 25 cents per Box, or 5 Boxes for $1.

Poetry.

THE LABORER.

BY W. D. GALLAGHER.

Stand up erect! thou bast the form
And likeness of thy God;—who more?
A soul as dauntless 'mid the storm
Of daily life, a heart as warm
And pure as breast o'er wore.

What then? Thou art as true a man
As moves the human mass among—
As much a part of the great plan
That with Creation's dawn began
As any of the throng

Who is thine enemy? the high
In station, or in wealth the chief;
The great, who coldly pass thee by
With proud step and averted eye?
Nay! nurse not such belief.

If true unto thyself thou wast,
What were the proud one's scorn to thee?
A feather, which thou mightest cast
Aside, as lightly as the blast
The light leaf from the tree.

No; unbarbed passions, low desires,
Absence of noble self-respect;
Death, in the breast's consuming fires,
To that high nature which aspires
For ever, till thou checked.

These are thine enemies—thy worst;
They chain thee to thy lowly lot;
Thy labor and thy life accursed.
Oh, stand erect! and from them burst,
And longer suffer not.

Thou art thyself, thine enemy:
The great, what better they than thou?
As theirs, is not thy will as free?
Has God with equal favors thee
Neglected to endow?

True, wealth thou hast not—'tis but dust;
Nor place—uncertain as the wind;
But that thou hast which, with thy crust
And water, may despise the lust
Of both—a noble mind.

With this, and passions under ban,
True faith, and holy trust in God,
Thou art the peer of any man;
Look up, then, that thy little span
Of life may be well trod.

Selections.

HOME INFLUENCES.

'What's that, I wonder,' said Mrs. Seaburn, as she heard a ring at the basement door.

'Ah—it's Marshall,' returned her husband, who had looked out at the window and recognized the grocer's cart.

'And what have you had sent home now, Henry?'

But before Mr. Seaburn could answer the door of the sitting room was thrown open, and an old female domestic looked in and asked—

'What'll I be afther doin' wid the dimijohns, mum?'

'The demijohns?' repeated Mrs. Seaburn.

'Let them set in the hall, and I'll attend to them' interposed her husband.

'Henry, what is it that you have sent home, now?' the wife asked, after the domestic had gone.

'Some nice wine, Cora, and a little choice old brandy,' replied Henry.

Cora Seaburn glanced up at the clock and then looked down upon the floor.—There was a cloud upon her fair brow, and it was very evident that something lay heavily upon her young heart. Presently she got up and walked to the wall, and pulled the bell-cord, and the summons was answered by the domestic.

'Are George and Charles yet in their room?'

'Yes ma'am.'

'Tell them it is school-time.'

The girl went out, and in a little time two boys entered the sitting-room, with their books under their arms and their caps in their hands. They were both bright, happy, healthy fellows, with goodness and truth stamped upon their rosy faces, and the light of free consciences gleaming in their sparkling eyes. George was thirteen years of age, and his brother Charles eleven, and certainly these two parents had every reason to be proud of them. The boys kissed their mother—gave a happy 'good morning' to their father—and then went willingly away to school.

'Cora, dear,' said Mr. Seaburn, some time after the boys had gone, 'what makes you so sober?'

'Sober?' repeated the wife softly, looking up.

'Yes; you have been sober and mute ever since the grocer came.'

'Do you want me to tell you why?'

'Of course I do.'

'Well, Henry, I am sorry you have had that spirit brought in to the house.'

'Pooh! What's the use of talking so, Cora? You wouldn't have me be without it, would you?'

'Yes.'

'Why—what do you mean?'

'I mean that I would cut clear from the stuff, now and forever.'

'But—Cora, dear—you are wild.—What should we do at our dinner-parties without wine?'

'Do as others who have it not.'

'But—mercy! what would people say? Are you afraid—but no—I won't ask so foolish a question.'

'Ask it, Henry. Let us speak plainly upon this subject now that we have fairly commenced.'

'Well—I was about to ask if you were afraid that I should ever get to—drink too much?'

'That is not a fair question, Henry, I was not thinking of that at all. But I will answer it by and by. You have no hard appetite for it now.'

'Of course not.'

'Then it would not cost you any effort of will to abstain from its use?'

'Not a particle.'

'And then you only have it in your house, and serve it out to your friends, and drink it yourself, because it is fashionable? or, in other words, you do it because others do it?'

'I do it because,' said Mr. Seaburn, hesitating somewhat in his choice of language—'because it would appear not only very odd, but very singularly, and very fanatical, not to do it.' This last was spoken rather emphatically.

'But' pursued Mrs. Seaburn, with the calmness and assurance of one who feels the sustaining influence of right, 'you would not do what you were convinced was wrong, out of respect to any such considerations, would you?'

'I know you would not, Cora. This question of temperance. I know, is a good one in the abstract, and I am willing to live up to it, as I understand it; but I am not a teetotaller.'

'Henry,' said his wife, with an earnest, pleading look into his face, 'will you answer me a few questions? and answer them all honestly and truly, without equivocation or evasion?'

'Bless me, how methodically you put it, Cora; but I will answer.'

'Then—first: Do you believe you or your friends are in any way benefitted by the drinking of intoxicating beverages at your board? That is—do you derive any real good from it?'

'No—I can't say that we do.'

'Do you think the time has ever been, since we were married, when we actually needed wine in the house, either for our health or comfort?'

'Why—I think it has ministered to our comfort, Cora.'

'How?'

'O—in many ways.'

'Name one of them.'

'Why—in the greater enjoyment of our guests.'

'Ah—but I am speaking simply of ourselves, Henry—of you, and me, and of our little family. Has it ever ministered to our comfort?'

'No—I can't say that it has.'

'And if it was banished from our house to-day, and forever, as a beverage, should we suffer in consequence?'

'Certainly. What would our friends—'

'Ah—but stop. I am only speaking of our own affairs, as shut in from the world, by our own fireside. I want all extraneous considerations of all kinds left out. Should we or should we not, as a family, suffer in our moral, physical, social or domestic affairs, in the total absence of these intoxicating beverages?'

'No, I don't know that we should.'

'Then to you, as a husband, and a father, and as a man of business, it is of no earthly use?'

'No.'

'And it would cost you no effort, so far as you alone are concerned, to break clear from it?'

'Not a particle.'

'And now Henry,' pursued his wife, with increased earnestness, 'I have a few more questions to ask: Do you believe that the drinking of intoxicating liquors is an evil in this country?'

'Why—as it is now going on, I certainly do.'

'And it is an evil in society.'

'Yes.'

'Look over this city and tell me if it is not a terrible evil?'

'A terrible evil grows out of the abuse of it, Cora.'

'And will you tell me what grows out of the use of it?'

'Really, love, when you came down to this abstract point you have the field. But people should govern their appetites. All things may be abused.'

'Yes; but will you tell me the use—the real good—to be derived from drinking wine and brandy?'

'As I said before—it is a social custom, and has its charms.'

'Ah—there you have it, Henry. It does have its charms, as the deadly snake is said to have; and as other vices have! But I see you are in a hurry.'

'It is time I was at the store.'

'I will detain you but a moment longer, Henry. Just answer me a few more questions. Now call to mind all the families of your acquaintance; think of all the domestic circles you have known, from your school boy days to the present. Run your thoughts through the various homes where you have been intimate. Do this, and tell me if in any one instance, you ever knew a single joy to be planted by the heart-stone from the use of the wine cup? Did you ever know one item of good to flow to a family from its use?'

'No; I cannot say that I ever did—not as you mean.'

'And now answer me again. Think of those homes once more. Call to memory the playmates of your childhood—think of other homes—think of the fireside where all you have known dwelt—and tell me if you have seen any sorrows flow from the wine-cup? Have you seen any great grief planted by the intoxicating bowl upon the hearthstone?'

Henry Seaburn did not answer, for there passed before him such grim spectres of Sorrow and Grief, that he shuddered at the mental vision. He saw the youth cut down in the hour of promise—he saw the gray head fall in dishonor—he saw hearts broken—he saw homes made desolate—he saw affections wither up and die, and he saw noble intellects stricken down! Good Heaven! What sights he saw as he unrolled the canvass of his memory!

'Henry,' whispered the wife, moving to his side, and winding one arm gently about his neck, "we have two boys. They are growing to be men. They are noble, generous and warm-hearted. They love their home and honour their parents. They are here to form those characters—to receive those impressions—which shall be the basis upon which their future weal or woe must rest. Look at them—O, think of them! Think of them doing battle in the great struggle of the life before them. Shall they carry out from their home one evil influence? Shall they, in the time to come, fall by the wayside, cut down by the Demon of the Cup, and in their dying hour, curse the example whence they derived their appetite? O! for our children—for those two boys, for the men we hope to see them—for the sweet memories we would have them cherish of their home—for the good old age they my reach—let us cast this thing out from us now and forever!'

Cora heard her husband as she ceased speaking; and then he rose to his feet; but he made no reply

'Henry, you are not offended?'

'No,' he said. He returned her kiss, and without another word, left the house and went to his store.

How strangely did circumstances work to keep the idea his wife had given him alive in his mind. That very morning he met a youth—a son of one of his wealthy friends—in a state of intoxication; and during the forenoon he had heard that young Aaron G—— had died at sea. He knew that Aaron had been sent from home that he might be reclaimed.

After the bank had closed, and as Henry Seaburn was thinking of going to his dinner, he received a note through the medium of the Penny Post. It was from a medical friend, and contained a request that he would call at the hospital on his way home. The hospital was not much out of his way, and so he stopped there.

'There is a man occupying one of the lower wards, who wishes to see you,' said the doctor.

'Does he appear to know me?' asked Mr. Seaburn.

'He says he does.'

'What is his name?'

'He won't tell us. He goes by the name of Smith; but I am satisfied that such is not his true name. He is in the last stage of consumption and delirium. He has lucid intervals but they do not last long. He has been here a week. He was picked up in the street, and brought here. He heard your name spoken, and said that he knew you once.'

Mr. Seaburn went to the room where the patient lay, and looked at him. Surely he never knew that man. There must be some mistake, he thought.

The invalid heard him and opened his eyes, such bloodshot, sunken, unearthly looking eyes!

'Henry,' he whispered, endeavoring to lift himself upon his elbow. 'Is this Henry Seaburn?'

'That is my name.'

'And don't you know me?'

'I'm sure I do not.' And he would have said that he did not wish to, only the man seemed so utterly miserable that he would not wound what little feeling he might have left.

'Have you forgotten your old play-mate in boyhood, Henry—your friend in other years—your chum in college?'

'What!' gasped Henry Seaburn, starting back aghast, for a glimmer of the real truth suddenly burst upon him. 'This is not Alec Lomberg!'

'All that's left of him, my dear Hal,' returned the poor fellow, putting forth one of his wasted, skeleton hands, and smiling a faint, quivering, dying smile. 'A PATER PECCAVI!'

'Alexander Lomberg?' said Henry Seaburn, gazing into the bloated, disfigured face before him.

'You wouldn't have known me here Hal?'

'Good Heavens—no!'

'I know I am altered. Ah, Hal, "sic transit gloria mundi!"'

'But, Alec, how is this? Why are you here?'

'Run! Hal—Run! I'm about done for; but I wanted very much to see you. They told me you lived not very far away; and I would look upon one friend before I died.'

'But I had been told that you were practicing in your profession, Alec, and doing well.'

'So I did do well when I practiced it, Hal. I have made some pleas; but I have given up all that.'

'And your father—where is he?'

'Don't mention him, Hal. We've broken. I don't know him. He taught me to drink! Aye—he taught me! and then turned the cold shoulder upon me when I drank too much! But—I'm going, Hal, fast, going, going!'

Henry Seaburn gazed intently into that horrible face and remembered vividly what its owner had been; the son of wealth and indulgent parents; the idol of a kind, fond mother; the favorite boy at school, at play and at college; a light of intellect and physical beauty: and a noble, generous friend. And now—Alas!

'Alec, can I help you?'

'Yes.'

And the poor fellow started higher up than ever from his pillow, and something of the old light of other days struggled for a moment in his eye—

'Pray for me, my dear Hal. Pray for my soul that it may not be lost! Pray that I may go where my mother is! She will not disown her poor boy. She could not have done had she lived. Oh! She was a good mother to me, Hal. Thank God she didn't live to see this! Pray for me—pray—pray! Let me go to HER!'

As the wasted man sank back he fell to weeping, and in a moment more one of his paroxysms came on, and he began to rave. He thought Harry was his father, and he cursed him, and cursed the hour that had been fastened on him under that father's influence. With an aching heart he turned away and left the hospital. He could not go home to dinner then. He walked down town, away from his own home, and got dinner there. At night he went back to the hospital again. The least he could do would be to inquire for his friend, if he did not see him.

'Poor fellow; poor fellow!' said the physician, 'He never came out of that fit. He died in less than half an hour after you went out.'

It was dark when Henry Seaburn reached his home.

'You did not tell Bridget where to put those demijohns, Henry,' said his wife. She had not noticed his face, for the gas was burning but dimly.

'Ah! I forgot all about them. Come down with me, Cora, and we'll find a place for them.

His wife followed him down into the basement, and, one by one, he took the demijohns and carried them into the rear yard and when there he emptied their whole contents into the sewer. Then he broke the vessels in pieces with his foot, and while Bridget have the dirt was take the fragments away in the morning. Not one word had he spoken to his wife all the while, nor did she speak to him. He returned to the sitting room, where his boys were at their books, and took a seat upon one of the tete-a-tetes. He called his wife and children about him, and then he told them the story of Alexander Lomberg.

'And now, my loved ones,' he added, laying his hands upon the heads of his boys, 'I have made a solemn vow that henceforth my children shall find no such influences in their home. They shall never be the occasion to curse the example of their father! I will touch the wine-cup no more forever!

What of you, my boys, will you join in the sacred pledge?'

They joined with a glad, gushing willingness; for their hearts were full, and their pump there all tuned, by a mother's careful love, to Right.

'And you, Cora?'

'Yes, yes!' she cried. 'And may the holy lesson of this hour be never forgotten. Oh, God, let it rest, as an angel of mercy, upon my boys! Let it be a light to their feet in the time of temptation! And so shall they bless, through life, the influence they carry with them from their home.'

Sketch of Theodore, King of Abyssinia.

The Emperor Theodore, Mr. Dalton tells us was born about 1820, in the Province of Kwara, which is situated to the west of Lake Tzana, and of which his uncle was governor. His mother was, according to some, of low extraction; but according to others, she was of good birth, and could even trace her descent from the Queen of Sheba, the orthodox ancestress of Abyssinian royalty. Kassa, for such is the Emperor's real name, soon distinguished himself by his bravery and talent for war, and on the death of his uncle he acquired the government of the province of Kwara. He soon enlarged his dominions by the conquest of adjacent provinces, and at length, after having experienced varying fortunes, he defeated Ali Ras, of Amhar whose daughter he had previously married, and effected the conquest of the Province. The element of religion, which is so singularly blended in Theodore's character, is shown by the prayer which he publicly offered up after his victory, and which is follows:—I praise thee, O God, that Thou hast manifested Thy goodness to a poor sinner like me. Whom thou humblest is humbled, and whom Thou exaltest, is exalted. Thine is the power and glory, for ever and ever.

Being now installed at Gondar as Ras of Amhara, a rank which carried with it the nominal allegiance of the whole of Abyssinia, Kassa sent to claim tribute from Oubie, Prince of Tigre. This being refused, he marched with an army against him and, having defeated him in the battle of Deraskie, he had himself crowned as Negus Theodorus, or King of Kings of Ethiopia. His assumption of the name of Theodorus appears to have been made in consequence of an ancient prophecy that an Emperor of that name would raise the kingdom of Abyssinia to an unprecedented pitch of greatness. He then attacked the Wollo Gallas, a Mahomedan tribe between Amhara and Shoa, and defeated them in battle, in which their King, Adara Bill was slain.

Theodorus had thus made himself master of the whole of Abyssinia, with the exception of Shoa, which had long been virtually an independent state. Against this kingdom he now directed his arms, and soon succeeded in completely subjugating it, thus reuniting under his sway the whole of the so long dismantled provinces of Abyssinia. His next project was to drive the Turks from their possessions on the coast, and thus to acquire for Abyssinia an outlet on the Red Sea—an advantage which the country had not possessed since Massowa was taken by the Turks in the sixteen century. This, however, he was never in a position to attempt. His conquered provinces revolted, and the cruel element in his character which soon developed itself so alienated his subjects that they gradually fell away from him, until now he seems to hold little territory beyond that in the immediate neighborhood of Debra Tabor, which he has made his capital.

Theodorus appears to be a man of great talent, courage and energy, with a singular power of command over others. Mr. Dalton, who saw him in 1863, thus describes him: "His appearance was that of a man about forty-five, of middling stature, and possessed of a well-knit, but not over powerful frame, conveying more the idea of being tough and wiry than of a strong physical development. His complexion is dark, approaching to black, but he has nothing of a negro about him. His features are altogether those of the European.—His head is well formed, and his hair is arranged in large plaits extending back from the forehead. His forehead is high and tends to be prominent. His eye is black, full of fire, quick and piercing. His nose is a little of the Roman about it, being slightly arched and pointed. His mouth is perfect, and the smile which, during the conversation continually played upon it, was exceedingly agreeable, I may say fascinating. He has very little moustache or beard. His manner is peculiarly pleasant, gracious, and even polite, and his general expression, even when his features were at rest, was one of intelligence and benevolence. On the whole, the physiognomist could find no trace of fierce passion save in the lightning glance of his eyes. I watched for the keen shot of light coming from them at times, and reflected upon what he could be capable of, but they did not strike me as treacherous eyes. I felt that he could act savagely under irritation.' He adds in a note, 'I have taken occasion to remark, that though Theodore consumes a great quantity of arraky, he is no drunkard; that is, I have never heard of him being overcome with drink. He always stops at a certain point."

RAILWAYS.

This subject is now quite stale, and perhaps not to be revived by the people of Peterborough, not because the Town is not interested in Railway extension, but because a few oppose it. We heard some report of the branch being extended to the Mills, and perhaps to Lakefield; the latter, however, is very doubtful, as there will be some difficulty in raising money enough to secure the co-operation of Lessees. The Strickland Brothers have offered $4000, but it appears that there are $7,000 to $10,000 required to be subscribed. But the extension to Lakefield would be useless in directing the trade of the Back Lakes this way. Unless the road be extended to the Lake, Peterboro will receive but very little, if any advantage from it. During a short tour to Boggaygeon, while in conversation with business men there, all were unanimously of opinion that the entire trade of that section would come our way if they had means of direct communication with Peterboro, whereas at present the large share goes to Lindsay, although an inferior market either for purchase or sale. They are also very desirous that the Mud-lake and Pigeon Creek bridges should be constructed, in hopes that the distance may be shortened. Port Hope is agitating the question of extension back of Lindsay, say to Fenelon Falls, and a writer in the Guide, puts it thus plain, 'by extend the Lindsay Railroad, and opening navigation to Haliburton, Lindsay will become an outlet for all the country between Buckhorn and Beaverton.' Thus we find that Lindsay already sees in prospective the trade of Buckhorn within a few miles of our very doors snatched from us and passing through Lindsay, although 40 to 50 miles freight charges more than by Peterborough. The Toronto movement will hasten the extension from Lindsay, and the water communication now ensures to that Town the legitimate trade of Peterboro, and this must continue so long as we remain without railroad communication with the lakes. Surely the friends of the Port Hope branch will not act the dog in the manger; since they will not allow the Cobourg people to build the extension, they should be compelled to build it themselves.

The East, too, is looking for railway communication to the front. A meeting was convened in Belmont on Friday last to take into consideration the propriety of uniting with Brighton for the construction of a railway from Belmont to that Village. Already a good gravel road to Colborne deprives Peterboro of a large share of the trade of the east part of the County, and if a railway be constructed to Brighton we may expect to bid farewell to the trade of that section of the county too. Perhaps the opponents of progress will wake up some day to find themselves hemmed in on every side and to witness Port Hope, Lindsay and Brighton enjoying the trade that our parsimony compelled to seek egress to the front by a different route than that which nature intended.

The Rev. Mr. Punshon, of the Wesleyan Methodist body, England, has delivered several discourses and addresses since his arrival, and in every case he is highly spoken of, and crowds of all denominations flock to hear him. Cannot our good friends, the Wesleyans of Peterboro, induce him to visit our town? We should be but for one evening. We feel constrained to believe that Peterboro would give him as large an audience as many of the places he has visited. Will they make an effort?

POLITICAL.

On Thursday the following bills were severally passed:—

An Act for better security of the Crown and Government; [illegible] to the Coin; Act [illegible] specting offences against the Person; Act respecting malicious injuries to property; Act respecting larceny and other [illegible] Act respecting the duties of Justices of the Peace out of Sessions, in relation to summary convictions; Act respecting riots and riotous assemblies; Act respecting the removal of persons in custody charged with treason or felony in certain cases; Act to amend an Act of the late Province of Canada 25th Vic., cap. 72, by declaring the intention of the same, and confirming conveyances made by the Trust and Loan Company thereunder.

Charges were preferred against Mr. Justice Drummond, of Lower Canada, and also against Judge Lafontaine. The former for drunkenness, perjury and partiality; the latter for the same offences and his not paying his just debts while he was in receipt of about $4,000 yearly.

On the question of Fortification Mr. Mackenzie moved, in amendment, that all words after "That" be struck out, and the following inserted in lieu thereof:—"The question of the erection of permanent works of defence should form a subject of enquiry by a Special Commission or a Select Committee—first, as to the necessity for and utility of such works, and the relative share of burden thereof to be borne by the Colonial and Imperial authorities respectively; secondly, the system of defence deemed necessary, the character of the works, their extent, locality and cost; and that pending such enquiries and report to Parliament, it is not expedient to vote any sum of money for fortifications of the nature, extent, utility and cost of which this House is uninformed.

There was a lengthy debate in which Mr. Mackenzie opposed the plan of the Gov't. until the fullest information was given; and also claimed the right to investigate the necessity for the works, although the Imperial Government did consider them a necessity.

Dr. Parker also made an able speech against such outlays on fortifications as almost useless, and referred to the sums spent in the United States, Britain, France and Russia. He referred to the Paris fortifications, costing $28,000,000, and those of Cherbourg, costing over $40,000,000, which were now found to be useless. Cherbourg had been thought to be impregnable, but from the increased range and destructive power of missiles it was now found that the vast sum spent in strengthening it had been thrown away. The Cronstadt fortifications cost over $10,000,000, but would, like Sweaburg, have been destroyed by Napier but the barriers sunk at the entrance of the harbour. As regarded the United States, he referred at considerable detail to the military operations during the late war, to show the comparative uselessness of fortifications. The Minister of Militia had given England a wide berth in discussing the question of fortifications. There the Parliament did not proceed until after ample inquiry and after being put in possession of the fullest details. Yet the system thus adopted was a failure. He contended we had not the means as England has to waste in experiments or failures. In the 15 years up to 1862, England spent £293 millions sterling on her navy, and at the end of that time Sir John Pakington, when First Lord of the Admiralty, decided that the navy of England was useless. The fortifications commenced in England in 1861 had cost to the beginning of last year seven millions sterling, and at that time not a gun had been mounted and the works were abandoned as useless. The lesson therefore he would draw from the experience of other countries was that we might exhaust our resources of country in erecting fortifications only to find them valueless even before completed. He then adverted to the question,—could we hold them if built? and pointed out that in time of peace they would be a constant subject of anxiety and solicitude. If we had them at this time, we would be troubled about the designs the Fenians might have upon them. He then inquired as to the use they would be in time of war, and argued that, instead of their defending our homes, our wives and children, our mills, railroads, barns and herds, they would offer these up as sacrifices to the insane folly of this scheme. He proceeded to trace the history of the defence made in Canada, and said it was chiefly based on an irrational subserviency to whoever, for the time being, happened to occupy the Colonial Office.—He went on to advocate the settlement of the proportion of expense to be borne by the Dominion and the Empire in the matter of defence, and argued that there could be no reduction of the militia force if these fortifications were constructed, although the Government asserted there might be such a reduction. As to the cost, no one for a moment believed it would be only what it was stated. It would far exceed the $5,000,000. In addition, these fortifications had to be maintained at considerable cost. There were also stores and equipments to be found for them, and all the vast expense must be added to the present frightful debt of the Dominion, which he gave details to show would be increased this year by $30,000,000. This, with the amount for the purchase of the North-west, and the expenditure on the other schemes before the Government, would swell our debt to a frightful sum, increasing annually burdens on the people by nearly 2½ millions. With the exception of the opening up of the North-west, these schemes formed part of a reckless system of extravagance which the Dominion could not sustain, and which he hoped to see put an end to.—He would vote for the amendment of the hon. member for Lambton.

The amendment was lost by 102 to 51. A majority of 51 ready to rush into anything "blind" because they are told to do so, as if enquiry or information would prevent fortifications being erected; without these twice the sum voted will not suffice.

On the item of $100,000 for the Parliament Buildings, all the members who spoke condemned them as unfit for almost any thing. The rooms not half lighted, the walls damp and the style not at all in accordance with the outlay, still it passed.

The salaries of Lieut.-Governors passed with very little debate.

Imperial Parliament.

In the House of Commons on the 12th instant, the reply of the Queen to the petition of the House based on Mr. Gladstone's third resolution, was announced. The Queen says that she desires that her interests in the temporalities of the Irish Church will not in any way hinder legislation on that subject, Mr. Gladstone will bring in a bill to suspend, for the present, making appointments in the Irish Church.

OVER $5,000.—We have been informed by Messrs. Read and Thompson, who have been selling Jewelry, Watches, Electro-plated Ware, &c., during the past week, that they have sold over $5,000 worth. There can be no lack of bread amongst us when our citizens can afford $5,000 for silverware, jewelry, &c. We understand those gentlemen intend returning again about October. We believe that purchasers are well satisfied with their bargains. Mr. Read appears to have dealt very honestly and honorably in every case, declaring that if the goods were not as represented by him, the sale was not binding, and in no case have we heard of a single article being returned because misrepresented.

The cable brings the important item of intelligence that the entire domain in North America obtained by the Hudson's Bay Company, is to be ceded to the Crown. It is presumed that this is the first step towards making that vast and valuable region a part of our Dominion.

Death of Lord Brougham.

This distinguished Lawyer, Reformer, Legislator and Ex-chancellor of England, died [illegible] Sunday last, the [illegible] years. [illegible] at St. Alexis, Cannes, [illegible] ago he distinguished himself by [illegible] papers on scientific subjects. In 1800 he was admitted an advocate of the Scottish Bar. In 1804 went to London and was called to the Bar at Lincoln Inn. In 1810 he was returned to parliament for Camelford. In 1816 he was returned for Winchilsea, which he continued to represent until 1830, when he resigned and was immediately returned for Knaresborough. One of the grand events of his life was his famous advocacy of the cause of Queen Caroline, in 1820 and 1821, against George IV. In 1825 he was elected Lord Rector of Glasgow University. In August, 1830, he was chosen to represent the county of York, and became the acknowledged champion of Parliamentary Reform. On the resignation of the Duke of Wellington, Earl Grey was appointed Premier, and the Chancellorship of the new administration was entrusted to Brougham, who was at the same time raised to the peerage as Lord Brougham and Vaux.

Of late years he was almost lost sight of, his great age having almost entirely unfitted him for business of any kind, and he therefore lived in retirement on his estate at Cannes, France, up to the time of his death. During his long and active life he wrote a large number of books, on various subjects. He was one of the most astonishing workers the world has ever seen.

In personal appearance Lord Brougham is said to have been very singular and ungracious. He was a tall, thin man, with a pale, inexpressive face. But the most remarkable of his features was his nose, which has been happily described as "a marvel—protuberant, aggressive, inquiring and defiant; unlovely, but intellectual."

A COUNTY JUDGE.

Judges' decease are too often, like that of rich relations, ardently wished for. In this county the over anxiety of some interested parties has been very apparent, and that anxiety has fully equalled the troubles of the husband who was said to admire a female friend more than he did his own wife, on whose account he had been compelled to call in a physician; but he betrayed the workings of his breast by asking the doctor "was she no worse?" Our readers are aware that the present incumbent of the office, Judge Boucher, has for some time, been very unwell, although we hear of his being somewhat better. Some one, interested more in his decease than his recovery, went to the trouble of circulating petitions through the county praying for the appointment of Mr. John Shuter Smith, of Port Hope, as County Judge in case of a vacancy. What a pity that there are not enough of the family to monopolise every office in the Province. The Judge of the county of Victoria is one of the family of Smiths: the inspector of Registries is another of the family, and Mr. John Shuter has at present an office in the Assembly of Ontario; but not satisfied with that office, he desires a Judgeship as less subject to the whims of political parties.—This family however is by no means selfish, no! no! it is all for the good of the Dominion, for the good of this county in particular. We supposed when Mr. Dennistoun was appointed Deputy Judge that the matter was settled, and with that appointment the bar and the community were satisfied. Mr. Dennistoun has the respect and confidence of the members of the Legal profession of the county, and few, very few lawyers have earned a higher name for morality and uprightness. It would therefore be a downright insult to appoint Mr. Shuter Smith over him.

In regard to political favors, the Judgeship being almost always granted as such, Mr. Dennistoun's claims are as strong as Mr. Smith's. He has strongly and warmly fought for the party in power for years, and if political services are to be acknowledged, surely his will not be overlooked. We have had occasion to differ with Mr. Dennistoun during the political campaigns of the past few years. We are not, however, of those who would import a Judge while there are good men in the County. Since there are several gentlemen in the County who are qualified to fill the office, they should not be discarded because their family cognomen may not be Smith. Why not allow the gentleman referred to to retain the office he now holds, or could not the united wisdom of the Dominion create a set of offices for the family. Just let them appoint a Deputy Inspector of Registries, it will be as useful an appointment as some of the other works of their creation, for instance, the Inspector, for which there can be no earthly use whatever, except to provide for an old friend at the rate of 2,000 a year.

WHALEN'S TRIAL.

There is no intelligence yet when the murderers of Mr. McGee will get their trial. They may have to lie over to the next assizes. There have been no more arrests since our last issue, so that the public mind is a little quieted. The Hibernian Society, Toronto, will hardly be able to raise itself again although it is believed that many of its members are entirely free from even the taint of Fenianism. Only those that could be trusted were initiated into the mysteries of Fenianism. It is not wise to accuse all members of such societies as being Fenians, nor should every word of sympathy for the state of Ireland be construed into rebellion. These revelations in Toronto will serve to warn loyal men to keep aloof from those who are suspected of Fenian tendencies. Let Irishmen live in peace in Canada, ere many years knownothingism may compel them to seek a home from American insults and oppression.

The trial of President Johnson for high crimes and misdemeanors is drawing to a close, at last. The verdict will probably be returned before the end of the present week. The following are the questions the Senators have to decide:—

I. Has the President the power of removal without the concurrence of the Senate?

II. Does Secretary Stanton come within the Tenure of Office act?

III. Can the President lawfully make an ad interim appointment during the session of the Senate?

IV. Was the President guilty of misprison of perjury in scheming to prevent the operation of the Tenure of Office act?

V. Was the President guilty of a misdemeanor in making his Washington, Cleveland, and St. Louis Speeches?

The Senate will give its decision on Saturday, unless some new point shall arise.

New Dominion Monthly.—The May number of this magazine has been received. The following are the contents:—The Crucible; The Ruins of Babylon, and other Verses, Poetry; The American Methodist Family in the Gulf of St. Lawrence; Across the Wash; Poetry; A Ramble in our Canadian Woods; Poems from the German of Heine; Look at it Nearer; The Whippoorwill, Poetry; Notes of a Ramble through Cape Breton; The Opening of Spring, Poetry; Two Nights in one Life; Spring, Poetry; The Red River Settlement; Winstanley, Poetry; Baby Terrors; The Last Moments of Beethoven; An Old Man's Story; The Late Disaster at Naples; The Value of Forests; How are the Mighty Fallen, Poetry. Young Folks—The 'Tangled Web; Little Michael; An Old Story told again; Enigma, Poetry. Domestic Economy—Odds and Ends; Selected Receipts. Editorial and Correspondence—Editorial, Hon T. D. McGee; Notes concerning Steamboating on Lake Ontario; An Asylum for Inebriates. This is a deservedly popular periodical, and will no doubt yet attain an extensive circulation. The articles in this number are almost all original, and calculated to extend morality and true christianity throughout the Dominion. The terms are so moderate, only $1.00 a year, that very few are thereby debarred from having this excellent monthly for family reading.

The case of an unfortunate girl in Toronto, named Mary Boyd, who cut her throat in the Asylum is attracting much attention through the west of the Province, because as is alleged she became insane through the preaching of the Rev. Mr. Caughey, revivalist, who has been preaching to crowded churches in Toronto. The facts are against the report of excitement being the cause of the girl's insanity. The Globe says that from the testimony of the medical men, it is certain she would have been insane had Mr. Caughey never preached a sermon. It is now considered that the cause of her aberration of mind was more due to some wrong medical treatment arising out of criminal connection with the son of a doctor with whom she was living. It is doubly unjust to try to lay the cause of her death to religious excitement, when the evidence on the inquest establishes the contrary to have been the case.

A TAX ON KNOWLEDGE.—Our legislators, in their wisdom, have imposed a duty or tax of 5 per cent on books and magazines. They must be hard up when they are forced to resort to this mode of imbursing their exhausted treasury. We may not be surprised at the course they have taken. During the present session they opposed giving information on very important questions. They voted against compelling the banks to make intelligible returns. They now make another effort to prevent the spread of general information. They should impose a duty on every man that dares to read a book at all. This course, if adopted, might bring about a happy period corresponding to the dark ages.

MUSIC HALL.—Mr. Hill has now succeeded in fitting up the old Town Hall in a superb style. He has gone to considerable expense and trouble in doing so, and has made it all that could be desired. The fittings are complete, and the paintings very appropriate. We understand that he intends giving a Concert on the 4th of June, for the benefit of a Piano for the Hall, and that Mr. Gaston Smith, who is highly spoken of in Toronto, and Mr. Peiler are to be present on the occasion, when we have no doubt there will be a full house.

PETERBORO LITERARY CLUB.—This evening Mr. John Burnham will read an essay, after which the following subject will be discussed:—"Which most deserves the esteem of mankind, the poet, statesman or warrior?" The parts will be taken as follows: For the poet, Messrs. Eastwood and Dixon; statesman, Messrs. J. A. Hall and Fairbairn; warrior, Messrs. Kidd and Dumble. The chair will be taken at 8 o'clock. The public are respectfully invited to attend.

The Rev. Mr. Sullivan, late of Montreal and now on his way to Chicago where he is to labor in future, preached in St. John's Church on Sabbath last, both morning and evening. His discourses were extempore, earnest and eloquent. Many from other churches heard him in the evening, and many more would have availed themselves of the opportunity had they known that he would preach the sermon.

TERRIBLE TORNADO.—A terrible tornado passed over Goderich on the 5th instant, causing a fearful damage to property. It leveled houses, orchards, fences, and every thing that came in its way. In Chicago the darkness was such as to cause great consternation. The track of storm was confined to a narrow space, and but for this the damage would have been very great.

The Rev. Mr. McKenzie, of Baltimore, attended the Cobourg Presbytery on Tuesday, and tendered his resignation of the church in connection with the Presbytery. He also announced his intention of uniting with the Episcopal Church.

SUICIDE.—A Mr. Richard Coleman of Lynn, near Brockville, committed suicide on Wednesday last, by shooting himself. His act is traced to some pecuniary difficulty.

To the Editor of the Peterboro' Examiner.

SIR,—Would you be kind enough to inform me if the Council of the Township of North Monaghan is still in existence? as this year I have looked in vain, both in the columns of the Examiner and Review, to see any of its proceedings. Formerly this was not the case, and I only express the wishes of many that even a sketch of its proceedings should appear. I believe some blame was attributed to the late Clerk in consequence of giving publicity to certain proceedings in connection therewith, and it appears the present incumbent is determined that he shall not err in that respect.

I am, Sir,
Your ob't. Servant.
HENRY COLLINS.

A strange case was recently developed in New York. Four school girls, each about ten years of age, agreed to commit suicide by taking poison, for no conceivable reason except a morbid mania on the subject. Only one of them took the poison, however, and the druggist who sold it has been arrested, and was required to give bail for his appearance.

COUNCIL OF SMITH.

SMITH, May 12th, 1868.

The Court of Revision on the Assessment Roll of the Township of Smith held its first sitting for the current year on Monday, the 11th inst.

COMPLAINTS.

William Wood and Thomas McDougall, overcharge on taxable income. Assessment confirmed.

John Bell and William Bell, overcharge on personal property. Assessment confirmed.

Charles McCall, not bona fide occupant of 4 acres of part of lot No. 12, E. C. R, and lot No 36 in the Village of Bridgenorth. Assessment reduced $117.

Wm. Snyder, over charge of Saw Mill on pt. of 16 in the 3rd concession. Assessment reduced $1,400.

Henry Whatley, Andrew McKee, Aaron Mann and Thomas White against being assessed for one dog each. Struck off Roll.

The west ½ of lot No. 16 in the 3rd con. be erased from George Elliott's assessment and added to that of James Elliott's.

Lot No. 16 in the 5th con. erased from non-resident roll and added to the assessment of Alexander Rosborough.

The Court then adjourned until 5 o'clock in the evening and the members went into Council for despatch of public business.

Certificates of two Justices of the Peace, certifying that Michael Sanderson, Alexander Scott, John Bell and James Fowler had had sheep killed by dogs, were presented. The Reeve was authorised to issue his order in favor of said parties for the following sums:—Michael Sanderson, $3.90 - Alex. Scott, $3.50 - John Bell, $4.25; and James Fowler, $5.25.

PETITIONS

M. S. Dean and 21 others, praying that a new school section be formed to be composed of part of school sections Nos. 3 and 5.

Geo. Fitzgerald and 37 others, praying that school section No. 4 be divided into two sections: he explaining at the same time that the division was to be made in such a manner that each section should contain property of an equal amount of assessment according to the present assessment roll.

Geo. Hilliard and 40 others, praying that school section No. 4 be divided in such manner that the southern section should be composed of that part of the 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th cons. as is at present contained in said school section No. 4.

Upon examination of the assessment roll it was ascertained that the prayer of the petition of Geo. Fitzgerald and others would include all lots on the 4th con at present situate in section No. 4 except broken lots 21 and 22 and south ½ of lot No. 20; consequently, each petitioner prayed for the same property. After listening to the petitioners of each petition, who asserted that if their respective petitions were not complied with no division was wanted, the following resolution was passed: "That in the opinion of this Council it is not advisable to make any alterations in school sections Nos. 4 and 5 at present.

Josiah Hunter and James Baptie, praying that the allowance for road between lots 24 and 25 in the 6th concession be opened up.—Laid over.

Joseph Nelson and 51 others, praying for aid to erect a Drill Shed in the Village of Lakefield.—Laid over.

Francis Sanderson and 13 others praying that the road between lots 27 and 28 from the 12th to the 14th concessions be made a proper width.—Laid over.

The quarterly report of the Inspector was presented, read and adopted.

The Treasurer was instructed to pay to John Galvin the sum of $4.00 to purchase flour for Wm. Adams, and $10.00 to Gerald Fitzgerald to defray the funeral expenses of the late Wm. Mahood.

The Court of Revision was further adjourned till the 26th inst.

Fenianism Properly Characterised.

The New York Commercial Advertiser, a journal of great weight and influence among the better class of the American people, thus characterizes Fenianism:—

"The spirit of Fenianism," it says, "is not only diabolical, but unapproachable. It is to be simply and purely fiendish. It burns and slaughters wantonly. No mean sure of forbearance or magnanimity disarms or softens it. When an outrage has been committed, an appeal for pardon is responded to, only, as it appears, that a second outrage may be immediately committed.—The unprecedented indulgence of the British Government serves no purpose, but aggravates the atrocities of Fenians. Our own Government, too, constantly called upon to interpose in favor of Fenian prisoners, finds its rewards in fresh assassinations. And the insatiable spirit of Fenianism is most malignant when the British Parliament is showing the greatest wisdom and sympathy for Ireland, in the repeal of the Church Establishment. The assassination of Mr. McGee and that of the attempted assassination of Prince Alfred, are great crimes—crimes which ought to induce all law abiding Irishmen to set their faces against Fenianism."

THE COUNCIL OF R. C. BISHOPS.—This is a body, now met at Quebec, whose decisions may, and probably will, affect not only Roman Catholics, but every inhabitant of the Dominion. Such is the power of the hierarcy of Rome over elections, the Legislature, and the Administration, that whatever the Council of Bishops may resolve upon will probably be carried out. We may therefore expect fresh efforts to obtain control of education funds and education itself, and fresh plans to establish and endow ecclesiastical corporations, as also to promote the settlement of new lands by Roman Catholics.—Nothing, however, will probably be known of the plans or decisions of this secret conclave until they are worked out. What an uncomfortable state of things it is to know that our dearest interests are being affected by a body owning a foreign allegiance, and sitting with closed doors! We are opposed to all secret societies; but that of the Bishops we consider very much more dangerous than either Orangemen, Freemasons, or any other, unless it be the Fenians or Ku klux Klan.—Montreal Witness.

A STRANGE LEGACY.—Once a Week says:—"A most extraordinary legacy than that bequeathed to his fellow-citizens by Father La Loque cannot well be imagined. At his death his body was found stretched on a miserable bed in an attic of the Quartier de Grenael, which is anything but a fashionable district of Paris. He was an old man, had lived in a simple way, sustaining himself almost entirely on bread. His room contained barely any furniture; yet, hid in a corner was found a little cupboard with numerous shelves, and on these were sorted with the greatest order regiments of corks. In the centre was a manuscript, written by the Pere la Loque, on which he stated that he had formerly been in possession of considerable wealth, that all of his greatness there remained but these corks drawn in better times to welcome many a friend who had now forgotten him; that age and ruin had taught their moral, and that on each cork would be found written its history. This the old man did, hoping that it would serve as a timely warning, and that, placed on the shelves of some museum or of a philosopher's study, they might be found to illustrate human nature. One of the corks was an inscription to this effect: 'Champagne cork; bottle emptied 12th of May, 1843, with M. B——, who wished to interest me in a business by which I was to make ten million. This affair cost he 50,000f. M. B—— escaped to Belgium. A caution to amateurs.' On another appears the following note: 'Cork of Cyprus wine, of a bottle emptied on the 4th of December, 1850, with a dozen fast friends. Of these I have not found a single one to help me on the day of my ruin. The names of the twelve are annexed below.'

FENIANISM.

A large convention of the Fenian Brotherhood of Massachusetts was held in Worcester last week; $50,000 it is said were subscribed. The convention pledged itself to support General O'Neil. The following address was adopted:—

Brothers:—The Massachusetts Convention of the Fenian Brotherhood is about to terminate its session and before returning to our homes we, your representatives, desire to address a few words of encouragement and congratulation.

The present status of the Fenian organization has been laid before us, we have carefully examined the condition, policy and plans of the brotherhood and hasten to assure you that, in the judgement of your representatives here in council assembled, the organization was never on a firmer basis than it rests to-day. Brothers be of good cheer. The great struggle of 700 years is about to culminate, and soon we shall meet the oppressors face on the red field of battle. Already the tyrant acknowledges our power, already the leader of the British Parliament has openly proclaimed the potency and integrity of Fenianism. But, brothers, the concessions which the fear-stricken despots are pretending to make shall not sever us from the chosen path of duty. "England lures but to destroy," said the immortal Washington, and of the truth of that maxim we have had but too many proofs not to be thoroughly convinced. Such concessions we fling to the winds; English legislation we despise. By force of arms Ireland is held in bondage; by force of arms alone can Irish liberty be restored. Deeply impressed with the justice and holiness of Ireland's cause, and with the ability of the Irish people to achieve their independence, with full confidence in our tried and trusted leader, and humbly imploring the great God to crown our efforts with success, we have this day, as your representatives, pledged your support to the movement which General John O'Neil has inaugurated. Organize, brothers, organize everywhere, and work together in the holy cause of Irish liberty.

Give us one more chance. The promises made at Cleveland must be fulfilled for the honor of the Irish race. We have determined to unfurl the "green flag" soon again on British soil, and, for God's sake, brothers, do not let us meet the enemy unprepared. Our soldiers have sworn to fight. On your heads be the dread responsibility if they should be sacrificed in vain while trailing their devotion to Ireland's cause with their heart's best blood.

Capture of Magdala.

As soon as the English advance came in view, the Abyssinian army stood forth in grand array, as if in response to the sight. Theodorus opened at once with mortars on Napier. The British replied with the same gun. The fire from the defences having continued a short time, three thousand five hundred warriors, setting up loud shouts of joy and revenge, and chanting the national songs of triumph, dashed with great ardor down the steep height from the palace fortress, and charged the British light batteries gallantly. Napier's men stood firm and the Abyssinians were repulsed, having 700 warriors, including two prominent chiefs, killed during the engagement.

The tactics of Theodorus' officers were judicious and the courage of his soldiers was excellent.

Aware of his heavy loss, Theodorus forwarded a flag of truce to Napier, enquiring on what terms the English would negotiate a peace.

Gen. Napier replied, in the name of the Queen, that his terms were unconditional surrender.

Theodorus said he would never accept such arbitrary terms. Seeing even his present defeat, he would prefer to fight to the end. In conclusion, the King requested General Napier to take the British captives, whom he would hand over to him, and go away when they had all been released. The King refused positively a surrender for himself, and the conference was broken off.

Magdala was consequently stormed by the English a few days afterwards.

During the latest moment of the fighting after the British assault, and when driven to his last stand point, Theodorus attempted suicide on three separate occasions. He was rendered perfectly furious by his defeats.

The released captives say they saw three hundred native prisoners killed by the King's order on the 9th April

Theodorus was buried in the church at Magdala, official respect being shown to his remains.

The young Prince Theodorus will be conveyed to England and educated there.

Geebayzz, the friendly chief who aided the British army in its march through Tigre, will be duly crowned King of Abyssinia, thus introducing a new dynasty.

TWO QUESTIONS EASILY ANSWERED.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25 cts. per box.

A WARNING TO YOUTH.—A young man named Pickle, 19 years of age, committed suicide in Port Huron, on Saturday last, by hanging himself in his father's barn. He had been in the employ of Mr. M. Walker for over two years, and had the confidence of his employer to such an extent that he slept in the Jewelry Shop, and was entrusted with one of the keys of the safe; in short was respected by all, and only a few days previous became a member of the Congregational Church. For some time past Mr. Walker missed money from the cash drawer, but did not know which of his men was at fault till he took the precaution to mark some on Monday evening, and put it in the drawer after the rest of the men had left the shop. Next morning it was gone, and Pickle being the only one in the shop, his guilt became clear. On being charged with the theft he stoutly denied it, and only confessed when the money was found on him. Mr. Walker admonished him as to the consequences of his conduct, and urged him to go to his father and Rev. Mr. Hoyt, and tell them the whole story, withholding nothing. He accordingly went to Mr. Hoyt and confessed his crime, but as his father was from home, nothing further was done till he would return. Meantime, Pickle continued to be about the store, more or less, till Saturday. On Friday he was at a party, and gave hints to his companions that he would soon leave them, as his character was gone, &c., but they did not think he was in earnest. But it appears he had been, for he hung himself next morning. That he was self convicted is evident, for nothing was known of the matter, except by Mr. Walker, Mr. Hoyt and himself, up to the time he committed the rash act. His case is a warning to all youths to be faithful to the trust committed to them and to avoid the first step to dishonesty, for one false step immediately leads to another, until disgrace and ruin are the result, as in the case before us.—Sarnia Observer.

THE RIGHT OF SEARCH.—Probably no question is less understood between nations than the right of search, there is no general law laid down, and consequently they have to be governed by precedence which happened long ago; this is not the case with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer." Ancient history does not have to be traced to find out whom it has relieved from the torturous pains of rheumatism sudden colds, sore throat, burns, &c. Sold by all Medicine Dealers at 25cts per bottle.

Relief and Health to your Infants.

We have put up and sold this article for years, and CAN SAY IN CONFIDENCE AND TRUTH of it what we have never been able to say of any other medicine—NEVER HAS IT FAILED IN A SINGLE INSTANCE TO EFFECT A CURE, when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak of terms of commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "WHAT WE DO KNOW" after years of experience, AND PLEDGE OUR REPUTATION FOR THE FULFILLMENT OF WHAT WE HERE DECLARE. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper.

MONTREAL HOUSE,

VERY IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

The subscriber has much pleasure in announcing to his numerous friends that his stock of Spring and Summer Goods is now complete in every department, and that for quality, style and variety it cannot be surpassed in town, while in cheapness it cannot at all be equalled.

His Staple Goods were purchased before the late rise in Cotton, and are consequently over 30 per cent cheaper than they can now be purchased. It is his intention to give his customers the full benefit of this advantage, as he is offering these goods at a rather lower advance on cost than usual, and will continue to do so as long as they last.

In his stock will be found several cheap lots which were purchased at a bargain, and which will be offered much below their usual prices.

One lot of DRESS GOODS is offered at from 4½d to 9d per yard,

And a lot of first quality ALL WOOL CANADIAN TWEEDS is offered at from 3s to 3s 6d per yard. The 3s lot of these Tweeds cost 3s 6d to make them, and the 3s 6d lot were sold wholesale at 4s 6d per yard.

Good FACTORY COTTONS, we are selling at 4d, 5½d and 6½d per yard.

Good BLEACHED COTTONS, we are selling at 5½d, 6½d and 7½d per yard.

PRINTS, at 5d, 6½d and 7½d; the best ever seen at the money.

DRESS GOODS, in Lustres, Challies and Barèges, at 9d, 1s and 1s 3d per yard—very pretty and good.

Dress MUSLINS, very good and pretty, at 7½d per yard.

PARASOLS—a large assortment, from 3s up.

LADIES' HATS AND BONNETS,

FLOWERS—New Style.

STRAW TRIMMINGS,

BUGLE TRIMMINGS, &c., &c.

At about 25 per cent. lower than they are sold other places. We make it a point to sell our Millinery Goods at less than the customary profits.

Good Striped TICKINGS at 9d per yard,

Stripe SHIRTINGS, Blue and Brown Derrys, Straw TICKINGS, &c., &c., at very low prices.

SHAWLS—We are clearing out our Stock at cost price and under.

FANCY BONNET RIBBONS, we are selling out in cheap lots.

BELT BUCKLES selling off at cost and less than cost.

BLACK VEILS, we are selling off at almost any price.

Our reason for offering some of these things under Cost is that our stock of them is too large and we wish to reduce it.

We hope our friends will call and judge for themselves that we do not advertise what we cannot show.

CLOTHS.

We invite particular attention to our Stock of Cloths, which is one of the best assorted to be found.

Our CANADIAN TWEEDS at 3s and 3s 6d per yard, already mentioned as one of the cheap lots, every person should buy.

In FINER CLOTHS, also, we can suit any person who favors us, as our stock is so varied, and our rule is to sell on very small profits.

This department of our business is under the charge of Mr. BAKEWELL, who is now so well known as a first-class Cutter, that it is needless to make any remark upon his ability.

READY-MADE CLOTHING.

We have now on hand one of the largest assortments in Town of Spring and Summer Clothing, which we are offering at very low prices.

CALL AND EXAMINE OUR STOCK WHETHER YOU PURCHASE OR NOT.

Gentlemen's Hats, Caps, Shirts, Gloves, Hosiery, Ties, Paper Collars and Cuffs in any quantity.

CHANCERY SALE.

TO BE SOLD pursuant to a decree and order for sale, made by the Court of Chancery, in a suit of WALKER vs. THOMPSON, with the approbation of Andrew Norton Buell, Esquire, Master in Ordinary of the said Court, by

PUBLIC AUCTION,

by

ALEXANDER McNEIL, Auctioneer,

At his Auction Rooms, in the Town of Peterborough, on TUESDAY, the NINETEENTH day of MAY, 1868.

At Twelve o'clock, noon, in one lot, the following farm property, to wit:—

The south half of lot number twenty-one, in the fourteenth concession of the Township of Cavan, in the County of Durham, one hundred acres more or less. The land is situate about five miles from Peterborough Town and about three miles from Springville Village. There are about twenty-five acres cleared and fit for cultivation, the remainder is in wood which was originally partly pine and partly hardwood; the pine has been mostly removed.

The purchaser will be required to pay ten per cent of the purchase money at the time of sale to the vendor or his solicitor, and the residue, without interest, within one month thereafter. The remaining conditions are the standing conditions of the said Court.

Further particulars and conditions of sale may be had gratis at the law office of T. M. Fairbairn, Esq., Peterborough.

Dated this fifteenth day of April, 1868.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY IN CANADA.

MESSRS. Y. & O.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshanees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq., Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once, which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

Look, Read, and Learn,

THAT THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr. Lewis Josephus, of the Distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees, British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

THIS all-possessing Great Indian Remedy wanted, and in broad and emphatic language, we can safely say may be relied upon to make a permanent cure of all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, Digestive Organs, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from Impurity of the Blood, excepting the third stage of Consumption. In the Western Country where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has indeed affected some of the most Marvellous Cures ever recorded in th annels of Historical Medicine. Such being the case, in addition to its former renown and celebrity, we defy humanity to dispute the fact that this, the Great Shoshonees Remedy in connection with the Shoshonees Vegetable Restorative Pills, is the Remedy of Remedies o. the 19th Century, and the greatest boon ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity.

Varieties.

Jolly's Recreations in Science.

GEOGRAPHY.

Europe is equally and impartially divided into a variety of states, each of which is thoroughly contented with itself and its neighbors, a fact eminently conducive to the profound and universal peace that now prevails. Count Bismarck, the Emperor Napoleon, and the Russian Government have by their mild policy and self-sacrifice deserted the blessings of the whole continent.

The climate of Europe is as temperate as George Cruikshank himself. It is however, occasionally cold in Lapland, and such a thing as extreme heat has been known in South Spain.

The fauna of Europe consists of birds of prey, such as the Austrian and French eagles. The Russian Bear and the British Lion abound. Houses are found at Tattersall's, Rotten Row, and the steppes of Russian Tartary. Bulls and bears are plentiful at the various stock exchange, and great bores abound in every civilized country.

Asia was supposed by an eminent geographer to be 7,000 miles long, but on measuring it he found it 300 miles short. This continent contains a large quantity of mineral riches, as we are informed by those industrious people, the Asia Minors.

The principal bay in India is called Bombay, and a fleet of ships called calcutters, ply between there and England.

India abounds in rich vegetation; the paragoda tree is especially plentiful, and rupees (see Professor Rupe-bean) are grown extensively. The country teems with wild animals, but the natives have been very successful in taming them, as instances of, which, lions abound in Indian society, and every native prince has a tiger behind his carriage.

Afghanistan adjoins India; it is a fine country, abounding in deserts, wild beasts, robbers, and revolutions. The natives of Afghanistan are called Affianders, and the females Affiance. (N. B.—This is not generally known.

China and Japan are often classed together, though it is difficult to get them at the same shop.

Japan is a fine territory, but the Russians wouldn't like to annex it. Oh, dear no! not for Alexander. The Japanese make cotton, silk, treaties, and disturbances and occasionally war. They have two principal ports, exports and imports. The chief animals are the ty-possum and the ty-goon, but both are scarce. Read the native account, Xykopfloket imshrmulsa in the original: you will find it amusingly interesting.

All the natives of Africa are men and brothers, with the exception of females, who are as a general rule women and sisters. The Mountains of the Moon are somewhere in the undiscovered part; her exist a kind of learned sourceress known as Moon-shes. Madder-wear is so called from the universal lunacy of its inhabitants. The Barbary States are very extensive; the greater part of Africa is in some barbarous state. The Moots are more civilized than their neighbors. Their motto is "There's nothing like (Morocco) leather." The inhabitants of the Great Desert are called Bedouins, and are governed by Sheiks; but they are a sheiky nation, and must always be doing mischief. Rain seldom comes down in Egypt, but still seldomer has it been known to go up. Dahomey is too horrible a place to describe and as for Abyssinia—I think we hear quite enough of that.

America is a vast continent stretching N. and S. The whole of this slice of the world should be considered politically as belonging to the United States. The latter nation is real Pumpkins! Some! Its power and extent it wollops creation (see Description of America, by Jonathan Brag). It consists of grandiferous cities, back woods, clearings, mighty locations, and boundless prairies. The animals are 'possum 'coons, bars, buffalers, and other critters. Locomotion is carried on by means of real busters of steamboats and powerful George Francis Trains. The Andes run right slick through America the principal being Andy Johnson. Mexico is a land of volcanoes which, like the inhabitants are always breaking out. The Government is such one revolution, founded on anarchy. The same may be said of all the governments of S. America. They are always having frightful civil wars, but, according to latest advices, here are still a few people left Oceanica, the fifth quarter of the globe, consisting principally of islands, most of which were discovered by Cook and his interpid encursionists. Australia contains Victoria, and, at the present moment.—Victoria's son as well. The natives of Van Dieman's Land are going quite into a Tas manis about him. The religion of the Australian natives consist of the worship of rum. Corroborees and other robberies are very frequent. Most of the other island nations are but little known. The chief is Wongaree-hongeree-bang. The natives have various ways of cooking their missionaries. The ordinary costume is an eyeglass and a pair of knickerbockers.

SUGAR-COATED.

AFIRM and safe and reliable remedy in all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary people, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

CANCERS CURED!

By a new, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay is required, until the cure is complete. The moment a cancer is discovered, it should be cured, as it will cost less and is more speedily cured then when of longer standing, and there is nothing to gain, and everything to lose by delay. What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, eye-lid or elsewhere, or small wart or a sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given to parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. No money required in advance, and none until the cure is complete.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

And for the speedy cure of the following complaints; Scrofula and Scrofulous Affections, such as Tumors, Ulcers, Sores, Eruptions, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Blains, and all Skin Diseases.

GALLIP, Ind., 6th June, 1866.

J. C. AYER & Co. Gents: I feel it my duty to acknowledge what your Sarsaparilla has done for me. Having inherited a Scrofulous habitation, I have suffered from it in various ways for years. Sometimes it breaks out in Ulcers on my hands and arms; sometimes it turns inward and discommodes me at the stomach. Two years ago it broke out on my head and covered my scalp and ears with sore sores, which was painful and loathsome beyond description. I tried many medicines and several physicians, but without much relief from any thing. In fact, the sores grew worse. At length I was prevailed to send in the Gospel Messenger that you had prepared an alterative (Sarsaparilla), by the use of which I have been perfectly cured. I say thing, and much more to the same effect. I went to Cincinnati and got it, and used it till it ended me. I took it, as you advise, in small doses of a teaspoonful, over a month, and used almost three bottles. I am thoroughly satisfied that when I began to form under the scalp, which above a white felt soft. My skin is now sleek, and I honestly say my feelings that the disease has gone from my system. You can well believe that I feel what I can say when I tell you, that I hold you to be one of the greatest of the age, and remain ever gratefully Yours,

ALFRED B. PALLET.

St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Dropsy.

Dr. Robert M. Preble writes from Salem, N. Y., 13th Sept., 1866, that he has cured an inveterate case of Dropsy, which threatened to terminate fatally, also preserving one of our Sarsaparillas, and also a dangerous Malignant Erysipelas by large doses of the same; says he deems this common Sarsaparilla by it constantly.

Bronchocele, Goitre or Swelled Neck.

Zebulon Sloan of Prospect, Texas, writes: "Three bottles of your Sarsaparilla cured me from a Goitre—a big, bone swelling on the neck, which I had suffered from over two years."

Leucorrhœa or Whites, Ovarian Tumor, Uterine Ulceration, Female Diseases.

Dr. J. B. S. Canning, of New York City, writes: "I most cheerfully comply with the request of your agent in saying I have found your Sarsaparilla a most excellent alterative in the numerous complaints for which we employ such a remedy, but especially in Female Diseases of the Scrofulous diathesis. I have cured many inveterate cases of Leucorrhœa by it, and some where the complaint was caused by ulceration of the uterus. The ulceration itself was soon cured. Nothing within my knowledge equals it for those female derangements."

Edward S. Marrow, of Newbury, Ohio, writes, "A dangerous cancerous tumor on one of the females in my family, which had defied all the remedies we could resort to, has at length been completely cured by your Extract of Sarsaparilla. Our physician thought nothing but extirpation could afford relief, but he advised the trial of your Sarsaparilla as the last resort before cutting, and it proved effectual. After taking your remedy eight weeks no symptom of the disease remains."

Syphilis and Mercurial Disease.

NEW ORLEANS, 24th August, 1866.

DR. J. C. AYER: Sir, I cheerfully comply with the request of your agents and report in you some of the cures I have realized with your Sarsaparilla.

I have cured with it, in my practice, most of the complaints for which it is recommended, and have found its effects truly wonderful in the cure of Inveterate and Mercurial Disease. One of my patients had Syphilitic ulcers in his throat, which were consuming his palate and the top of his mouth. Your Sarsaparilla, steadily taken, cured him in five weeks. Another was attacked by secondary symptoms in his nose and the ulcerations had eaten away a considerable part of it, so that I believe the disorder would soon reach his brain and kill him. But it yielded to my administration of your Sarsaparilla; the ulcers healed, and he is well again, not of course without some disfiguration to his face. A woman who had been treated for the same disorder by mercury was suffering from this poison in her bones. They had become sensitive to the touches that on a sharp day she suffered excruciating pain to her joints and bones. She, too, was cured entirely by your Sarsaparilla in a few weeks. I know from its formula, which your agent gave me, that this preparation from your laboratory must be a great remedy; among remedy, I've truly seen kids results with it have not surprised me.

Universally yours, C. V. LARRIER, M. D.

Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint.

INDEPENDENCE, Fredonia Co., Va., 4th July, 1866.

Dr. J. C. AYER: Sir, I have been afflicted with a painful chronic Rheumatism for a long time, which baffled the skill of physicians, and stuck to me in spite of all the remedies I could find, until I tried your Sarsaparilla. One bottle cured me in two weeks, and restored my general health so much that I am far better than before I was attacked. I think it a wonderful medicine. J. FERGAL.

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Debility.

John T. Gebert, of St. Louis, writes: "I have been afflicted for years with an effusion of the Liver, which destroyed my health. I tried every thing, and every thing failed to relieve me; and I have been in bed two-thirds more for some years from no other cause than derangement of the Liver. My beloved pastor, the Rev. Mr. Espy, advised me to try your Sarsaparilla, because he said he knew you, and any thing you made was worth trying. By the blessing of God it has cured me, and has so purified my blood as to make a new man of me. I feel young again. The best that can be said of you is not half good enough."

Scirrhus, Cancer Tumors, Enlargement, Ulceration, Caries and Exfoliation of the Bones.

A great variety of cases have been reported to us where cures of these formidable complaints have resulted from the use of this remedy, but our space here will not admit them. Some of these may be found in our American Almanac, which the agents below named are pleased to furnish gratis to all who call for them.

Dyspepsia, Heart Disease, Pits, Epilepsy, Melancholy, Neuralgia

Many remarkable cures of these affections have been made by the alterative power of this medicine. It stimulates the vital functions into vigorous action, and thus overcomes disorders which would be supposed beyond its reach. Such a remedy has long been required by the necessities of the people, and we are confident that this will do for them all that medicine can do.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the Relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced stages of the Disease.

This is a remedy so universally known to surpass any other for the cure of throat and lung complaints that it is useless here to publish the evidence of its virtues. Its unrivalled excellence for coughs and colds, and its truly wonderful cures of pulmonary disease, have made it known throughout the civilized nations of the earth. Few are the communities, or even families, among them who have not some personal experience of its effects—some living trophy in their midst of its victory over the subtle and dangerous disorders of the throat and lungs. As all know the dreadful fatality of these disorders, and as they know, too, the effects of this remedy, we need not do more than to assure them that it has now all the virtues that it did have when making the cures which have won so strongly upon the confidence of mankind.

AGUA DE MAGNOLIA.

A toilet delight. Superior to any Cologne, used to bathe the face and person, to render the skin soft and fresh, to allay inflammation, to perfume clothing, for headache, &c. It is manufactured from the rich Southern Magnolia, and has obtained a patronage quite unprecedented. It is a favorite with actors and opera singers. It is sold by all dealers, at $1.00 in large bottles, and by DEMAS BARNES & Co., New York, Wholesale Agents.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

Helmstreet's inimitable Hair Coloring is not a dye. All instantaneous dyes are composed of lunar caustic, and more or less destroy the vitality and beauty of the hair. This is the original hair Coloring, and has been growing in favor over twenty years. It restores gray hair to its original color by gradual absorption, in a most remarkable manner. It is also a beautiful hair dressing. Sold in two sizes 50 cents and $1 by all dealers.

Poetry.

THE MONEYLESS MAN.

[The following was composed by the talented poet, Henry T. Stanton, Esq., of Maysville, Ky., son of Hon. E. H. Stanton. It was recited by one of the first readers on the English stage, in the city of London, and won the applause of thousands of England's most classic and refined:]

Is there no secret place on the face of the earth
Where charity dwelleth, where virtue hath birth?
Where kindness become in misery and blackness will hearse,
And the poor and the wretched shall ask and receive?
Is there no place on earth where a knock from the poor
Will bring a kind angel to open the door?
Ah! search the wide world wherever you can,
There is no open door for a moneyless man.

Go, look in yon hall, where the chandelier's light
Drive off with its splendor the darkness of night!
Where the rich shining velvet in shadowy fold
Sweeps gracefully down with its trimmings of gold,
And the mirrors of silver take up and renew
In long lighted vistas, the wildering view—
Go there, on your patches, and find, if you can,
A welcome smile for a moneyless man!

Go, look in yon church of the cloud-reaching spire,
That gives back to the sun his same look of red fire;
Where the arches and columns are gorgeous within,
And the walls seem as pure as a soul without sin;
Go down the long aisle—see the rich and the great,
In the pomp and the pride of their worldly estate—
Walk down in your patches and find if you can,
Who opens a pew to a moneyless man

Go, look in yon Judge in his dark flowing gown
With the scales wherein law weigheth equity down,
As he frowns on the weak, and smiles on the strong,
And punishes right, while he justifies wrong;
As the jurors thin lips on the Bible have laid,
To render a verdict they've already made—
Go there, in the court-room, and find if you can
Any law for the cause of a moneyless man.

Go, look in the banks, where Mammon has told
His hundreds and thousands of silver and gold;
Where as from the hands of the starving and poor,
Lies pile upon pile of the glittering ore;
Walk up to the counter—ah, there you may stay,
Till your limbs grow old and your hair turns gray,
And you'll find at the banks no one of the clan,
With money to lend to a moneyless man!

Then go to yon hovel,—no raven has fed
The wife who has suffered too long for her bread;
Kneel down by her pallet, and kiss the death-frost
From the lips of the angel your poverty lost;
Then turn to your agony upward to God,
And bless, while it smites, the chastening rod;
And you'll find at the end of your life's little span,
There's a welcome above for a moneyless man!

The Meeting of the Irish Protestants at Portadown on the Irish Church.

(Northern Whig, April 27.)

A fortnight ago it was announced that the meeting at Portadown was to be another and greater Hillsborough demonstration. It was not to be a mere country gathering in Armagh. The Protestants of all the province of Ulster were invited to attend. The contenors observed, complacently, through the local Tory organ, that Hillsborough was inconveniently situated for a very numerous meeting—a remark which really admitted that the assembly of the last 30th of October was the failure all impartial observers had pronounced it to be. But Portadown was on the direct line of railway between Dublin and Belfast. It was an important junction; the most central place in all Ulster, with communications branching off in different directions. At Portadown, therefore, if anywhere a great Protestant demonstration could be held. The meeting was even postponed until Saturday, the 25th of April, in order that, as was authoritatively announced, it might take place just before the commencement of the great discussions on Mr. Gladstone's resolutions in committee. The effect, therefore, was to be tremendous. The 330 members of the House of Commons, Mr. Gladstone, and the whole Liberal party, were to be awed, and compelled to pause in their evil work by the voice of Ulster Protestants assembled at Portadown in defence of the Irish Establishment. That there might be no mistake this time, no chance of failure, the Marquis of Downshire, "the Protestant hero," as he was called, and not allow his humbler secretaries of the Ulster Defence Association to fix their names to the proclamation. It was signed by himself as president. This, the Marquis of Downshire said, was the "great crisis of Irish Protestantism," and he exhorted the Protestants of all denominations "to show by our presence at the meeting that we are resolved to defend our Protestant endowments with all our energy and with all our strength." The Duke of Manchester, the territorial magnate of Portadown, was also, as it was declared, to take the chair. The attendance, therefore, of the tenants of Marquis of Downshire and the Duke of Manchester was secured. So, also, was the presence of the tenants of the Marquis of Hertford, who, as a compensation for his long absence from his Irish estates, has a dean of the Church of England for agent—an arrangement which, anywhere out of Ireland, would be regarded with some surprise, as there is a prejudice, not confined to Protestants, about uniting in one person the somewhat incompatible duties of the Temple and the money-changer. Saturday, too, was market-day at Portadown. Special trains were announced. This last Saturday was, also, a very fine day; so much so, indeed, that one of the orators at the meeting remarked Providence was, through the sun, obeying the exhortation of the Marquis of Downshire, and "speaking" out in favour of the Irish Establishment.

The Orangemen of the district of Armagh and the neighborhoods more under the influence of the landlords than the Orangemen of Belfast are, showed little interest in the proceedings at Portadown. They cheered, of course, at the old stock allusions to the Battle of the Boyne; but there was no enthusiasm, no zeal. Every person on the platform knew well, and the scanty assembly testified to the fact, that the Irish Establishment could not be maintained. The spirit of the meeting was very different from that in Mr. Spurgeon's Tabernacle last Wednesday night. The "speaking out," too, was of very indifferent quality; it was dreary in the extreme; and the audience gradually lost interest in stale rhetoric and bombast, without any approach to eloquence. It may be well enough to "speak out," but it is better surely to "speak out" well. This none of the speakers could do. Stewart Blacker, Esq., was, of course at Portadown, and on appearing on the platform was greeted by an enthusiastic friend as "the invincible, the indefatigable, and the inevitable Blacker;" but he contented himself with "speaking out" the names of the different orators as they rose to move or second the resolutions, and did not "speak out" on his own account. He justly thought his presence enough. The Duke of Manchester, on taking the chair, was obliged to confess that he had been looking for some hunting in Ireland, but had instead caught a cold, and therefore could not "speak out." Sir Thomas Bateson, too, had to apologize for his voice, but confessed that he wanted voters and not speakers, which was not complimentary to those who, like one Fellow from Trinity College, Dublin, had come down only to speak out.

The youthful Lord Massereene attempted to "speak out," but could not, declaring that he was quite unaccustomed to public speaking. There was, however, one gentleman,—the Rev. J. D. Elliot,—who was announced as a Presbyterian minister; and the audience seemed delighted, not with his speaking out, which was very poor, indeed, but with the fact that they had, at all events, caught one, though only one, Presbyterian clergyman. We willingly make the Ulster Defence Association and the Irish Establishment a present of the Rev. J. D. Elliot, Presbyterian minister of Portadown. They had been unable to hook even one Wesleyan clergyman. The Fellow of Trinity College and the Rev. J. Flanagan not unknown to fame, and another clergyman of the Church of England as yet unknown, did "speak out" with a vengeance. How these gentlemen looked down upon Mr. Gladstone and his resolutions, and how deeply Mr. Gladstone would have been affected by their ineffable superiority and genuine Protestant indignation! The Fellow of Trinity College, Anthony Traill, Esq., said that he must speak out, and that, if he and his friends were not to speak out, the very stones would cry out

The Portadown meeting has, therefore, spoken out. If the Rev. John Flanagan and other clergymen had their way, there would be civil war in the country. But the meeting was insignificant, the speakers were insignificant, and the "speaking" had no meaning. It fell flat even upon the ears of those who were willing to applaud. Everything about such gatherings as this of Portadown, about the agitation, and about the Irish Establishment itself is false and hollow.

(Dublin Evening Mail, April 28.)

There has been a great open-air meeting at Portadown, presided over by the Duke of Manchester. His Grace, in some opening remarks, threw out an approval of the policy of "levelling up," and almost every speaker who followed distinctly reprobated the scheme, which would differ in its effect from Mr. Gladstone's in that it would destroy not the Church alone, but State and Church together. It might be tedious to cite those strong expressions of opinion, but we may take for granted that the petition prepared by the Committee and adopted unanimously, embodied the views of the thousands assembled, both those on the platform and in the field. This petition, having condemned Disestablishment and Disendowment in a sentence affirms that the carrying of any measure for destroying the position of the Protestant Established Church would not only be a violation of the solemn compact of the Union, "but an inroad upon the Constitution of the realm," and "would favour the establishment of the dominion of a foreign priesthood, avowedly hostile to all British connection and authority against any establishment or endowment of which your petitioners do protest." Let Mr. Disraeli and his Irish colleague ask themselves why it is that at all Protestant meetings in Ireland what is understood to be their proposal, and not Mr. Gladstone's, is placed in the forefront of condemnation. They are everywhere looked on as the prime movers of revolution. No words were cheered more loudly at Portadown than when a speaker averred that "he did not recognise the name Conservative—he appeared there as a protestant." The Presbyterian body, at the cost of seeming to be helpers in abolishing their own Regium Donum, have felt called on to repudiate the same resolution; and yesterday the Presbytery of Dublin, at the suggestion of two leading Presbyterians, the Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick and the Rev. Fleming Stevenson, resolved: "That as the gravity and urgency of the present crisis demand the prompt expression of our convictions, we hereby overture the Synod of Dublin to declare that the indiscriminate endowment of religious denominations in Ireland would be peril to the highest interests of our country, and to our position as a Church of Christ." The alarm which the "all Churches-alike" idea has produced increases, from the significant resistance of the Roman Bishops since the project was started, and the new Holy Alliance ratified with Cardinal Cullen. No manifesto in aid of Mr. Gladstone proceeds from them; but, on the contrary, an article, translated by a Protestant contemporary, the English Independent, from the known organ of the dominant clerical faction in Rome—the Osservatore Romana—raise suspicion to a certainty, that the Papal party prefer Mr. Disraeli's "letting up" to Mr. Gladstone's "letting down." Mr. Gladstone is treated in the Roman journal as one whose interference spoils a negotiation and a policy. The Osservatore says:—"The Government consents that the fact should pass into a right, and is prepared to recognise the Catholic Archbishop of Dublin (the italics are the Osservatore's). Then, having recognised the Catholic Archbishop of Dublin it requires only one step more to recognise also his Episcopate, and assigning to him a suitable endowment (una congrua dotazione) with all the temporal rights belonging to his office. The Cabinet of London would therefore have recognised the Catholic Church in Ireland; it would have restored to it a part on, at least, of the property which had been taken away from it; the rights of the Catholic Church would consequently have extended themselves along the field at present usurped by the Anglican Church which would necessarily see its privileges restricted; a simple act, which would by-and-by take away the same assigned to the heretical prelates in Ireland, would perhaps have sufficed to abolish indirectly that Anglican Church in Ireland which Mr. Gladstone wishes to suppress directly, and principally for party purposes."

The Attempt to Assassinate Prince Alfred.

(Morning Post, April 27.)

After the first feeling of amazement and horror at the attempt to assassinate Prince Alfred, and that too at a festive meeting where he had gone to promote a charitable and benevolent purpose, is over, many serious and painful thoughts will involuntarily arise in the mind. It is not only that there is no crime too wantonly cruel and utterly useless for the Fenians to perpetrate, but that members of the society capable of such enormities are to be found apparently in every region of the earth. At this very time the trial of persons charged with being implicated in the Clerkenwell explosion, which killed or crippled for life numbers of the poorest class, is in progress at the Central Criminal Court. The Prince and Princess of Wales had scarcely gone on their mission of goodwill and conciliation to Ireland when Mr. Featherstonhaugh was shot in the public highway. The news had just arrived that Mr. D'Arcy McGee, one of the most useful and patriotic statesmen in Canada, had been shot at his own door. Of the men captured with Fenian fire in their possession in the vicinage of Buckingham Palace we will say no more than that the matter is, we hope, in progress of being cleared up. Such incidents as these bring to mind the declaration stated to have been put forth some time ago from a Fenian source that for every Fenian convict executed "the life of some prominent Englishman should be exacted," and are of a nature to make us fear that this will turn out after all no empty idle boast.

If the assassin O'Farrell had succeeded in taking the life of the Duke of Edinburgh, what possible effect could that have had, except in bringing Fenianism into greater odium—if, indeed, that be possible—than it was in before? Has there not been innocent blood enough shed already to make the name of this conspiracy pass in history as synonymous with Thuggism? If the object of Fenianism is murder pure and simple, if it begins and ends with the shedding of innocent blood for the mere sake of it, such crimes would be intelligible enough; but upon any other theory they appear inexplicable.

Lord Belmore's telegram, dated 31st March, from Sydney, reports his Royal Highness to be progressing favourably.—The previous intelligence stated that on the 20th March he had sufficiently recovered from the effects of his wound to be able to go on board his ship and resume his duties. His escape, however, was a hair-breadth one indeed. The bullet seems to have entered the Prince's back only half an inch from the spine, to have struck which must have been certain and speedy death, or a lingering illness worse than death. The force of the impact carried the ball round the ribs against which it struck and swerved, finally lodging at a point five inches from the umbilicus, and not quite that distance from the right nipple, having made a transit of more than a foot in length. The pain and the shock to the system from such a wound as this must have been very great; and his Royal Highness seems to have borne it like a man. The assassin O'Farrell did not hesitate to declare himself a Fenian. He appears also to have been prepared to sacrifice as many lives as he could to prevent his own capture. Arrested on the spot, he fired a second time, the ball penetrating the foot of a gentleman named Throne who happened to be present. As usual in cases of peculiar atrocity, we find it reported "that the defence to be set up is insanity;" and indeed Fenianism itself would appear to deserve classification in the category of malignant madness of the worst form. But if malefactors of this sort can be deterred from crime by dread of punishment, society, in self-defence, is interested in seeing that it be duly administered. We have yet to learn that persons whom some authorities may choose to consider mad, while others may consider them sane, are not to be influenced or controlled by fear of punishment; and as the prevention of crime is the first end of punishment, it ought to be inflicted in every case where such a motive is shown to operate on the mind of those sought to be kept in order by it.

What quadrupeds are admitted to balls, operas and dinner parties? White kids? Sometimes the goats go with them.

The most unhappy of all men is he who believes himself to be so.

When is a man like a looking glass? When he reflects.

When is a donkey like a bullet? When he's led (lead).

Conclusion of the Abyssinian War and Death of Theodore.

(Times, April 27.)

King Theodore is dead. The captives have been rescued. The British loss is about ten wounded. The army will return immediately. Never surely in the history of war has there been an expedition undertaken with such reluctance, planned with such precision, and perfected with such despatch and completeness as that over the success of which England will this day rejoice. Sir Robert Napier might write, with Cæsar, "Veni, vidi, vici." On Good Friday he had brought his forces within two miles of Magdala. The enemy was in force, and posted in a very strong position. Their camp was visible on a precipitous height. The natural ravines they commanded had been made more difficult of approach by escarpments, and it was doubtful in what way the attack would begin. The enemy opened the battle. They attacked the 1st Brigade, but were repulsed with great slaughter, and the moral effects of the defeat were even more important than its immediate result. The next day King Theodore tardily offered to treat, but was even then unwilling, as it would seem, to acknowledge the hopelessness of his position. An unconditional surrender of all the captives was demanded, though it was indeed feared that the English prisoners had been killed. On that day, however, and the next, Theodore sent into the British camp every European in his power, both the captives and artificers, but still declined to surrender himself into Sir Robert Napier's hands. Twenty-four hours were given him to decide, and, still resisting, Magdala was stormed on Easter Monday, this day fortnight. The assault was conducted under cover of the Armstrong steel guns, the 8 inch mortars, and the rocket battery, and was completely successful. It is indeed true that by that time the Emperor seems to have lost all command over the mass of his forces. The most formidable position without the city had been surrendered, and the Abyssinians had laid down their arms by thousands. But Theodore was still resolute, and a band of faithful adherents still defended him. It was in vain. He might and did resist desperately; but he was fighting against impossibilities. If we may credit one account, it would appear that in the decisive moment of his fate he was not unmindful of his Imperial pretensions. The wilfulness of the man was manifested even then. He killed himself with his pistol as the British troops approached him, and thus escaped indignities which his own practices presented to his imagination. Other despatches simply say that he was killed, but, however it occurred, the fact was certain, for his dead body was recognised by those who had lately been his prisoners. With his death the war terminated. The captives had been released. The tyrant had spared us all pains of considering what punishment should be inflicted for his contumacy. Sir Robert Napier was preparing to march homewards with the rewards of his victory.

The suddenness, the decisiveness of the success—the absolute extinction of Theodore and his power—cannot surprise us. If once our soldiers were confronted by the enemy the result was certain. The contest between an English army with Englishmen and an Abyssinian force of untrained, if gallant men, was seen to be, and, in fact was so hopeless that not even the thoroughness of the triumph should tempt us to mere exhultation over the enemy. Our twelve-pounder Armstrongs silenced the artillery. Our disciplined men could find no foemen worthy of their training among his followers. We need not boast the "our Chassepot did wonders." The special merit of the Abyssinian campaign was not that it was a victory over the Abyssinians, but a victory over Abyssinia itself. Nature fought against us, and no organization defeated this worst of antagonists. The greater part of the long march from Annesley Bay to Magdala has been brought before us so vividly by our correspondents that the English nation has been able from first to last to accompany the army in its difficulties. "In it too much" say that nothing like it has been attempted much less accomplished, since Suwarrow led his forces over the St Gothard, or we too vain in remembering that his struggle with the adverse powers of nature was less protracted than the labours of the Abyssinian expedition? Sir Robert Napier has had to pick out his way and to make his road over almost every inch of his march. The last letters from the camp, which we print to-day, tell the same story we have received throughout, of toilful advance up precipitous cliffs, over mountain heights, along narrow ledges of rock overlooking yawning ravines. They add the pains of intense cold at heights 12 000 feet above the sea level. Even when these obstacles seemed for a moment to have been passed, an inhospitable wilderness has commonly succeeded, soon to give way again to Alpine passes. That there should have been occasional defeats of one or the other branch of the service on such a march cannot be surprising; the wonder is that any successful organization should have been continuously possible. We may well be proud of a general who could plan and conduct an expedition like this, and of an army that could be trusted to respond to the spirit of its leader. We can understand and sympathize with the personal anxiety felt by the whole force as it neared Magdala, lest Theodore should retire and attempt to wear them out in endless pursuit of him and his captives. Well accredited rumours had predicted such tactics. But Theodore had sworn that "though all his other soldiers should fly, he and his standard-bearer would alone face the British," and, to do him justice, he kept his oath. It is, indeed, impossible, viewing him on his last hour, not to feel some pity for the man who has compelled us to crush him. In his wildest freaks of passion, even in his savage brutalities, there was a singular consistency. He was of the stuff of which many an Eastern conqueror has been made. Endowed with intense personal will, great courage, and wide designs, he was yet incapable of self-control, and wholly unable to understand the power of a civilization higher than his own. Unhappily for himself he provoked conflict with the arms of the West.

"The army will return immediately.—The simple statement with which Sir Robert Napier closes his telegraphic despatch announcing the victory is the best commentary that can be made upon our motives in entering upon the Abyssinian war. The speedy withdrawal of the forces from Abyssinian territory will be a complete answer to the insinuations of foreign cities. The death of Theodore happily relieves us from all embarrassment in performing what must in any case have been an inevitable duty. As it is, our mission in Abyssinia has been completely accomplished. We have redeemed the captivities of the Crown, and with them all European captives, from the painful slavery they experienced.

ABYSSINIA.

The Abyssinian war has ended much sooner and much more successfully than was feared. Another name has been added to the list of heroic Napiers, who have done such service for England by land and by sea. The captives have been released and the English flag vindicated. So little was known of Abyssinia, that no accurate date of the probable duration and success of the war could be fixed. It was a terra incognita, and all the evils of pestilence, impassable wilderness, want of food and water, were imagined. Even the strength of the savage he could only be dimly conjectured. The touch-tone of Anglo Saxon energy has been applied, and they have shrunk away like a mirage. The work is done. The Abyssinian expedition is the only one of the late wars of England in which the sympathies of the civilized world were fully with her—the Crimean war was caused by jealously of Russia, and even the Sepoy rebellion, notwithstanding its unmanigable atrocities, it could not be forgotten how much the inhabitants of India had suffered from the greed of England. In the Abyssinian war it was not jealousy of a rival power, it was not greed or revenge that was the cause. The war was reluctantly undertaken to release a handful of English captives, unjustly held in loathsome confinement by a barbarous and cruel Prince. Every device of long suffering and patience was tried to obtain their peaceful release, and only after the last hope was abandoned, the costly expedition was sent out. Although the war may bring little to the commercial or territorial wealth of England, yet it will not be without its substantial results. England could not afford to have her citizens imprisoned, and her flag defied by an American despot.—The safety of all her citizens, whom commerce or curiosity may bring to the regions within reach of the story, would have been imperilled, if no punishment had fallen upon Theodore. Every petty chief would have felt able to imprison and rob them at will. The terror of the English name, which is now so potent a shield, would have been no protection. It is only another striking example, that the honor of nations is their most precious possession, even in a material point of view. A nation that has shown itself ready to send an expedition, which has cost millions, to release a handful of men, has thrown an invisible mantle around all who claim the English name, wherever on earth's surface they may wander.—*Taunton (Mass.) GRANT ON METHODISM.

The Philadelphia correspondent of the Cincinnati Times writes, truly or otherwise:—

Grant, Grow and Curtin occupied the General's pew in our fashionable uptown Methodist Church last Sunday to the perfect astonishment of everybody. For a short while the distinguished party sat in cognitia, but gradually the name of Grant was whispered around, and finally first one and then another of the "aujince" arose and took a good rear, or profile view of the "little man of destiny." When the salvers passed around for the collection, the almoner walked quickly by Hiram's private pew without even the usual sigh and sanctimonous pause, but Grant was not to be passed here any more than "on the road."

He quickly "made his feet," and extending his hand over the elegant salver, paid his entrance fee and rent of pew by dropping a greenback on the plate The deacon bowed his thanks, and as each moved up to the altar with his collection, he winked and blinked, nodded, and made other significant but utterly unintelligible signs to the minister and two of the elders in the pulpit. It was all to no purpose. The reverend gentleman preached as he had first intended, upon the subject of the need of a more general charity among the people in behalf of the great work of the Church.

"Why do you like the Methodists, General?" finally asked Curtin.

"Because their religion is one of hard knocks. They take hold of a man and never let him drop until they have either converted him, and scared him so he will say his prayers some time in his life, and thus be saved," said Grant with a smile.—"Then, too, it is an American religion.—We Methodists are entirely Democratic, yet no Church appreciates the value of union, federalization or centralization in govern ment more than the Methodists. I wish that our National Government had the liberty and the strength that it ought to have from a proper exercise of these principles."

Grow and Curtin were both too much struck with these remarks to continue the conversation, and so the matter dropped.

Assassination Plot in Montreal.

A man named Duggan, a saloon keeper, was arrested in Montreal on the 13th and two accomplices on the following day. On examination it appeared that a Committee of 24 Fenians, twelve Americans and twelve Canadians, entered into a plot to do a certain job. A witness heard one of them say:—"My God! if McGee only knew what is in store for him, wouldn't he leave the country?"

Witness also heard one say, "Smith, you did that job of burning the Orange Lodge first rate."

Another, "Yes, Sullivan, it was —— well done."

The boss (Duggan) said:—Blazes, boys, what the —— is the use of calling him Smith and Sullivan, when you know —— well his name is Whelan!"

The witness was brought to the Ottawa Jail and identified Whelan as the man whom he had heard addressed as Smith and Sullivan.

It will be remembered that Whelan, at Quebec, went by the name of Sullivan, and that one of the men who called on McGee was named Smith.

The witness also identified Slattery, in Ottawa jail, as another party whom he met there.

This Slattery has been known to the Ottawa authorities for some time as the Canadian Fenian orgniser from the United States.

The efficacy of Bryan's Pulmonic wafers in curing Coughs, Colds, and all Bronchial affections has passed into a proverb. In the United States, where these marvellous Wafers are known, they bear down all opposition and eclipse all rivals; the demand for them has steadily increased for the last twenty years, until now the averave ove one hundred thousand boxes a year. Eminent members of the medical profession without number admit that they know of no preparation producing such beneficial results as these wafers. When taken in season they effect a permanent cure. Sold by every druggist and most of the respectable stores throughout the Provinces, at 25 cents per box.

PARLIAMENTARY.

The business of the House is being hurried through as fast as Ministers can to suit their purposes. The House will be prorogued on Friday, it is said, and already many of the members have left for home. The Insurance Bill was to be discussed yesterday, and the opposition were determined to oppose the government measure to raise money. By it insurance companies will be compelled to lodge so much of their capital with the Receiver General, which is to be invested in Government Dominion Stock, and thus the capital of the company to some extent can be used to keep up the Government Treasury.

The Insolvency Bill was also being hurried through, and the act for patents of invention.

The Bill to secure the independence of parliament will be passed according to the wishes of J. A., although strongly opposed by Messrs. Holton, Blake and McKenzie. The opposition hold that if the bill becomes law, even the members of the House can be appointed to offices under the crown without compelling them to go to their constituents again. The Premier held that was the case even under the present law.

Hon. Mr. Holton, said that there were at this moment two members of this house awaiting the passage of this bill and the close of the session to receive two such appointments, one to be Sheriff of the District of Three Rivers, the other to be Prothonotary; and next session we would have a Sheriff and Prothonotary sitting in this house without even (as they must have done thirty years ago) having had to go before their constituents. It was impossible to imagine a more corrupt and corrupting system than the Minister of Justice proposed to introduce by this Bill.

Several of the members express themselves as if the Bill is another movement for the retention of power indefinitely, by enabling the Privy Council to tamper with Parliament by giving temporary appointments, and will pave the way for the grossest corruption.

Mr. Blake moved to make the Bill so that no one holding temporary or permanent employment, or receiving emoluments or profits of any kind could be eligible to election; but this was lost on a division.

The Militia Bill, we believe, will not be found satisfactory to those whom it will most affect. And it is to be feared that it will not produce a greater number of trained men at any one time than were available under the old, but we may rely on it that it will be more costly.

QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY.

The Queen's Birthday falling on Sunday this year the civil authorities have decided that Monday shall be kept instead thereof. The Physicos, however, will not gratify the citizens with their pleasant faces, nor do we hear of any great excitement to take place in town.

EXCURSION TO RICE LAKE.

Mr. Hales, of Wallace's Point, however, comes to the rescue, and proposes having an excursion to Rice Lake on that day. The Maggie Hales has been running regularly for the last two weeks, and we learn is in good order. Parties may, therefore, rely on a pleasant trip down our noble river and a pleasant day among the islands of Rice Lake. She will leave Howden's Landing, a little way below the locks, about eight o'clock in the forenoon and the managers propose being back again by 7 o'clock in the evening. Thus lovers of pleasure will have a chance of a pleasant sail if the day be fine.

KEENE.

There will also be a trip from Keene to the Belmont Iron beds, when the beautiful steamer Otonabee will take the party to the Narrows and bring them back again; hence the day may be spent by going to either the lake or the mines, as parties may please. We hope the day will be fine enough to enable all to spend it pleasantly.

The Stabbing Case and Fenianism.

In another column will be found the particulars of the stabbing case that has caused so much stir, and concerning which so many wild rumours have been afloat, concerning Fenians being amongst us, and concerning Cooney who is now in jail as being an emissary from the United States. We can hardly speak in too strong terms of the man who carried such weapons as were found on him, as most assuredly unfit to be at large. The pistol, a six shooter, is unfit to be carried about by any man, and the dagger is one of those fiendish instruments that sometimes we read of in use in the South only. Any man walking the streets with such instruments of death about him, is unsafe, and should be cared for.

The following acrostic was found in his pocket book:—

Just beneath his genius—his brilliant eyes
Are like a volcano of the skies:
Mistaken read his name with joy, Success read and weep;
Every thought of his mind like sand as silent as the deep;
Such is his mien—none can truly spell.

Close enquiry his stern glance would tell.

Calm, weary, yet the change, let more than Solon pause,
On him—patriot, warrior, chief of marshal laws.
On his war-horse, with flashing mien in his hand,
No foe can calm, no tyrant can command
Even though he dark eyes hews shade a glance of fire,
Yet patriots love, trust—know one way—admire.

The poetry appears to refer to himself in some way, yet in what particular respect the character of his poetic imagry would accord with his character we are not able to understand. There was also the photograph of a young lady in the pocket book.

On his coming to town as a prisoner it was rumored that the cause of the affray was some argument that the man Cooney had about a week or so since in Ennismore concerning the murder of Mr. McGee. In this debate Cooney appeared to sympathise with Whelan, the murderer, and to be against McGee. This at once led many to fear that Fenianism was at the bottom of the matter. It was also rumored that Cooney had been in Ennismore trying to organize a Fenian circle, hence the excitement that he was a Fenian. Unfortunately the Mayor did not act with that promptness that he should have done. He appeared to think there was great need for deliberation, and in view of the great crowds that were around the office he determined to remand the prisoner till Tuesday. In this we believe he did not act with that readiness that he should have done. Then was the time to try him and learn the strength of the reports that had gained currency. Then was the time to get at the truth and to seize his trunks and papers if there was the least suspicion of Fenianism. To cap the climax, the constables would not take him to jail alone. This was a piece of weakness we were not prepared to believe. The military had to be brought out to take one man to jail, and he not directly charged with Fenianism. His crime was an attempt to commit murder. It was not a Catholic again t an Orangeman or an Orangeman against a Catholic and why fear an attempt to rescue the prisoner. In calling out the Volunteers the imputation is set forth that our towns-men are largely Fenian, or else aiders and abettors of would-be murderers. Surely if they had paused for a moment they would have hesitated in calling out military force. Cooney was remanded, however, but the excitement about Fenianism did not abate, it rather increased. On Monday, intelligence was received that Lehane dare not come down to give evidence in the matter for fear of his life. The magistrates, therefore, had to send up constables to bring him down. While these men were there all was quiet.

It leaked out, however, that Mr. Devlin, a lawyer of the Town, and Mr. Geo. T. Leonard, a Law Student, had gone to Ennismore in the mean time, and the report was that they were endeavoring to prevent the witnesses from appearing. Mr. McFaldin also asserts that witness told him that Messrs Devlin & Leonard had offered him a large sum of money not to appear, but to leave the country; to which he replied that such a course would inevitably convict Cooney of being a Fenian.

Messrs. Devlin and Leonard were in Ennismore on Monday or Monday night and Tuesday morning, and we cannot rob ourselves of the strong suspicions that their presence there casts over the community. Mr. Devlin assures us that he went there on business of a legal nature, connected with some Mrs. Johnston, and that Mr. Leonard accompanied him; but it seems strange that they must go on that particular day. Their being there and the general rumours, allow of room for accusing them of more than honorable legal practice; nay, it does worse, it leaves room for the impression that they feared some new revelations. Mr. Devlin also tells us that this was the last day the law allowed for settling the cause of his client, and feels indignant that his going about his lawful business should get mingled up with reports of Fenian tendencies. It may be to be regretted. We do not accuse him, but we do say it would have been more becoming to have allowed the parties to work their own way. No less than three lawyers all claimed to be acting for the prisoner. Why need so many?

There are reports of a Fenian circle being in town, and it is to be regretted that the action of our town authorities on Saturday night seemed to favor the idea.

THREATENING.—Major Kennedy, we believe, has received a threatening letter, telling him that his end will be like McGee's, and Constable McFadden has had his coffin drawn and sent to him, with a revolver drawn beside it, and the letters J. D. C. written in bold style. Now why is this? May it not be asked what class of our citizens would do this? The fact is, if men are to be threatened for doing their duty, or shot for expressing their opinion on any subject, the sooner we know this the better.

The investigation was with closed doors in the jail. Now, why? Is the entire magistracy of the County afraid? Is the crime of such a nature, or are our citizens such outlaws, that Cooney could not be tried as any other man, accused of stabbing or shooting with intent to kill. Really, what a pass matters have come to. If there are Fenians amongst us let them be ferreted out and punished, and when an opportunity offers of getting at any of the Brotherhood let it be embraced. But why by our acts lay the charge to every Catholic? On the other hand every loyal Catholic citizen should consider it an honor and a something due to himself to root out the cursed thing, and we trust that lawyers will see that they cannot go where there is even a suspicion of foul play being attempted, or if they do, let them rest assured that public opinion will not hold them guiltless.

President Johnson, we believe, will get leave to occupy the White House to the end of his term. The impeachment case has failed.

There is nothing new about Whelan's trial.

Shooting and Stabbing Affair.

FENIAN EXCITEMENT.

On Saturday evening a stabbing and shooting affair took place, which caused considerable excitement and for a time led to the general idea that there was going to be some revelations that would bring to light whatever of Fenianism there might be in this town or perhaps county. On that evening, about 7 o'clock, one James C. Cooney waylaid and attacked Thomas S. Lehane, of Ennismore, with intent to shoot and kill. Mr. Lehane was going home from Peterboro accompanied by his wife and Martin Corkery, and had proceeded about a mile from town, when Cooney was seen sitting on the road side. As soon as Lehane came up Cooney crossed before the team and coming to the side on which Lehane was sitting, ordered him at once to stop; here after some parleying a severe struggle ensued, during which Cooney attempted to stab Lehane and also Corkery, and after a severe struggle they succeeded in securing Cooney, but not until Corkery received a wound of a dirk knife in the head, and Lehane had his hand cut in endeavoring to take the dirk from him. The dirk is a murderous looking weapon, about seven inches long with a handle and guard for the hand, it is double-edged, polished like a sword blade and pointed, and would only be carried by a man who had murderous designs in view. After wresting the dagger from him he attempted to get the revolver which he succeeded in doing, and fired one shot which fortunately did no damage, he then made a desperate effort to fire another shot but was prevented by wresting the pistol from him. They succeeded in binding him with a horse line and brought him to town, when he was remanded till Tuesday. The following is the evidence at the investigation:—

Thomas S. Lehane sworn,—Saw the prisoner on Saturday, the 16th instant; I was coming to Peterboro in the morning; I saw him on the road. In the afternoon when going home from Peterboro I met him near Scobell's. When approaching him some one said, there is the man we saw in the morning. He was sitting down, and when we were passing he rose up and went before the team, and said, Lehane, hold on. Witness held up the horses. He said, Lehane, what business had you to insult me. Witness replied, how did I insult you. He said, you did insult me, and if you do not get out of the wagon and beg my pardon you will not get home safe. Witness asked again how he insulted him. You broke my walking-stick and treated me to a glass of water.—Witness said that occurred when we were speaking about the death of the late Mr. McGee, and I am sorry if I insulted you. He said something which I don't remember. Witness said he would pay him for the stick. He replied he did not care a damn for the stick. Witness watched him very closely and I saw him put his hand round towards his trousers pocket and take it away again. He then said if you do not get out of the wagon and beg my pardon your life will not be safe. I said what was the use of getting out of the wagon, thinking it was only a talk and I would talk it out. He then snatched at me and caught hold of me by the coat and said you must take it anyway. I tried to extricate my feet, threw my body back. Mr. Corkery, who was in the wagon, caught hold of me, keeping me from being pulled out. Cooney then got hold of me by the legs and pulled at me till I got my hands on the box of the wagon. I drew one of my legs away from him. I made a thrust at him to push him off. He pulled at the other leg till he pulled me out of the wagon on my back. Before I got on my feet Mr. Corkery was out of the wagon on the road. Cooney immediately turned from me and picked up two stones and struck Corkery on the head before I got on my feet. He kept the stone in his hand. Corkery caught him and said, Cooney, what do you mean? Corkery got hold of him and I got hold of him too. I caught hold of him by the head and tried to throw him to the ground. In the scuffle his coat got turned up behind. My wife, who was in the wagon holding the horses, saw a pouch and cried out he has got a knife, take it from him. In a moment he had the dagger drawn, the same, I believe, which is now produced, and struck Mr. Corkery with it on the head. He made a thrust at me and struck me on the thumb. I got hold of the dagger from his right hand and he caught it in his left. I took it from him and threw it on the grass. In an instant I noticed a revolver in his right hand. Corkery had hold of him all the time. He seemed to point the revolver to me and fired; the bullet did not strike me. I caught hold of the revolver in my left hand; I succeeded to get it away from him and threw it away. The revolver shown me appears to be the one the prisoner had I picked it and the dagger up afterwards and gave them to Constable Arnott. I then kicked prisoner I think on the head. Corkery told me not to kick him and called to Mrs. Lehane for a rope. Mrs. Lehane attempted to get the horse lines. Cooney tried hard to get up; was on his knees and hands. I went towards the wagon to get the rope; saw prisoner likely to get up; I went towards him again and gave him a kick. My wife said don't kick him any more; take him to Peterboro. He appeared then to give up; he said he had no other weapon on him, but I was afraid. I then went to the horses and Mrs. Lehane had the halter shank loose from the horses; tied his hands; picked up his hat and umbrella; gave them to Corkery; turned my team round; got hold of him on one side and Corkery on the other, and took him to Peterboro; came with him to Morgan's Hotel; sent for the constable and think that Corkery delivered him to the constable. Mrs. Lehane drove the team down. I took the revolver and dagger and gave them to Mr. Arnott, or some one for him.—On the way down, in conversing with Mr. Corkery, prisoner said he was sorry that it occurred, were it not for this, I would be in the United States now. Mr. Corkey said you don't mean to say you stopped here to have revenge on Mr. Lehane, or anything of that sort. He replied, well, I did and would. I after coming to Peterborough, went to the Mayor and laid information. The only cause of the grudge that I know of was about a week before, when in conversation with Patrick McCarthy and prisoner about the death of Mr. McGee, prisoner said that he, Mr. McGee, should have used his talents some other way than he did, and the man who shot him ought not to be hanged. I felt annoyed at the remark and broke his stick and treated him to a glass of cold water. I do not know whether he said McGee ought to be shot or that the man who killed him ought not to be shot. The conversation occurred in company in Donohue's tavern, Ennismore. I don't know of prisoner being a Fenian or not. Do not remember that he said anything about the Fenians; Don't know what his business was in Ennismore; thought he had nothing to do. Saw him first in Ennismore about the election times, last year about August last. I have never had ill-feeling towards prisoner; I don't like to say all I think about his being a Fenian, we had some talk about the Fenians at the time referred to; there were several in the tavern when the stick was broken. I said the different splinters—one was Roberts, one was Stevens—represented the different heads of the Fenian organization. I have not heard that he went to Ennismore to organize a Fenian society. I consider him an idle man and thought he would not come to a good end. He seemed to have some money; don't know how he lived; often saw him in company with others in Ennismore.

The trial of O'Farrell, for shooting Prince Alfred, has at length reached us, and from it we learn that Fenianism in the same every where—infernal in its designs. It was shown by O'Farrell's evidence that he was selected to take away the life of the Prince. To the constable who took him he said, "I have made a mess of it, and all for no good." To senior Sergeant Rowlinson he said, "I don't care for death; I'm sorry I missed my aim; I made a b——y mess of it." He also said he was a Fenian, and "God save Ireland." And to one Robinson, "I have done my duty." The prisoner also confessed that if Sir William Manning had not rushed between him (the prisoner) and the Duke, the Duke would have received a second shot, and then he would have shot himself, but he had not time to do it. After reading the evidence over to him he said "he had nothing to say but that the task of executing the Duke had been sent out to him, but he failed and was not sorry that he did fail." From this we may learn something of the spirit of this most attrocious society.

PRESENTATION.—On Friday last, a number of the ladies of the congregation of the First Presbyterian Church, waited on the pastor, the Rev. John M. Roger, and presented him with a handsome Mahogany Cabinet, richly furnished with table cutlery and plate, bearing the following inscription:—

"Presented to the Rev. John M. Roger, by the ladies of the congregation, as a small token of their respect and esteem."

Peterboro, May 8th, 1868.

It will afford the Rev gentleman no small pleasure to be thus reminded that his ministeral labours are not forgotten by his congregation. such things are calculated to encourage the faithful minister, and if congregations would show more kindness and be more mindful of their pastors, their labours would be more cheering, and results more encouraging.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—We regret to record the death of Mr. C. W. Gage, of Otonabee, caused by being thrown out of his buggy while on his way home on Saturday evening last. His remains were followed to their last resting place on Monday by a large number of friends, and were interred with military honors, he having been a member of the Ashburnham Volunteer company. The band also played some solemn airs as the cortege passed through the streets. Mr. Gage leaves a widow and one child to mourn his untimely end. He was well connected in the old country, being a son of Lady Mary Gage, grandson of Lord Gage, and nephew of the Duke of Buccleuch.

The Protestant Home Committee beg to thank the undersigned friends for donations in April:—Mr. White, (Monaghan,) breast of veil and mutton; Mrs. Millar, beets and carrots; Mrs. W. Reid, one dollar; a Friend, 4 yards print; Mrs. Helm, beef, books and clothing; Mrs. Hamilton, lard and preserves; Mrs. F. Hall, 3 dozen eggs; Mrs. LePlant, soap grease; Mrs. Williamson, four quarts milk; Mrs. Shaw, 2 baskets soap grease and tallow; Mr. Croly, a gate and salmon; Mr. English, hinges, &c., for gate, 2 pokers; Mr. Alex. Esson, half a dollar; Mrs. Edwards, a ham; Mrs. Sheriff Hall, 3 fowls, 2 fish.

MILLINERY.—We invite attention to Mr. Clarion's beautiful and attractive stock of millinery goods. His Show Rooms are now open, and are worthy of a visit of the ladies, and we are sure that no one can come away without selecting some article of taste and fashion.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR:—I had intended not to trouble you again with anything connected with the writer, who, afraid of his own name and perhaps of his character too, concealed it partially under the title of "North Monaghan." But inasmuch as he has with his usual want of common sense, attacked my private character in a way that I did not expect and never deserved, you will permit me to refer to the petty effusion of the "boy," but not as North Monaghan," but as Jas. Campbell, who has got a little smattering of Latin phrases, which many are simple enough to think he does not understand himself. There is one thing in connection with Mr. James Campbell's character as a writer that I humbly trust will never be laid to my charge, with all my reputed obstinacy, that is, writing lies. I am convinced that I shall not, unless like him I loose my reason, ever deny myself or my acts, which although not always satisfactory, as I do not claim perfection, yet are the result of a sense of doing right, and speaking truth which Mr Campbell must yet learn. In his letter to you he denies that my "painting" referred to him; in the public he admits it and glories in it.—Should not such a man hide his head for shame, when he attempts to address sinners on the duty of the ninth commandment. It is worse than obstinacy in a right cause to claim and assert that he was a regular voter in Monaghan, while he knew perfectly well that he was not. It is a disgrace to assert that Mr. Young missed his man when my letter pointed to him so plainly. Will he now deny that his name is Campbell. Well he may indeed after what he has written already.

In regard to what was laid to my charge in the past Council, or against me at any time, I care but little, nor do I wish to take up your space with a vindication of my character. I have lived in Monaghan more years than James Campbell is old, and I leave my acts for this period to be judged of by the public who chose to place me over their municipal matters during the last two years. My votes in Council are all recorded and, right or wrong, were conscientiously given, and the people can judge of me by them. I will now conclude by giving your readers a quotation from the good old book, viz: "Lying lips are an abomination to me." I would advise James Campbell to use this for his next text when he assumes the garb of preacher,

In the matter of an unauthorized report of a Council meeting containing statements intended to damage a respectable inhabitant, I deny most emphatically of having any hand in it or knowing anything of it until after it was published, and James Campbell knew that well, but what I said, intent he alluded to it. Now, if his friend, the Assessor had marked down the said gentleman's chattel property, as he was not satisfied with it, then he might have appealed to the Court of Revision and satisfied the Council that would have settled the whole matter.

Mr. Editor excuse me for asking you to insert the above I did not intend answering a foul according to his folly. I hope he will fall into other hands as I think he is not worth minding.

I am, Sir,
Yours, &c.,
GEO. YOUNG.

Monaghan, May 18 1868

To the Editor of the Peterboro' Examiner.

SIR,—There are very few towns in Canada which have developed so rapidly as Peterboro, and our progress within the last 10 or 15 years has been very creditable. This is true not only of all kinds of business but also of the arts and especially of music. Under these circumstances a proper and decent Music Hall has been a long felt want, and it was with pleasure that we saw our townsman, Mr. E. C. Hill, putting his shoulder to the wheel to supply this want. The Hall is well arranged and handsomley decorated, and we need not be ashamed of it. The proposed enlargement will make it a better place for public entertainments than perhaps any place in Canada, with exception of the cities. One great difficulty known to concert-givers has been to obtain a good Piano Forte—an indispensable instrument for any kind of public performance. Feeling this, Mr. Hill wishes to purchase a fine Piano, and we believe he is justified in calling upon the public to assist him towards raising at least a portion of the needful. We hear that he proposes to give a few concerts for that purpose, and having engaged some fine artists to assist him, we have no doubt that his entertainments will be worth the money paid for admission, and we trust that our citizens will turn out and give him a good audience. The first of these concerts, we learn, will take place on Thursday, June 4th, just two weeks from the date of your issue. A little effort of the lovers of good music would enable Mr. Hill to obtain a first-rate Piano, and then in future there would be one in the Hall when required. Your insertion of this to aid in the good work will oblige.

Yours,
P.

Peterboro, May 20th, 1868.

THE MORNING OF THE PREMIER.—The Star, in describing the scene which took place outside Westminster Hall, after the division of Saturday morning, gives the following account of the mobbing of the Premier, referred to in "Parliamentary Notes and Incidents:" "Some time afterwards, the Premier of England, the Right Hon B. Disraeli, walked out of the House, leaning on Lord Claud Hamilton and another honorable member. No sooner was the right honorable gentleman seen by the crowd than a rush was made towards him, the men hemming him and his party completely in. An inspector and a couple of policemen, who are usually on duty at the House, ran to the assistance of the First Minister of the Crown, but of course it was a case of emptying the tide with a pitchfork. When the porch of Westminster Hall was reached, the Minister and his escort came to the deadlock. The crowd pressed around the legislators, and as a tee responded to the cry of 'A cheer for our noble Premier,' Mr. Disraeli looked reassured, and smiled his best smile. After a short pause the crowd got into motion again, and increasing every moment as it passed along Parliament Street—for even that hour, half past three, there were plenty of people in the streets—must have numbered some 500 persons when it reached Trafalgar Square. All along the way the hooting and groaning, mingled with cheering, continued. At Trafalgar Square a great many men left the crowd, but the main body escorted the right hon. gentleman to his residence at Grosvenor Gate, outside of which a gentleman nearly had himself lynched for exclaiming, 'base ingratitude to the man who gave them household suffrage!'"

THE H. B. TERRITORY.—We are glad to see that the entire territory nominally belonging to the Hudson's Bay Company is to be ceded to the Crown. It is high time that such an anomaly as that Company should follow the East India Company into non-existence. Territorial jurisdiction, and the making and enforcing of laws, constitute no proper parts of the business of a trading company. The British Government will, doubtless, give a very large sum (far more than it ought, we fear) to extinguish alleged proprietory rights, which have probably no legal title except long possession; but whatever it is, it will be paid by the wealthy British people, and poor Canada need not, unless it chooses, assume a cent of the amount. Indeed, the whole territory will for all purposes be better an her British than Canadian jurisdiction for a while to come CATHOLICISM IN ENGLAND.—A London paper has much to say about the conversions to Catholicism among the upper classes of Great Britain, and among the families of statesmen. It says that "Lord Granville and Mr. Gladstone have each a sister a Catholic; the Duke of Argyle, a mother; Sir George Grey a sister-in-law, who is also a nun, and other relatives; Sir Roundell Palmer, a brother. Of the present Ministry, the Duke of Marlborough has a sister in law a Catholic; Lord Stanley, a sister whose brother-in-law is a Catholic and a priest, besides other relatives. It would seem from this that religious creeds has little to do with political divisions in England.

A terrible case of human spontaneous combustion, which resulted in death, has just taken place in Cleveland, Ohio. The name of the man was Bremner. He drank on a wager six large drinks of whiskey, and a pint of stock ale at a sitting. With blazing face, and staring eyes, he then reeled toward a gas jet, in order to light his pipe, when the noxious gases issuing from his mouth were instantly ablaze, and the poor wretch was soon being consumed by an inward fire.

SUSPICIOUS CHARACTERS.—A number of suspicious looking characters have been observed prowling about the streets of late.—They do not appear to have any visible means of supporting themselves, are of the Irish-Yankee stamp, are not wholly destitute of greenbacks, and are very profuse in their quantity of shockingly blasphemous expressions. It might be well if the police or detectives would have their eyes upon all such characters.—Leader.

LONDON, May 11.—Considerable excitement was occasioned today on the reception of telegrams from Ashton-under Lyne, announcing the breaking out of a serious anti-popery riot in that town. The mob paraded the streets, sacking houses and outraging people. Several persons were shot. At the last accounts the riot had been suppressed, and the town was quiet.

THE PAPAL ZOUAVES.—Another detachment of Zouaves, numbering 24 men, left Montreal for Rome on the 16th inst. There was no public demonstration, nor will the Zouaves depart in uniform or carrying arms.

It is stated in the Glasgow Herald that Her Majesty the Queen has written an autograph letter of condolence to the widow of our martyred statesman, Thomas D'Arcy McGee.

A sentry at the Jesuit Barracks, Quebec, named Crawley, belonging to the Rifle Brigade, shot himself yesterday morning.

The Roman Catholics on the Church Debate.

A report on the Irish Church Establishment, read at a meeting of the National Association, in Dublin, conveys the sentiments of the Roman Catholic clergy and members of the society on the late division. The House of Commons has (it says) recorded its deliberate verdict that the "Tudor Reformation scheme is an utter failure." The dangers to be apprehended are, that the measures of redress "will be only partial or protracted, and not immediate." No measure of redress can be "thorough," the report states,—"which retains one, even the faintest vestige—legislative, judicial fiscal social, religious of supremacy, power, precedence, or pre-eminence of Anglicanism, Presbyterianism, Protestantism, or any other ism, to the disadvantage of Catholics, who form seventy-eight per cent. of the people of Ireland." The logical sequence of the disestablishment of the Church involves, it is further said, the exclusion of Irish Anglican bishops from the House of Lords from the Privy Council board, and from all other civil positions which they have hitherto held ex-officio. Anything like the compromise of 1833-35 is repudiated, and the fixed determination of Catholics not to contribute, by taxes or endowment in any form "to the ecclesiastical support of Anglicans or any of the community," is announced. One act of restitution suggested in the recent debate would, however, be gratefully accepted, "the restoration of the ruined abbeys, churches, and burial grounds of our forefathers, and their enclosure and becoming maintenance undertaken by Catholics." The Government plan of a charter for the Catholic university is recommended as the "most practical" plan for settling the Catholic claims for high-class education, and it is taken as "an instalment from our debtors." An elaborate argument on the education question follows, and was adopted by the meeting as the statement of Catholic laymen on the subject. A letter from Bishop O'Hea, of Ross, read on the occasion, included "intermediate education" among the claims of the Roman Catholic Episcopal body, to be started on Catholic principles. Dr. O'Hea also expressed his conviction that the Irish Church is "dead, and all that remains is to fix the hour when the monster is to be consigned to the grave, never again to come to life.

THE VOTE ON IMPEACHMENT.

THE PRESIDENT SUSTAINED BY A MAJORITY OF ONE.

Washington, 16th.—The Senate proceeded to vote on the eleventh article of impeachment. There were: For acquital, 19; for conviction, 35. Messrs. Fessenden, Grimes, Henderson, Van Winkle, Trumbull and Peare voted not guilty.

Washington, 16th—Immediately on the declaration of not guilty on the 11th article, Williams moved an adjournment until Tuesday, the 26th inst. The motion was carried by 32 to 21, and the Court adjourned.

New York, 16th.—The announcement of the result of the vote on impeachment in this city caused great excitement in financial circles. There was approbation and disapprobation about equally divided.—Business men appeared much relieved when the announcement was made, as business has been for a week or more held in suspense awaiting the result.

New York, 15.—The Commercial's Washington special says: The President's friends count 18 Senators as positive for acquittal on all the articles. This is sufficient to acquit without Wade's vote, but as he intends to vote it is claimed that one or more of the Border State Senators will balance his vote. The Republicans are not certain of the necessary 36 votes for conviction on any one article, although they have received assurances of the votes of that number of Senators.

Mr. Howe and a Governorship.

The Halifax Express alludes to the probability of Hon. Joseph Howe accepting a Governorship at the hands of the British Government, a follows:—

'We would not be at all surprised to hear the report confirmed that the British Government has conferred a Governorship on the Hon. Joseph Howe It is stated that one of the Australasian Colonies, lately presided over by a distinguished Colonial statesman, now deceased, will be tendered to Mr. Howe. We have no doubt that Dr. Tupper, who is at present in England and who in company with Mr. Howe passed a few days at the residence of the Duke of Buckingham, will use his influence in favour of Mr. Howe. The appointment would be satisfactory to all parties in this Province'

The Unionist remarking on the same subject, says:—

'A rumour is current that a letter received by the last English mail states that the Imperial Government have offered Mr. Howe the Governorship of South Australia. We simply give the report for what it is worth, as it may, or may not have good foundation Mr. Howe's friends in the city state positively that he has received the offer mentioned.'

ATTEMPTED POISONING.—A rather strange case of attempted poisoning occurred yesterday at the house of a woman named Harding who resides on Centre street. The facts of the case are as follows:—A woman of low character named Eliza Beckett, the inmate of one of the vilest houses of ill repute in this city, kept by a Mrs. Minor, on Queen street, has been, it appears, in the habit of visiting the house of Mrs. Harding, on Centre street, and having heard her express a desire for some rhubarb pie, brought her some yesterday from Mrs. Minor's house. The woman Harding took the pie in her hand and commenced eating a portion of it, when she felt that she had tasted something disagreeable, and, on taking off the top of the pie, discovered that it was covered with grains of sulphate of copper. She immediately threw the remaining portion away, but did not feel ill till last night, when she felt very sick, and in the morning went out to a druggist, received a remedy, and is now completely

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and undeniably fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children by so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and may be administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It at once causes the breathing appearance, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalising the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

MONTREAL HOUSE,

VERY IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

The subscriber has much pleasure in announcing to his numerous friends that his stock of Spring and Summer Goods is now complete in every department, and that for quality, style and variety it cannot be surpassed in town, while in cheapness it cannot at all be equalled.

His Staple Goods were purchased before the late rise in Cotton, and are consequently over 30 per cent cheaper than they can now be purchased. It is his intention to give his customers the full benefit of this advantage, as he is offering these goods at a rather lower advance on cost than usual, and will continue to do so as long as they last.

In his stock will be found several cheap lots which were purchased at a bargain, and which will be offered much below their usual prices.

One lot of DRESS GOODS is offered at from 4½d to 9d per yard,

And a lot of first quality ALL WOOL CANADIAN TWEEDS is offered at from 3s to 3s 6d per yard. The 3s lot of these Tweeds cost 3s 6d to make them, and the 3s 6d lot were sold wholesale at 4s 6d per yard.

Good FACTORY COTTONS, we are selling at 4d, 5½d and 6½d per yard.

Good BLEACHED COTTONS, we are selling at 5½d, 6½d and 7½d per yard.

PRINTS, at 5d, 6½d and 7½d; the best ever seen at the money.

DRESS GOODS, in Lustres, Challies and Barèges, at 9d, 1s and 1s 3d per yard—very pretty and good.

Dress MUSLINS, very good and pretty, at 7½d per yard.

PARASOLS—a large assortment, from 3s up.

LADIES' HATS AND BONNETS,

FLOWERS—New Style.

STRAW TRIMMINGS,

BUGLE TRIMMINGS, &c., &c.

At about 25 per cent. lower than they are sold other places. We make it a point to sell our Millinery Goods at less than the customary profits.

Good Striped TICKINGS at 9d per yard,

Stripe SHIRTINGS, Blue and Brown Derrys, Straw TICKINGS, &c., &c., at very low prices.

SHAWLS—We are clearing out our Stock at cost price and under.

FANCY BONNET RIBBONS, we are selling out in cheap lots.

BELT BUCKLES selling off at cost and less than cost.

BLACK VEILS, we are selling off at almost any price.

Our reason for offering some of these things under Cost is that our stock of them is too large and we wish to reduce it.

We hope our friends will call and judge for themselves that we do not advertise what we cannot show.

CLOTHS.

We invite particular attention to our Stock of Cloths, which is one of the best assorted to be found.

Our CANADIAN TWEEDS at 3s and 3s 6d per yard, already mentioned as one of the cheap lots, every person should buy.

In FINER CLOTHS, also, we can suit any person who favors us, as our stock is so varied, and our rule is to sell on very small profits.

This department of our business is under the charge of MR. BAKEWELL, who is now so well known as a first-class Cutter, that it is needless to make any remark upon his ability.

READY-MADE CLOTHING.

We have now on hand one of the largest assortments in Town of Spring and Summer Clothing, which we are offering at very low prices.

CALL AND EXAMINE OUR STOCK WHETHER YOU PURCHASE OR NOT.

Gentlemen's Hats, Caps, Shirts, Gloves, Hosiery, Ties, Paper Collars and Cuffs in any quantity.

LIFE'S CHANGES.

How many hearts have been wounded how many tears have been shed, through what may all be spoken in one little word—"Change!" It is written on everything we behold. The flowers we see one day growing and expanding in all their brilliancy, the next day may be scattered to the ground. Even the leaves that grow on the sturdy oak last only for a season, and as we view them in their freshness, they almost fill us with the hope that they will not fade away. But alas! the autumn comes, and these, too, droop and die. Not only do we see this change in the flowers, and in all nature's works, but we experience it in all we do. How transient are all earthly enjoyments! In the infancy of the year, how many scenes can we recall that once made our hearts glad and filled us with joy! Where are many of our dearest friends?—The rolling billows may have separated us from them, or we may have met death, never again to see them on this side of Jordan. It may be that the friends we trusted have proved false. But what is the lesson we are to learn from all this? Not to fix our affections on things below, but to look forward to that country where the scenes, as they pass, will only be renewed in all their loveliness to eternity. Here there are a thousand ways in which we may be separated even a moment from those we love, but that we meet never again to be divided. There death never comes. Are not these joys that never end worth living for? Is it true, we see through a glass darkly?—We know not the extent of heavenly joys; but this we know, that they endure forever. Let us, then, endure nobly while we are here, that we may become worthy of the inheritance that is "incorruptible and undefiled and that fadeth not away."—Methodist New Connexion Magazine.

HOW TO CURE CANCER.

A Milwaukee paper states that some eight months ago Mr. T. B. Mason, of that city, ascertained that he had a cancer on his face the size of a pin. It was cut out by Dr. Wolentt, and the wound partially healed. Subsequently it grew again, and, while he was in Cincinnati on business, it attained the size of a hickory nut. He remained there since christmas under treatment, and is now perfectly cured. The process is this: A piece of sticking plaster was put over the cancer, with a circular piece cut out of the center a little larger than the cancer, so that the cancer and a small circular rim of the healthy skin next to it were exposed. Then a plaster made of chloride of zinc, blood root and wheat flour was spread on a piece of muslin the size of the circular opening, and applied to the cancer for twenty-four hours. On removing it, the cancer will be found burnt into and appear of the color and hardness of an old shoe sole, and the circular rim outside of it will appear white and parboiled, as if scalded by hot steam. The wound is now dressed, and the outside rim soon separates, and the cancer comes out in a hard lump, and the place heals up. The plaster kills the cancer, so that it sloughs out like dead flesh, and never grows in again. The remedy was discovered by Dr. Fell, of London, and has been used by him for six or eight years with unfailing success, and not a case has been known of the reappearance of the cancer when this remedy has been applied.

SIDE WINDS AT HOME.

After remarking that "it is a matter of considerable importance, that in estimating the extent of an act with its relative causes, we allow an ample margin for side winds," a London essayist observes:

To the husband of ordinary strength of mind, anything like feminine despotism is particularly irksome. There are weak and not wholly indifferent men who like to be hen-pecked; but, as a rule, the best husbands are drawn from the ranks of the few who detest conjugal tyranny. But the prudent wife will rule her husband—be he never so strong, never so self-willed—by the happy employment of the side-wind judiciously set in motion. She weans him from this position, directs him to that pursuit, controls the other fading, opens out new cares and new interests, until, like the sculptured virgin's foot, worn away by the kisses of innumerable worshippers, the angularities and nodosities disappear, though every application of the smoothing process has been as soft as each adorer's kiss. The medal has its reverse, of course, and a fearful picture it presents of the side wind unwisely employed—of the nagging, the taunts, the thou-and and one forms of domestic misery (none of them actual offences, all of them nameless, indictable acts of oppression, mere side winds of fatality,) which all alienate a man more and more from his home. But the former picture is the pleasant and more profitable to dwell upon.

A man passes for what he is worth.—Very idle is all curiosity concerning other people's estimate of us, and all fear for remaining unknown is not less so. If a man knows that he can do anything—that he can do it better than any one else—he has a pledge of acknowledgment of that fact by all persons. The world is full of judgment days, and into every assemblage that a man enters, in every action he attempts, he is gauged and stamped. In every troop of boys that whoop and run in each yard and square, a new comer is well and accurately weighed in the course of a few days and stamped with his right number, as if he had undergone a formal trial of his speed and temper. A stranger comes from a distant school, with a better dress, trinkets in his pockets, with airs and pretensions. An older boy says "Its of no use, we shall find out to-morrow."

ONIONS AS A DISINFECTANT.—A correspondent of the Scientific American recommends onions as a specific against epidemics. Not as an esculent, but sliced and kept in a sick room, where they will absorb any atmospheric poison. They should be replaced by fresh ones every hour. It is noticed that in the room of a small pox patient they will blister and decompose with great rapidity, but will prevent the spread of the disease. Their application has also proved effective in the case of snake bites.

DEBT.—Hunger, cold, rags, hard work, contempt, simplicity, unjust reproach, are disagreeable, but debt is infinitely worse than them all. And if it had pleased God to spare either or all of my sons to be the support and solace of my declining years, the lesson which I should have most earnestly sought to impress upon them is:—Never run into debt. Avoid pecuniary obligation as you would pestilence or famine. If you have but fifty cents and can get no more for a week, buy a peck of corn, parch it and live on it, rather than owe any man a dollar.—Greeley.

"I came near being hung by boots the other day," said Scuttles to a friend. "How so?" "Well, I had them half-soled."

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONESS REMEDY IN CANADA.

MESSRS. Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died. I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours. While there I saw Esq. Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve me cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

Look, Read, and Learn,

THAT THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr. Lewis Josephus, of the Distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees, British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

THIS all-possessing Great Indian Remedy is wanted, and in broad and emphatic language, we can safely say may be relied upon to make a permanent cure of all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys Digestive Organs, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from Impurity of the Blood, excepting the third stage of Consumption. In the Western Country where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has indeed affected some of the most Marvellous Cures ever recorded in the annels of Historical Medicine. Such being the case, in addition to its former renown and celebrity, we defy humanity to dispute the fact that this, the Great Shoshonees Remedy in connection with the Shoshonees Vegetable Restorative Pills, is the Remedy of Remedies of the 19th Century, and the greatest boon ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity.

SUGAR-COATED.

ARE a safe and reliable remedy in all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary people, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the most profession. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

J. H. GIBSON, M. D., Dunham, C. E.

CANCERS CURED

By a new, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay is required, until the cure is complete. The moment a cancer is discovered, it should be cured, as it will cost less and is more speedily cured then, than at longer standing, and there is nothing to gain, and everything to lose by delay. What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, eyelid or elsewhere, or small wart or sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given to parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. No money required in advance, and none until the cure is complete.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS.

Are you sick, feeble, and complaining? Are you out of order, with your system deranged, and your feelings unsettled? These symptoms are often the prelude to serious illness. Some 25 of sickness is creeping upon you, and should be averted by a timely use of the right remedy. Take Ayer's Pills, and cleanse out the disordered humors—purify the blood, and let the fluids move on unobstructed in health again. They stimulate the functions of the body into vigorous activity, purify the system from the obstructions which make disease, and restore its natural functions. Thus, if not relieved, most cases of common and the surrounding organs, producing general aggravation, suffering, and disease. While in this condition, oppressed by the derangement, take Ayer's Pills, and see how directly they restore the natural action of the system, and with it the buoyant feeling of health again. What is true and so apparent in this trivial and common complaint, is also true in many of the dangerous and dangerous distempers. The same purgative effect expels them. Cleansed by similar obstructions and derangements of the natural functions of the body, they are rapidly, and many of them surely, cured by the same means. None who know the virtues of these Pills will neglect to employ them when suffering from the disorders they cure.

Sold everywhere by druggists and dealers in medicine.

From a Forwarding Merchant of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1866.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the paragon of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of a virulent sore upon her hands and face that had proved incurable for years. Her mother has been long grievously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and in her hair. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her.

ABA MORGRIDGE.

As a Family Physic.

From Dr. E. W. Cartwright, New Orleans.

Your Pills are the prince of purges. Their excellent qualities surpass any cathartic we possess. They are mild, but very certain and effectual in their action on the bowels, which makes them invaluable to us in the daily treatment of disease.

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach.

From Dr. Ashael Hoyt, Baltimore.

DEAR SIR: AYER: I cannot answer you other complaints I have cured with your Pills better than by saying that all over tried such a purgative medicine. I place great dependence on an effectual cathartic in my daily contacts with disease, and believing I do that your Pills afford us the best we have, I of course value them highly.

PITTSBURG, Pa., May 1, 1865.

DR. J. C. AYER, Sir: I have been repeatedly cured of the worst headache any body can have by a dose or two of your Pills. It seems to arise from a foul stomach, which they cleanse at once.

Yours with great respect, ED. W. FRESLH,
Clerk of Steamer Chesbro.

Bilious Disorders—Liver Complaints.

From Dr. Theodore Bell, of New York City.

Not only are your Pills admirably adapted to their purpose as an aperient, but I find their beneficial effects upon the Liver very marked indeed. They have in my practice proved more effectual for the cure of bilious complaints than any one remedy I can mention. I sincerely rejoice that we have at length a purgative in which we may rely the confidence of the profession and the people.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, D. C., 7th Feb., 1865.

SIR: I have used your Pills in my general and hospital practice ever since you made them, and cannot hesitate to say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are an admirable remedy for derangement of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of bilious disease so obstinate that it did not readily yield to them. Yours, respectfully, ALDEN BALL, M. D.,
Physician of the Marine Hospital.

Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Relax, Worms.

From Dr. J. S. Green, of Chicago.

Your Pills have had a long trial in my practice, and I hold them in esteem as one of the best aperients I have ever found. Their alterative effect upon the liver makes them an excellent remedy, when given in small doses for bilious dysentery and diarrhœa. Their sugar-coating makes them very acceptable and convenient for the use of women and children.

Dyspepsia, Impurity of the Blood.

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood, they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

WARSAW, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Oct. 24, 1866.

DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M. D.

Constipation, Costiveness, Suppression, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Dropsy, Paralysis, Piles, etc.

From Dr. J. P. Vaughn, Mobile, Alabama.

Too much cannot be said of your Pills for the cure of costiveness. Brothers of our fraternity have found them as efficacious as I have, they should join me in proclaiming it for the benefit of the multitudes who suffer from that complaint, which, although bad enough in itself, is the promptings of others that are worse. I believe sufferers from Piles in the liver, but your Pills affect that organ and cure the disease.

From Mrs. E. Stuart, Physician and Midwife, Boston.

I find one or two large doses of your Pills taken at the proper time, are excellent promotives of the natural sorrow when wholly or partially suppressed, and are very efficient to cleanse the stomach and aged mucosa. They are as much the best physic we have that I recommend no other to my patients.

From the Rev. Dr. Hawkes, of the Methodist Mole Church.

PULASKI HOUSE, Savannah, Ga., Jan. 6, 1866.

HONORED SIR: I should be unnatural for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not report my case to you. A cold settled in my limbs and bowels, producing neuralgic pains, which ended in severe rheumatism. Nothing benefitting I tried the best of physicians the disease grew worse and more until for the space of four months I was confined in Baltimore. Dr. Mackenzie. I tried your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure. By persevering in the use of them, I am now entirely well.

SENATE CHAMBER, Baton Rouge, La., 5 Dec. 1866.

DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured, by your Pills, of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years. VINCENT SLIDELL.

☞ Most of the Pills in market contain Mercury, which although a valuable remedy in skilful hands is dangerous in a public pill, from the dreadful consequences that frequently follow its incautious use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

Price, 25 cents per Box, or 5 Boxes for $1.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold in Peterboro by Ormond & Gilmour, A. W. Kempt, and Wm. Coulter. In Keene by A. Campbell, Campbell McNeil's Co., C. Britton Lindsay, and all Medicine Dealers.

FANNY'S FIRST GREY HAIR.

Fanny was thirty, or thereabout;
Perhaps she might half doubtless
To own, without a most beautiful pout,
To a day over twenty-nine,
Fanny was handsome—so, at least,
Declared that favored glass,
Which drank, in silence, that dainty feast,
Seeing her shadow pass,
Fanny was handsome—so they said,
Despairing lovers, a score,
Who kissed at the curls of her gipsy head,
But wished nearer kisses, and more.

Rosy-eyed Spring came to me,
One day, with fingers two,
Holding some object so carefully
That in vain I guessed—
Some precious pearl, some diamond rare,
Or her forehead destined to blaze;
Alas!—it was only a single hair
Held up to my wondering gaze!
A single hair, but its hue, how fair
From her dark curls' glossy shine!
For its white might have gleamed like another star
In the fading dusk of mine.

"See here!" cried Fanny, "a burning shame
That work and worry, and toil,
And striving for wealth, and fashion, and fame
And burning the midnight oil—
Have made me grey while only a miss;
Good looks all taking wing!
Just look at this—don't you see it? this?
The untimely, hateful thing!
What will I do, in a year or two,
When more of my youth has fled,
And half of my hair has the milk-white hue
Of this, just dropped from my head?"

"Fanny!" I said, for a quick shut door,
And a spy, had met my ear,
"Do you really wish to have me more,
Just yet, of the white hairs, dear?"
"Of course I do!" and the words were quick
And a little spiteful, I thought
"Then I'll tell you, girl, an easy trick
By which the check may be wrought.
If you really wish to look very young,
I think you will find it best
Not to lay your head too often or long
On a grey-haired lover's breast!"

Fanny was angry; she flared like fire:
"What, sirrah!—you do not dare
To hint that this bit of silvery wire
Is any one else's hair!
I'll never speak to you again!"
But she flushed such a rosy red!—
And I think that she scorched and searched in vain
For more snow on the gipsy head,
But before a month was gone, somehow
The first white hair had grown
To some thousands, crowning a manly brow;
And she called the head "her own!"

Selections.

ADVICE TO YOUNG LADIES.

FASHIONABLE WEDDINGS.

BY LUCY GILBERT CALHOUN.

(From the New York Ledger.)

When "the Butterfly married the Bumble-bee, and all the world went thither to see," as set forth in lyric dear to the years of infancy, she committed two follies which have been a pestilent example ever since

She married the wrong man, and she married him in the wrong way.

Every day of this enlightened year of ours the pretty and purposeless kindred may, can, might, could, would and will do the same thing. On the Fifth Avenue in the side streets, "below Bleecker," in the suburbs, all over the land, up stairs, down stairs, and in the lady's chamber, Miss Butterfly prefigures to herself the conquest of Mr. Bumble-bee, the bridal glories of Mrs. Bumble-bee, the admiring gaze of the world come thither to see.

One bitter day last winter Serena came to see me. Now, Serena was not, even in her maiden estate, of the Butterfly blood, good little woman. She entertained me with the news of the hour. "Miss Rose was to be married in the Church of the Eleven Thousand Virgins on Tuesday."—"But," I said, "Miss Rose does not worship in the Church of the Eleven Thousand Virgins." "No," answered the fair Serena, calmly settling her bracelets, "but a great many brides choose to be married there, because the bread and gives such a splendid sweep to their trains, you know. They do look so much more stylish there than in a little, narrow, tucked up place, such as most of the churches are. It brings us a good many brides, and it helps to uphold the church, which it is our duty to do." Now, this good and tender little woman did not know that she had uttered a monstrous and abhorrent sentiment. Do you know it, girls?

A bride comes hither to breathe her vows, not because the grouped roof springs strong and beautiful and unchanging above her, the symbol of the overarching presence and providence of God: not because the nave is sweet with the fragrance of a million prayers; not because the Lord is in his holy temple; with idealing for his little child; not because marriage is the profoundest experience of humanity, and miracle more marvellous than birth, a mystery more solemn than death, and to be celebrated in consecrated places; but because the church holds many people, and the aisle displays a voluminous train, and the rays on the bridal fingers may glitter bravely, and the bells on the bridle toes may ring saintly, and the cost of the bridal dress may strike dumb with amazement and admiration any gaping idler of the the town, whom the open doors have attracted to a free exhibition!

And are the twain who compose the pageant made one flesh by this stately ceremonial? Not at all, Miss Butterfly is Miss Butterfly still, in purpose, in plan in essence. She has a little larger liberty of action—a house of her own, perhaps; more clothes than she has ever chanced to possess at any one time; and an interest in the bank account of Mr. Bumble-bee, vice Butterfly, senior, declined. Mr. Bumble-bee has a permanent housekeeper, a possible mother of his children, a radiant lady in very expensive toilets—to sit beside him at church, at the opera, at dinner parties. She has her gossip still, and he his clubs; she has her soaps, and he his drag; she reads Miss Braddon, and he the sporting paper. She stays late at dancing parties, and he fills the time with billiards; and they call this condition of things marriage.—Yet they are conscientious people. They break no commandment save that one which underlies all others, to love each other as themselves. They never guessed that Romeo and Juliet had any existence out-side the story-book. They never heard of the great Englishman, Stuart Mill, who, when his wife died, felt that the strength of his life was gone, and that all the worth of his work had come from her inspiration and help. They could not comprehend what Dicky Steele meant, when he said of Lady Hastings, "To love her was a liberal education."

Now, that last paragraph is not from the purpose, as it may seem. I mean to say that a marriage which is a farce will follow a wedding which is a sham. Nor is it the solemnization in church alone which is painful. It is also at as bad at home. For three brides who can afford the display which fashion demands, thirty will achieve it who have not the means to pay, who must borrow the money, or accept it as a gift, many screw and pinch to save it from some really necessary outlay. The first method of supply is a lie, the second is a degradation; the third is a meanness; and each is an extravagance.

Self-respect is too dear a price to pay for weddings silk and velvet cloak; and if the girl does not know that she is paying in that costly coin, but puts the reckoning by ten times the worst for her!—I know young women who had elaborate trousseaux, and whose mothers went without fit under-clothes, without thick boots, in shabby gloves, in battered and soiled hoops, whose tables were meagre, whose charities were none, whose little needful journeys and visitings were stopped for years of their shortcoming lives, in consequence. There was no harm in the girls. They were sorry that they had not money enough to make those sacrifices unnecessary; they were sorry to have their mothers pinched; but it never occurred to them that they could go without a bride's allowed allotment. What other girls had, they must have. Besides, Adolphus must not be ashamed of his wife, they reasoned—never seeing that if he were ashamed of his wife, because she wore a cloth coat instead of velvet, he was an empty coxcomb, unfit to have a wife at all—never seeing the insult of their womanly worth implied in such an estimate.

In the new household, as in the old, there will be pinching of the real needs to supply the unreal. Books and flowers and travel will be too costly, but dressmaker's and tailor's bills must be met. Life will narrow to petty issues—children will grow up taught by example of pettiness, to be petty, lest no precepts of largeness could ever teach them to be large. And so the evil is entailed, a terrible legacy to coming generations.

But a fashionable wedding need not produce a hollow life, you think, expectant bride? Ten to one it will. As the girl starts on her new life she feels bound by the stern code of society to continue. Satan on her wedding day ushers in a train of silk for all the days of her life and silk, in these days, is expensive; and all the men whom I know anything about, brood and worry over the price of living, and the children's future. And when the husband worries, the wife frets, or snubs him, or, at best, carries a heavy burden of care, and all the sun-shine of the morning fades. Don't imagine that I think most of the unhappiness of married life comes from the vanity of wives. I do not know that very much of it is born of the constant struggle between a reality of sorrowness and seeming of wealth—not in dress alone, but in houses, in furniture, in dinners, in wine, in cigars, in all the details of expenditure. Mean cares rasp the sweetest temper. Souls are born for better things than scrutinizing wash-bills, and calculating how the third turning of a silk dress can be concealed by flounces. An irritable temper sows discord as a dragon's teeth, and they spring up armed fiends of disagreement, recrimination, wretchedness. By and by Florida and Adolphus talk of separate maintenance, or worse still, live on in this terrible duality, which has no element of unity.

And what shall be said of the vulgarity of fashionable weddings? Let us, by a fine flight of the imagination, believe that the twain about to become one flesh love each other utterly. To each the world revolves about the other. To each sun rise and set because the other lives. They are the new Adam and the new Eve, for whom the world is this day born. Life itself is a sacrament, marriage a beautitude the holy of holies—shall these two pure and earnest souls say, "Go to, now—let us ring bells, and beat gongs, and cry out to the world, 'Come and see how we turn this miracle of love and choice into a spectacle of tinsel and gauds. Come and hear us tell the dearest experiences of our lives!' Yet they do it, simple souls, because it is expected. They do another thing as ill-bred. The set forth the wedding presents to be gazed at.

Now the custom of giving wedding presents is, in itself, beautiful. Your friend is, as it were, born again on this her wedding day—so new and changed is her feature. You hope she will be happy; you hope she will never forget you, and your tenderness for her, and you send her some dainty gift, whose beauty shall delight her—whose daily presence shall sweetly remind her of you. You do not send it that Mrs. Smith may wonder whether it cost as much as hers. You do not send it to have it regarded as the measure of our "taste and low ability," by the four five hundred friends of the bride; and when it is so used, if you have your delicacy within you, you are pained and surprised. Somebody in an evil hour once showed her bridal presents, and then the pretty custom at once became a vulgarity. If the gifts were to be shown, this one must give, and that one, not because her heart moved her—not because her purse permitted, but because her offering must not be absent. And now every fashionable wedding is polite extortion, a deliberate taxdevy on the friends of the bride, to be paid in silver spoons and butter dishes. One of the sweetest girls I know told me that she asked such and such people to her wedding—vulgar miserable acquaintances as they were—because she knew they would give her presents. Indeed, she confessed, without the slightest simplicity, that she gave a wedding on account of the tariff. "It will be such a help towards house keeping" she strikingly remarked. Why, the Queen in Hamlet was a miracle of delicacy and propriety compared with these rapacious young women, and the funeral-baked meats that coldly furnished forth the marriage table, were a less hollow feast than the wedding breakfast of to day. It is an incredible fact that wedding presents are lured from the jewellers, and labelled with the names of suppositious relatives, to make up the melancholy display. It is a horrible sequence that policemen should be placed on guard over the laden tables during the reception. No reprobation could be too severe on the statement of the fact.

O, girls! are you children of Revolutionary mothers? Are you daughters and sisters, and sweethearts of men who fought our late battles, and found life other than a joke and a show? Are you akin to the woman who upheld their hands, and nursed them living, and buried them dead, and can you make your daily lives a wretched pretence from maidenhood to death?

If you love a man with heart and soul marry him, (provided, of course, that he loves you and asks you). If you don't love him, don't marry him, though you die an old maid at ninety in the Asylum for indigent Old Maids, about to be established in Boston. But let your marriage be simple and quiet, and beautiful with love but not money. If you are rich, do this in the name of grace, and for the sake of example. If you are poor, do it in the name of honesty, and for the sake of a pure conscience. And in either event, do it as an offering to delicacy and the fitness of things.

If you have wedding presents, then most of them will come because the givers love you and, loving, desire to give the gifts of love. Treasure them sacredly, but on the wedding day send them to the bank, or hide them in the back attic, or push them under the bed, or put them in the refrigerator, or do anything but shake them in the face of the public and say, "Behold how pleased I am with my rattle, how tickled with my straw."

And after marriage, save something from Delmonico's for sea-deep bathing; and something from Wallack's for West street and the Five Points; and something from Madam Panchon for flowers and books, and something from Stewart's for drives in the Park; and you and your special Adolphus will be much less likely to talk of a "separate maintenance than the wretched Floridas and Adolphuses who were wedded before this article was written.

And now that I know there will be no more fashionable weddings among the readers of the Ledger, I shall go to bed and sleep the sleep of the just.

A Marriage Ceremony Repeated for the Old Woman's Sake.

(From the Detroit Post, April 30.)

It is not often that both principles are so mutually satisfied with their choice as to wish the matrimonial goose redoubled within the first year. Yet such a case recently occurred in this city. A young man became attached to a domestic employed by his mother, and the affection being reciprocated, the services of a minister of the city were besought to unite the two "for better or for worse." When the hymenial knot had been tied, the certificate signed and the greenbacks turned over, the newly fledged husband implored the minister to "keep dark," as he did not wish the "old woman" to know that he had "got spliced." A few weeks afterward the same couple, in bridal array, again confronted the astonished minister, and requested him to be kind enough to marry them over again, as the "old woman" was "giving out," and wished to see them married before she died. The young man did not like to acquaint her with the real state of affairs, lest he should "upset her" too soon, so to quiet her he wished the marriage performed over again. The minister demurred and the bridegroom entreated, saying it would do no harm, but the clergyman refused on the ground that he had already given them a certificate of marriage. Finding the minister obdurate the pair proceeded to the residence of the Rev. Mr. Warren, who, ignorant of what had been done, again made the twain one flesh, and gave them a certificate, which they showed to their expring parent, thus securing her dying blessing and enabling her to "depart in peace," while they went on their way in life rejoicing.

Strong Drinking Usages and their Results.

"Woe unto them that rise up early in the morning that they may follow strong drink; that they continue until night, till the wine inflame them.—Is. v. 11.

I. Here we have stated the practice of some in drinking usages.

1. They take a drink early in the morning.

2. They take it frequently throughout the day.

(1.) Not only before breakfast, but through the forenoon.

(2.) Then again after dinner, and third the afternoon.

3. These drink "until night" and probably went to bed shortly after sunset; but by 1 o and other cheap artificial lights modern drinking has exceeded the time till very late into the night.

4. The purpose for which they rise is not to work.

(1.) A few of such are too lazy to work.

(2.) Some such keep on drunk they are good for nothing to work.

(3.) Most such, however, would do excellent work if they could only be kept sober.

(4.) As moral suasion has been tried and found insufficient, compulsory needs and should have a good law on the subject, and it should be well enforced to help them.

II. Notice the results the text specifies "till wine inflame them."

1. Till wine inflame their flesh and bloat them up.

2. Till it inflame their stomach so that it becomes disqualified to digest their food well.

3. Till it inflame the appetite, and create a burning thirst for drink all the time.

4. Till it inflame the passions and sets them quarreling and fighting.

5. Till they become unfit for good husbands.

6. Till they become unfit for good fathers.

7. Till they become unfit to exercise government in the family.

8. Till they become unfit to exercise any of the prerogatives of a good citizen.

9. Till they become a nuisance in society.

10. Till they die prematurely of whiskey inflammation.

INFERENCES.

1. As moderate drinking leads on to hard drinking it is unsafe and unwise to take intoxicating drinks even moderately.

2. The "woe" named in the text has particular reference to the results on the drinker and his surroundings, but there are other woes in the same book which refer more particular to moral responsibility and they are particular to some "who that putteth the bottle to his mouth, which leads to the inference that he is still a greater sinner than the drinker.

3. As the scripture pronounces a two fold woe, one against the drinker and another against the vendor, the whiskey traffic must be double dyed in guilt, which leads to the inference that without reformation and repentance, both classes will be damned together.

4. All good people ought to exercise their full influence against the whole business.

BLUCHER AND HIS PIPE.

Here is an incident of the European War of 1815, told by the German papers:

On the morning of the memorable battle of Waterloo, Hennessan had just handed his master (Blucher) a lighted pipe, when a cannon ball struck the ground close by, scattering earth and gravel in all directions, and causing the white charger on which Blucher was mounted to start—a manœuvre that broke the pipe into a thousand pieces before the owner had even time to lift it to his lips.

"Just keep a lighted pipe ready for me; I shall be back in a few moments, after I have driven away the rascally French chaps."

With these words Blucher gave the command, "Forward boys!" and off he galloped with his cavalry. Instead, however, of a chase of a few minutes, it was a rapid march of nearly a whole hot summer day, as we all know from history. After the battle was over Blucher rode back with Wellington to the place where he first got a glimpse of the combating armies, and, nearing the spot where Blucher halted in the morning, they saw to their surprise a solitary man, his head tied in a handkerchief, one arm in a sling, calmly smoking a pipe.

"Donner and Blitz!" cried Blucher; "why that is my Hennessan. How you look, boy! What are you doing here alone?"

"Waiting for your speedy return," was the grumbling answer. "You have come at last! I have waited for you here, pipe in mouth for the whole day. This is the last pipe in the box. The cursed French have shot away every pipe from my mouth, have ripped the flesh from my head, and shattered my arm with their dazed bullets. It is well there is no end to the battle, or you would have been too late even for the last pipe."

Saying which he handed to Blucher the pipe to enjoy the remaining fumes of the weed.

Wellington, who had listened attentively to the conversation, here remarked to Blucher:

"You have just admired the unflinching loyalty and bravery of my Highlanders, what shall I say to thee true and devoted soul?"

"But your Highlanders had no pipe to regale themselves with."

INTERESTING TO LIQUOR DRINKERS.—One of the means used to awaken liquor snake is to boil fresh cow dung, and to cook the cocks with it.

Every man is the architect of his own fortune.

Conceited men think nothing can be done without them.

THURSDAY, MAY 28, 1868.

THE QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY.

Although we were not expecting a great concourse of people in town on Monday, a large number gathered from all parts to do honor to the natal day of our beloved Queen and to enjoy the pleasures of a holiday. We expected that the excursions to the lakes would leave us very quiet, yet we were agreeably disappointed on seeing so many pleasant and fair faces on the streets together.

THE VOLUNTEERS.

About ten o'clock the volunteers assembled and marched to Ashburnham, where, under the command of Col. Poole, they went through various manœuvres, a large crowd being present manifesting great interest in the different companies. They then proceeded to the Market Square at 12 o'clock, and after a little preparatory arrangements, fired a feu de joie. During the whole of these proceedings the enlivening strains of Mr. Rackett's excellent Band made all cheerful and pleasant.

FIREMEN.

At two o'clock the Fire Brigade turned out and marched up and down the streets, pulling along their engine and hose wagon, and a fine looking set of men they are. On the Market Square they tested the power of the engine in throwing water to a great height in the air and also along the streets. The music of the Band rendered the intervals pleasant; all admired the rapid progress of the hand during the short period they have been under Mr Rackett's training.

The streets were thronged during the whole day with gentlemen and ladies, lads and lasses, and an immmerable number of little urchins, who, with their serpents and fire crackers, seemed to take a cruel delight in annoying the fair sex as they congregated in little knots on the corners or under the shades.

We saw very few drunk men during the day—a sign of the progress of temperance amongst us—and a token that if any drink they desire to do it in as concealed a manner as possible. We heard of no quarrelling, the usual consequence of crowds assembling together, where something stronger than water is obtainable.

THE FIREMEN'S DINNER.

About nine o'clock the Firemen and a very large number of friends sat down in their beautifully decorated hall to a splendid repast prepared by Mr. Cantiday, of the Commercial House, who is now well known for catering abilities. The tables groaned under the good things he had provided and laid out in good taste. Captain O'Donnell presided, and ably discharged the onerous duty of the occasion. On his right were C. Perry, Esq., M. P., J. Carnegie, jr., Esq., M. L.O., and D. G. Hatton, Esq. On the right, Mayor Scott, Councillor Doherty, and Dr. Kincaid. All classes of citizens were represented, all nationalities, and we believe all religious denominations in town, thus showing the broad and liberal views of our noble Firemen as well as their discretion.

Ample justice being done to the good things provided, and all feeling that whatever were the mingled toils or pleasures of the day, the evening was to be unmingled pleasure, Capt. O'Donnell called the company to order and to raise mental recreation, the physical part having been duly cared for. After reading a letter of apology from Mr. Edwards, Mr. O'Donnell remarked that it was with feelings of pride and pleasure that he undertook to discharge the duties of the evening. Although met there as citizens of Canada, it was no small privilege, for all felt proud that they were citizens of that great empire on which the sun never sets. When we consider, too, that we were an integral portion of that great empire that will not allow the meanest of her subjects to suffer unjustly, as the late gigantic struggle in Abyssinia testifies, and then when we think of that good and amiable Queen Victoria, possessed of such noble qualities, and whose kindness had dictated an autograph letter of condolence to the widow of Mr. McGee; he believed all would join heartily in drinking Her health. He then gave "The Queen."

The Band played "God Save the Queen."

"The Prince and Princess of Wales, and the Royal Family," followed.

"The Governor General of the Dominion ... Lieutenant Governor of Ontario."

Mr. Johnston then sang one of his pleasant Irish songs.

"The Army and Navy," coupled with "The Volunteers of Canada," was given and received with a right good will. In introducing it, Mr. O'Donnell remarked that if the Volunteers' services should be required that the Fenians would leave behind their engine and hose-cart, and go to the front to defend their country from the vile tribe of Shemmie.

Band—"Red, White and Blue."

Mr. Wm. Johnston, in responding, said the army of Britain and her navy required no praise; they had carved out their own name and fame on every famous battle field and encounter, in thunder tones to the world, and he was glad to be able to boast that we belong to that brave old flag that can protect as subjects, and does do it. He, Mr. Johnston, had been associated with the volunteers for 11 years, and he could speak for them. They had done their duty and they would do it, and they should do it. They had homes, sweethearts, wives and families to protect, and he felt assured that if any Fenian wretches would dare invade our soil due vengeance would be taken.

Dr. Kincaid also eloquently responded, endorsed all that Mr. Johnston said, but added that a numerous host who were not yet volunteers, would be, in case of danger.

Mr. Hatton proposed "The Dominion of Canada," and in doing so said we were not a year old yet and we are a nation, with all the machinery of a nation, enacting our own law and seeking redress only in a constitutional manner when required, and concluding by asserting that there was a great future before us.

Mr. Henderson then sung "God bless our new Dominion."

Mayor Scott spoke to this toast in his usual happy manner, was glad that we belonged to the great British Empire, and hoped we would long remain so. It was no small honor to belong to that little gem of the sea that has the power to protect, and no lie to the autocrat or tyrant that dares to frown on one of her subjects.

Messrs. Perry and Carnegie also spoke briefly to the toast. Mr. Perry referred to the Militia Bill and Fortification Act that set apart $5,000,000 for fortifications, and said he felt constrained as a Conservative member to vote for it.

"The Mayor and Corporation," responded to by the Mayor and Councillor Doherty.

"Our Guests," responded to by Mr. Hatton.

"The Mercantile Interest," responded to by Mr. Lemay and Mr. J. Moloney.

"The Mechanical Interest," responded to by Mr. Doherty and Mr. P. Hamilton.

"The Press" and "The Ladies" came in their turn.

Then followed a number of volunteer toasts. "The Health of the Officers and Members of the Fire Brigade," "The Band," during which a well deserved meed of praise was given to the Bandmaster, Mr. Rackett.

"The Medical Profession"; in response to which Dr. Kincaid remarked that in the county we have 9 legally qualified practitioners and 11 who had no legal qualifications, or quacks.

After giving "Our Host," Mr. Castiday, the meeting broke up, having spent one of those very pleasant evenings that the Firemen know how to arrange.

Are there Fenians in Peterborough?

This is a question that is often put to us as we meet persons on the streets and when we are from home, and a delicate question it is to answer. Sometimes we hear it said that there are hundreds around us, and again we hear it said that they believe there is not one. Both these statements, we believe, are exaggerations. We do not believe there are hundreds, or even one hundred, yet we might be astray. We are not of those that would accuse our Roman Catholic fellow citizens of being Fenians; we are fully persuaded that by far the large majority of them are loyal, and would rally round the old flag against the Fenian cut-throats, if their services were required. In saying they are loyal, we do not mean to say that they forget old Ireland, the land of their nativity, the land of their forefathers, and the land of hallowed associations. No, they do not forget Ireland; but they are loyal because they enjoy peace, plenty, protection, justice and religious liberty under the benign sway of Victoria, such as they know right well they would not enjoy even in the Holy City itself. But to return to the question—Are there Fenians in Peterboro' and vicinity? We say we believe there are Fenians in Peterborough, but we do not know who they are. There can be no doubt that all those stragglers, who pass the greater part of their time on the other side of the lakes, are Fenians and Fenian sympathizers. They go over there and they associate with Fenians, and almost no one else; they drink in the poison and they become the loud mouthed champions of Ireland's wrongs. These come back again and they remain here without any known means of support. How can they do it? They do not work when away and they lounge round hotels and groggeries while here, so that they must either be blackleg or Fenians, and to the latter idea we are inclined. These renegades coming amongst us are doing more harm in sowing the seeds of discord, privately, than we are aware of; and during the present excitement they should be every one compelled to give a full account of how they get their daily bread, independently of how they get the drinks. We have all along been practising a kind of deceptive game, we have been pretending to believe that every man in Canada is loyal, while our correct convictions were to the contrary. Let us have the strongest evidences to come out and name whom we suspect, and say in whom we have confidence. We have no confidence in those birds of passage, those men who on landing go at once to the Brotherhood; but because they are disloyal why should we accuse the whole people? All intelligent, honest Catholics are loyal. The designing, idle, restless snakes need watching.

After parade, on Monday, the Ashburnham Company marched to the Drill Shed in Ashburnham, where, before they were dismissed, the Captain presented the following prizes, offered by the Officers of the Company as an encouragement for a regular attendance at target practice, for the best average over through the season at regular Company target practice:—

No. 1, $10,	Sergt. D. Campbell, average per shot,	24-5
" 2,	Sergt. [illegible], " "	23-3
" 3, $5,	Corp. John Gow, " "	11-30
" 4,	Private J. King " "	11-30

These averages do not include any scores made by any of these men at any rifle matches, &c., but are their average shooting through the year at all ranges.

CONCERT.—We have been requested to remind our readers of the concert on the 4th of June in the Music Hall. A splendid Piano lent by Messrs. Nordheimer, of Toronto, will be in use, and several amateurs from Port Hope, Toronto and other places, we are informed, will aid during the evening.

FENIANISM.

There are rumours of another attempt to invade Canada, and 20,000 men, it is said, are numbered off for the work. So long as they confine their numbers to 20,000 Canada is safe. They are holding a great pic nic at Buffalo, and cause are ready to believe that during the fair their number will be so increased as to warrant a raid. The gunboats now on the lakes will intimidate them. The most likely place for an attempt of a raid is in Lower Canada, where they can cross the line and fly back in a hurry. In order to save valuable lives it is best to keep a look out. A few hundred men stationed at exposed points may prevent damage and the shedding of blood.

JUSTIFIABLE CENSURE.

Our town contemporary intimates in its last issue that our strictures anent the Cooney case were "wholly undeserved"; we can afford to permit him to remain of that opinion. Our conduct is not under the guidance of the same motives that actuate the Editor of that paper. We find that in the same article that palliates, yea, justifies, the course adopted in bringing Cooney to trial before the magistrates, so that Fenianism could not be investigated, he misrepresents us as advising the seizure of papers and searching of trunks "in the absence of information and complaint under oath." We can hardly charge the Editor of the Review with the obtuseness of intellect that would discover this in our remarks. But we can accuse him of wilful perversion of the meaning of what we wrote. Our words were: "Then was the time to try him and learn the strength of the reports that had gained currency. Then was the time to get at the truth and to seize his trunks and papers, if there was the least suspicion of Fenianism." Is the Editor of the Review so dull in the perceptive faculties that he cannot see a trial first, and in case of disclosure that would warrant it, a seizure. But none are so blind as those who will not see.

We do not wonder that the Editor of the Review recommends caution in making seizures in supposed Fenian quarters; for if any one will take a look at the communication of Mr J. Carroll in a past issue of the Examiner he will find that the charge of holding a private interview with a Fenian General in Boston is laid to the charge of our contemporary, and an explanation was asked but was never given. Has he Fenian sympathies? Was he in Boston on business connected with the Brotherhood? A word of explanation is needed yet.

We have received an intimation that he is the Canadian correspondent of a Fenian paper in the United States, we think the Boston Pilot, and that his nom de plume is "Central Canada"; will our contemporary enlighten the public on this matter? If that same contemporary is the month piece of Fenianism in this county we should know it. The fanning of the straw is that way. A few weeks since, Father Chiniquy visited Peterborough and delivered three discourses on the subject of his great mission—the conversion of French Canadians to the Truth of the Gospel; but not a word about him appeared in the Review, and the public wondered why this was so. Last week there was a splendid opportunity to search out the truth of the reports that we had a Fenian Circle in town, and our contemporary becomes indignant at us for recommending an investigation and a search for papers. A word of explanation is needed, and perhaps the public think so too. In future if the Editor of the Review will allow us to take our own way we will not interfere with him. He has persevered for years in endeavoring to misrepresent us and belittle us, and invariably the recoil was more than he could bear.—This one will turn out so too. For his consolation we can inform him that at no period of our history was our circulation so large as it is at present and there is almost a daily increase. His censure is better for us than his praise would be; for, if he praised us, we would soon be suspected.

The Stabbing and Shooting Case.

In another column will be found a letter from "One of the Magistrates," who sat on Cooney's case, vindicating their action in having the investigation with closed doors. With all due deference to his opinions, and we respect him highly, we can see no cause to change ours yet; we still hold that the matter was badly managed. During the excitement was the time to get out whatever was known, and "One of the Magistrates" will admit that no time should have been allowed for intimidation, threatenings or offers of corruption, as is reported. Mr. Lehane dare not come on Monday, but he was here on Saturday; why was his evidence not taken then? The Magistrates did not investigate the report of Fenian sympathy or Fenianism as laid against Cooney, and if not, why try a case of common assault with closed doors, and in the Jail? Were they not afraid that an effort would be made to re-cue him. We do not wish to enter into the whole matter over again, but we find no reason, in the remarks of "One of the Magistrates," to withdraw or modify a single remark of our last issue. We believe that if the matter had been properly handled, we should have found that there are Fenians in Peterboro and vicinity.

Father MaMahon, of Ridgeway notoriety, has been guilty of obtaining a Fenian newspaper into his cell, and refuses to give information how he got it. This is the harmless lamb that came over to see after the spiritual wants of the raiders. The man whom the people of Lindsay (the Roman Catholics only) petitioned the Dominion government to get released, even when punished refused information. He is under more restraint now, and in future we need not fear that he will get released from the just punishment due to his crime.

IMPEACHMENT.—The President is not found guilty. The vote on every article stood 35 to 19, so that Andy will remain in the White House a while longer. Mr. Stanton has tendered his resignation; of course he might as well now. General Grant is named for the Presidency in the coming campaign, and Mr. Colfax for the Vice-Presidency, by the Republican party. It is believed to be a very strong ticket and likely to be successful. Time is even more certain owing to the state of the South.

CONCERT.—We are glad to learn that the same Hudson, who a resident of North Monaghan informed us was murdered, is still alive. How the rumour gained currency we are not able to say; we know, however, that it was commonly reported and believed by many.

There appears a long letter in the Montreal Witness, referring to the action of the Colonsay Presbytery, in reversing the decision of the session of the Lakefield Church, in refusing to admit a liquor dealer to their communion. The latter may refer to the fact that the church session special prayers for special blessings to deal with this question, and every lover of his church will agree that something is needed to arouse the controlling party in each church to act at once in this matter.

It is painful to witness how many professing christians are tipplers, and we feel sure that the ministers of the Presbyterian Church as a body deplore this and we are glad to be able to say that we have at least three ministers of that church in this county that cease not, on every reasonable opportunity, to raise their earnest protest against the use of intoxicating liquors. We hope they will not cease until their principles are triumphant throughout the whole church. But there is one thing that requires a little attention, and that is the distinction between the dealer in liquors and the person who buys it for his own immediate use. We have not been able to reconcile christianity and the liquor traffic, nor can we find an excuse in the word of God for the man who uses it to drink it. We therefore think drinker as well as dealer should attract the attention of the churches.

We are fully aware of the difficulty in the way of eradicating the evil, and a crying evil it is; but men should not cease to urge the united action of the ministerial bodies on this matter at the approaching meetings of the different Presbyteries, Conferences and Unions, and we believe that united action would do a great deal to correct Public Opinion on this matter.

PICNIC AT THE INDIAN VILLAGE, MUD LAKE.—On Monday the Rev. E. Roberts, who is about to remove to the Indian Village to take charge of the affairs of the Indians there, gave the red men and families a picnic. Mrs. Roberts provided all refreshments. Several whites also attended, but they brought their own baskets owing to the difficulty of Mrs. Roberts having to bring the provisions some miles for the whole tribe of Indians there. We believe all who went had a pleasant day, and the Indians will hail with delight such a happy introduction of a new order of things. We have no doubt but that Mr. and Mrs. Roberts' kind manner, continual presence and watchful care will have a very salutary effect upon the Mud Lake Indians.

ASHBURNHAM.—The Court of Revision for this Village was held on Tuesday, at twelve o'clock. There were only two formal appeals and in both instances the assessment was confirmed. There was, therefore, no change whatever in the Roll. After the court had arisen, two or three entered the Town Hall, but they were too late, and as the cause of appeal had not been signified to the clerk the matter will have to stand as it is. Aggrieved parties may apply to the council to have justice by way of abatement of taxes. There was no council business transacted. That body meets on Monday evening next.

It gives us much pleasure to observe that Mr. Wm. H. Moore, Attorney of this town, has just passed a most successful and highly creditable examination, as a Barrister, at Osgoode Hall, Toronto. The answers of Mr. M. to the questions propounded to him by the examiners were so universally good, that in complimentary terms they informed him that he would not be required to pass an oral examination, and that his was one of as meritorious as ever passed in Osgoode Hall. We wish him every success.

We also learn that Mr. John Green passed a very creditable examination as an Attorney.

Through the interference of J. H. Cameron, Corporate, a noted Fenian of Toronto, has been released. That is the great Grand Master. Nolan has to remain a while longer. His wife burnt the records of the Hibernian Society on its first arrest. A lawyer of Toronto, named Dehse, was the writer of sedition that appeared in the Irish Canadian. Several of those who gave evidence against Whalen have received threatening letters, similar to what has taken place here.

TERRY FINNEGAN.—We received a copy this week of the Fenian Volunteer, published in Buffalo by the celebrated Terry Finnegan. How did it get across the lines? It must have been mis-directed in some way. It contains the threat that across the frontier it will come, all our government influence to the contrary, notwithstanding. There is a strong appeal in it to the pric-thood to take care of Mr. Moylan, of the Freeman. Terry and he don't agree now.

THE WEATHER AND THE CROPS.—There have been few seasons so favorable as the present for the labours of the husbandman. The spring was dry and afforded a good opportunity to get in the seed, and now that we have a timely and refreshing rain, followed by warm growing weather, may expect an abundant harvest. The fall crops never looked better at this season of the year.

We learn that the Ministers of the Baptist Union of Canada will hold there annual meeting this year, in this town, on Tuesday and Wednesday the 9th and 10th of June. The Lakefield Baptist Church intend taking advantage of this to have a social tea on Thursday evening, the 11th of June, when they expect to be able to procure some of those ministers from a distance to deliver addresses on the occasion.

A NEW PAPER FOR ORMSBEE.—We have received the first copy of a new paper called the Ormsbee Standard. It is published by Mr. Delaware, formerly of the British Canadian, Port Hope. It is neatly printed, inily as large as the former Warder and will advocate the same politics—Conservative. Notwithstanding this we believe there is room enough for all. We wish it success.

The Disraeli Government has been again defeated. The Premier now admits that they will have to consider their position. Continual defeats may have the salutary effect of forcing him to give place to men who are willing to grapple with the great question of the Irish Church.

The Keene excursion on Monday, we are informed was a decided success. $160 was realized on the best alone. The day was all that could be desired, the trip a pleasant one, the company select and agreeable, and all passed off in the most satisfactory style.

THE COLLEGE QUESTION.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—In the last Review I observed the speech of Professor Williamson to the students of Queen's College at the closing of the session. The Professor considers the subject of the action of the government in withdrawing the legislative grant to the Colleges, as the most important one to bring to their notice. He sets out ostensibly with this as his text, but soon leaves it in order to lay before them "a history of the origin and management of the university endowment of Canada." He is pleased to charge the friends of the "monopoly" with keeping out of view a portion of the facts connected with the early history of the endowment, which I take the liberty to deny. So far from this being the case the friends of the People's Colleges have invariably clung to the original intentions of the movers in this important matter, knowing, as they do, that not a syllable can be found about Denominational Colleges or Seminaries being included in the actions of either the Canadian or Imperial Governments. The Professor thus introduces the subject to his auditors:—

After declaring that the means of a College education, being centralized and monopolized by one locality, is the very reverse of what was designed by the original grant of the University endowment, he proceeds, "it was expressly declared in the despatch of the Duke of Portland in 1797, communicating the gracious intentions of His Majesty, George III, to set apart a portion of the crown lands for the purpose of a higher education in Upper Canada,—that the object of that endowment was for the establishment and maintenance, not of one University or College, but Colleges in the words of the despatch, or seminaries of a large and more comprehensive nature, that is than the Grammar Schools before mentioned and provided by the same documents, "for the promotion of religious and moral trainining, and the study of the arts and sciences. This is carefully kept out of view by the advocates of the Toronto monopoly, yet such are the terms of the despatch, &c. Now, while blaming the friends of the Toronto University with concealing facts, methinks we can retort upon the Professor. Why does he and the enemies of the national college "carefully keep out of view" that the first public movement towards a higher education in the province originated in the Legislature of this Country; that the Legislative Council and the Legislative Assembly in 1797 concurred in a joint address to the King "imploring that His Majesty would graciously please to direct the Government of this Province to appropriate a certain portion of the waste lands of the Crown as a fund for the establishment and support of a respectable Grammar School in each district thereof, and also a College or University for the instruction of youth in the different branches of liberal knowledge." To this address the Duke of Portland communicated to the Hon Peter Russel His Majesty's intention "to comply with the wishes of the Legislature of this Province in such a manner as should be judged to be the most effectual." Now, observe the people of this Province originated the setting apart of land for the creation of a fund for the support of a Grammar School in each District, and a College or University. Not Colleges but a College. The Imperial reply, granted the request directed the local government to name the object and extent of the appropriation and how it could be made productive for the formation of the fund. Mr. President Russel submitted the matter to the Executive Council, the Judges and Law Officers of the Crown for their report. On the 1st December, 1798, they reported that an appropriation of 500,000 acres would be sufficient for the establishment and maintainance of 4 Grammar Schools and a University. This report was sent home, and a favorable answer was received; but strangely enough so early as 1818 no trace of this document could be found. A man who reads the early history of the endowment must be seriously afflicted with sectarianism to discover the "shadow of a shade" of an intention to establish Denominational Colleges in either the Canadian or English despatches concerning the fund. It was the object of local movers chiefly to establish national Grammar Schools, an University was to be secondary. No idea ever seems to have entered their heads of Sectarian Colleges, on the contrary, they were anxious that the seminari a of learning should be for the education of the whole youth of the country without distinction as to creed. It remained for such sectaries as Professor Williamson, Dr Ryerson and others to strain every possible word to find out a warrant to establish what they so much desire, viz: Sectarian Colleges in place of the national one. The difference it appears to me between these men and the friends of the Toronto University lies in the fact that the former prefer a Denominational Colleges to a large national one. They cannot shake off the bigotry of exclusiveness, for the expansiveness of nationality. They feel that they must educate their own youth, to allow them to attend a national college and "a Godless Institution" such as the Toronto University, would imperil their morals. They have written, preached and lectured to destroy the present institution, so that they may raise their own upon its ruins. They unite, it is true, for the purpose of demolition, but beyond this where are they? Every one for his own what sympathy has Queen's with Victoria? or Victoria with Trinity, or Regiopolis with either? Let either of these institutions have the title of a claim that Toronto University has to its endowment, and, do you suppose for a moment it would entertain an application for a share? Not a bit of it. Well, let us hope there is enough of patriotism not to say of nationality to preserve our noble University from the hands of the robbers. No man has probably done more to injure it than the Chief Superintendent of Education. He has laboured hard to get the endowment to be shared by the Denominational Colleges, charges the advocates of the institution with mystifying the matter at issue, by using the terms University and College as one and the same, and justifies himself and those who labour with him in their endeavors to rob both institutions, by stating they only oppose a "one College monopoly," they do not wish to impair the University at all. Now, it is well known that the Act of 1853 provided for the affiliation of the Colleges with the University, but no College as yet has availed itself of the provisions of that Act, and, will not, it is said, unless they receive a share of the endowment. The Doctor, like the Professor, laboured hard to show that the original intention of the endowment was for Denominational Colleges—a point in which both signally fail.

If I understand the question at issue, the main point is, that the friends of the Toronto Institution are in favor of a Non-denominational College; the others denounce the "godless" College and exalt their own. If we believe the half they write and say of the one they hate, we should begin to suppose that it would be unsafe for the morals of our sons to send them to Toronto, that owing to the impurous condition of the people in lowering the standard of examinations, our boys would not receive so good an education there as they would in either Cobourg or Kingston, and yet Dr Ryerson sends his son to this "godless degraded University," to a mere girl's school for French and German," as he pleased to term it. The Professor in leading the Bill brought in by Mr. Draper in 1866 or 1867 rather forgets what its character was if he ever knew. He tells his students that this Bill "provided clearly and explicitly for the incorporation of the several chartered Colleges as integral parts of one University and the participation of each in the public University fund." That was correct; but he did not tell them that Bill provided for the allotment of £3,000 yearly to the Episcopalians and but £1,500 a year for each of the other large denominations. He extols it as "a wise and statesman-like measure," and in his leading features would now satisfy the country. A fair chance was given to the country to pronounce upon its merits at the close of 1867, and on this very Bill a larger vote was never given in Canada before or since. If such a measure would carry now, then we as a people are losing our nationality in our sectarianism.

The Act of 1853 was brought in by Mr Hincks, who never dreamt of having a clause in it providing for denominational Colleges receiving a portion of the grant. The 84th clause has no word of Colleges in it—"academical education" is not usually applied to Colleges—no doubt it was purposely put in. If Colleges were intended it would have said so, and it is hard twisting to get anything satisfactory from such a questionable expression. We have no fear of being deprived of the endowment of the People's College, unless those vagabond Fenians overrun the country, all that Dr Ryerson, Professor Williamson or the Editor of the Review may say to the contrary.

I am, Mr Editor,
Yours very truly,
J. E.

Peterboro, May 23, 1868.

PRESBYTERIAN.

We announced last week that Mr McKenzie, Presbyterian Minister of Baltimore and Cold Springs, had resigned his connection with that church. The following are his reasons for doing so:—

To the Rev. the Moderator and members of the Presbytery of Cobourg of the Canada Presbyterian Church.—

I beg leave to resign the pastoral charge of the congregations of Baltimore and Cold Springs, and my connection with this church.

It is with sincere sorrow that I feel constrained to separate myself thus from two congregations, with whom I have lived so long and so happily up to the present moment as in christian fellowship; and to sever myself from brethren in the ministry of the Canada Presbyterian Church among whom a number none of my most esteemed friends, and whose friendship I still fondly hope to enjoy.

This very solemn step I now take, not because there is any want of harmony between my own views and those of the Canada Presbyterian Church, in reference to what we term "the doctrines of faith and salvation;" but chiefly because I am now convinced that the Canada Presbyterian Church ignores, both in theory and practice, certain great scriptural principles which should be fully recognized and acted on, in the worship of God and in the government of the Church.

Signed, W. J. McKENZIE.

The Cobourg World says:—

"This paper was considered, and Mr. McKenzie read for more than an hour elaborate and carefully prepared statement of his views, discussing the great principle to which reference is made in the above paper. The gist of Mr. McKenzie's statement seemed to be, that we were told in Scripture of Rabies Volumes, which attributes to persons, places, things, and times, when dedicated to God: that this holiness depends upon the act of consecration or dedication; has degrees, may be temporary or permanent; that persons and things once dedicated cannot be alienated without guilt, though they may be redeemed, or used for secular purposes in cases of extreme necessity; that churches are temples or holy places, and their furniture, particularly the table on which the bread and wine in the Lord's Supper are placed, is holy, and that to use them for secular purposes is sinful; that the Canada Presbyterian Church ignores this doctrine, and that Dr. Candlish in particular, and Presbyterians generally, assert that we have no longer under the New Testament dispensation a temple, priesthood or sacrifices, in the proper sense of these words.

"Lengthened conference was held with Mr McKenzie as to the application of these principle and his answers were to the following effect. I take exception to the clause in the appendix to the directory for the public worship of God "As no church is capable of any holiness, under any pretence of whatsoever dedication or consecration." A man who is dedicated to the ministry would be guilty of sacrilege in robbing God of his services, unless through necessity. The laying on of the hands of the Presbytery constitutes a man a minister. When the laying on of hands is not practised, I do not consider a man a minister between the publication of the First and Second Books of Discipline, the laying on of hands was not practised; and it is question able whether, as Presbyte s, the no ordained during that time had afterwards the right to lay on hands, not having been themselves ordained. I decline to say whether I consider the ordination of ministers of the Canada Presbyterian Church valid. I administered the ordinance of Baptism on next Lord's day when I was under any ordination as a right to do so. I desire it to be noted, however, that there are ordinations that may be considered regular, and others that are irregular, and that such irregular ordinations may be considered in a sense valid. I cannot find the class of men, commonly called Elders in the Reformed Churches, either in the New Testament, or in the Church of History until about the 16th century; and inasmuch as they are ordained without imposition of hands, they are not holy persons. If such men are ordained by the laying on of hands, I consider them to be ordained persons in the same sense as minister, and to be bound like ministers to devote themselves exclusively to God's service. I consider it a desecration for men who are not set apart by the laying on of the hands of the Presbytery, to occupy the pulpit in the house of God as preachers of the gospel. I consider a regular ordination to be an ordination by a man who has received authority from his predecessor to ordain. I do not consider the statement in the Basis of Union, Section V., viz, "the official equality of Presbyters without any officers in the church superior to the said Presbyters, is founded on and agreeable to the word of god, to be right. I do not think that any such equality is found in the word of God. The apostles have successors in the Church, not as apostles, but as rulers in the Church and over other Presbyters, and with the exclusive right of ordination. Baptism is properly dispensed when it is dispensed by one who has authority to do it. In baptism, a change takes place in the child, viz., that of relative holiness. As to other points, I hold the doctrine of the Westminister standards concerning Baptism. I am not aware that there is a departure in my mind from the doctrine of the Lord's Supper, as laid down in the Confession of Faith. But I think our church is wrong in denying the Lord's Supper to poor, sick, bed ridden members of the church, who are unable to get to the public administration of the Sacrament. I brought the minister of another church to administer the communion to a dying woman, who was a member of this church. I consider it not consistent with my vow at ordination "to endeavor directly or indirectly to subvert the practice of this church," but I consider it a laudable inconsistency.

In answer to the question, Will Mr McKenzie be less that the following statement of the Confession, XXI, 6., "Written prayer, nor any other part of religious worship, is now under the gospel, either tied unto or made more acceptable by, any place in which it is performed, or towards which it is directed," is consistent with the views expressed by him of degrees of holiness? he replied, If the Jews might expect more especially to meet with God in His temple where the ordinances were dispensed, then we might expect to meet with God, more especially where the New Testament ordinances are now dispensed. I consider that under the christian dispensation places of worship are symbolical of Christ's dwelling with the church on earth.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—Three boys who were engaged on Monday in firing a toy cannon in Toronto, unluckily put a piece of iron in it intending to shoot at a dust, but it went off before they were aware and accidentally struck a little girl named Imlis in the neck, causing paralysis. She never recovered. This is a solemn warning to boys using firearms of any kind.

A HEAVY FEE.—Le Canada says that the Hon. John Sullivan Dorion has been applied to defend Whelan, and that the hon. gentleman will undertake the task, provided he be assured the sum of $10,000.

An act to provide for taking evidence in Canada in relation to civil and commercial matters pending before Courts of Justice in any other of Her Majesty's dominions, or before foreign tribunals."

After which His Excellency was pleased to reserve the following bills for signification of Her Majesty's pleasure thereon:—An act respecting the treaty between Her Majesty and United States of America for appropriation and surrender of certain offenders. An act to fix salary of Governor General. An act for the relief of Joseph Frederick Whitewes.

The Hon. Speaker of the House of Commons addressed his Excellency the Governor General, as follows:—

"May it please your Excellency: The Commons of Canada have voted the supplies required to enable our government to defray the expenses of public service. In name of the Commons, I present to your Excellency a bill intituled an act for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money required for defraying certain expenses of public services for the financial year ending respectively the 30th day of June, 1868, and 30th day of June, 1869, and for other purposes relating to the public service, to which I humbly request your Excellency's assent.

To this bill the Royal assent was signified in the following words:—"In Her Majesty's name His Excellency the Governor-General thanks Her loyal subjects, accepts their benev

NOT QUITE SO.

"It is among the most savage and debased tribes only that the condition and comfort of the horse have been neglected;" but we believe there are many in civilized countries who are guilty of the same neglect, and without the excuse of the former; here all may avail themselves of the use of an article which has done more than any thing else heretofore known to improve the condition and relieve the suffering of the horse. Those who will not use it will be the losers, their horse the sufferers. To avoid both use "Dr. Le'y's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine," and you will be satisfied with the result.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine, well and favorably known for the past ten years, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used; and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction where the directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations and speak in the highest terms of its virtues and magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won for itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, alternative stomach tonic, unsurpassed in the history of medical preparations. It seldom fails to cure Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Indigestion, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Kidney Complaints, Acid Stomach Pimbleic or Asthma, and restores to vital activity the system debilitated by suffering and disease.

Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat, coughs, Diptheria, pains in the side, loins and back, neuralgia, toothache, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and in fact superseding all other preparations of the kind.

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for scalds, burns, bruises, sprains, chilblains, cholera morbus, bilious colic, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c.

Price only twenty-five cents per bottle.

Sold in Peterborough by J. W. Gilmour, A. W. Kemp, and Wm. Coulter.—In Keene by A. Campbell, Campbell McNeil & Co., C. Britton, Lindsay, and all Medicine Dealers.

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It clears the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalising the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

MRS. WINSLOW'S
SOOTHING SYRUP!
FOR CHILDREN TEETHING,

GREATLY facilitates the process of teething by softening the gums, reducing all inflammation—will allay ALL PAIN and spasmodic action, and is

SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Depend upon it, mothers, it will give rest to yourselves, and

Relief and Health to your Infants.

We have put up and sold this article for years, and CAN SAY IN CONFIDENCE AND TRUTH of it what we have never been able to say if any other medicine—NEVER HAS IT FAILED IN A SINGLE INSTANCE TO EFFECT A CURE when time'y used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations and speak of terms of commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "WHAT WE DO KNOW" after years of experience, AND PLEDGE OUR REPUTATION FOR THE FULFILMENT OF WHAT WE HERE DECLARE. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper.

Sold by druggists throughout the world.

Price, only 25 Cents per Bottle.

MONTREAL HOUSE,
VERY IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

The subscriber has much pleasure in announcing to his numerous friends that his stock of Spring and Summer Goods is now complete in every department, and that for quality, style and variety it cannot be surpassed in town, while in cheapness it cannot at all be equalled.

His Staple Goods were purchased before the late rise in Cotton, and are consequently over 30 per cent cheaper than they can now be purchased. It is his intention to give his customers the full benefit of this advantage, as he is offering these goods at a rather lower advance on cost than usual, and will continue to do so as long as they last.

In his stock will be found several cheap lots which were purchased at a bargain, and which will be offered much below their usual prices.

One lot of DRESS GOODS is offered at from 4½d to 9d per yard,

And a lot of first quality ALL WOOL CANADIAN TWEEDS is offered at from 3s to 3s 6d per yard. The 3s lot of these Tweeds cost 3s 6d to make them, and the 3s 6d lot were sold wholesale at 4s 6d per yard.

Good FACTORY COTTONS, we are selling at 4d, 5½d and 6½d per yard.

Good BLEACHED COTTONS, we are selling at 5½d, 6½d and 7½d per yard.

PRINTS, at 5d, 6½d and 7½d; the best ever seen at the money.

DRESS GOODS, in Lustres, Challies and Bareges, at 9d, 1s and 1s 3d per yard—very pretty and good.

Dress MUSLINS, very good and pretty, at 7½d per yard.

PARASOLS—a large assortment, from 3s up.

LADIES' HATS AND BONNETS,

FLOWERS—New Style.

STRAW TRIMMINGS,

BUGLE TRIMMINGS, &c., &c.

At about 25 per cent. lower than they are sold other places. We make it a point to sell our Millinery Goods at less than the customary profits.

Good Striped TICKINGS at 9d per yard.

Stripe SHIRTINGS, Blue and Brown Derrys, Straw TICKINGS, &c., &c., at very low prices.

SHAWLS—We are clearing out our Stock at cost price and under.

FANCY BONNET RIBBONS, we are selling out in cheap lots.

BELT BUCKLES selling off at cost and less than cost.

BLACK VEILS, we are selling off at almost any price.

Our reason for offering some of these things under Cost is that our stock of them is too large and we wish to reduce it.

We hope our friends will call and judge for themselves that we do not advertise what we cannot show.

C L O T H S.

We invite particular attention to our Stock of Cloths, which is one of the best assorted to be found.

Our CANADIAN TWEEDS at 3s and 3s 6d per yard, already mentioned as one of the cheap lots, every person should buy.

In FINER CLOTHS, also, we can suit any person who favors us, as our stock is so varied, and our rule is to sell on very small profits.

This department of our business is under the charge of Mr. BAKEWELL, who is now so well known as a first-class Cutter, that it is needless to make any remark upon his ability.

READY-MADE CLOTHING.

We have now on hand one of the largest assortments in Town of Spring and Summer Clothing, which we are offering at very low prices.

CALL AND EXAMINE OUR STOCK WHETHER YOU PURCHASE OR NOT.

Gentlemen's Hats, Caps, Shirts, Gloves, Hosiery, Ties, Paper Collars and Cuffs in any quantity.

J. W. DUNNET.

MOTHERS READ THIS.
HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, excoriated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, tremblin coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and will administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C.W., who are the sole proprietors.

N B—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 22

The Great English Remedy.
SIR JAMES CLARKE'S
CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,
Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition, but a safe and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorized Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

Poetry.

THE CARELESS WORD.

'Twas but a word, a careless word—
As thistle-down it seemed as light;
It passed a moment on the air,
Then onward winged its flight.

Another lip caught up the word,
And breathed it with a haughty sneer;
It gathered weight as on it sped,
That careless word in its career.

Upon rumor caught the flying word,
And busy gossip gave it weight,
Until that little word became
A vehicle of angry hate.

And then that word was winged with fire;
Its mission was a thing of pain;
For soon it fell like lava-drops
Upon a wildly-tortured brain.

And then another page of life
With burning, scalding tears was blurred;
A load of care was heavier made,
For added weight, that careless word.

That careless word, oh! how it scorched
A fiendish, bleeding, quivering heart,
Twas like a hungry fire that searched
Through every tender, vital part.

How wildly throbbed that aching heart!
Despondency its fountain stirred;
Its calmness, but bitter ashes mark
The pathway of that careless word.

Varieties.

TEN FOLLIES.

To think that the more a man eats, the fatter and stronger he will become.

To believe that the more hours children study at school the faster they learn.

To conclude that if exercise is good for the health the more violent and exhausting it is, the more good is done.

To imagine that every hour taken from sleep, is an hour gained.

To act on the presumption that the smallest room in the house is large enough to sleep in.

To argue that whatever remedy causes you to feel immediately better, "good for" the system, without regard to more ulterior efforts.

To commit an act which is felt itself to be prejudical, hoping that somehow or other it may be done in your case with impunity.

To advise others to take a remedy which you have not tried yourself without making special inquiry whether all the conditions are alike.

To eat without an appetite, or continue to eat after it has been satisfied, merely to gratify the taste.

To eat a hearty supper for the pleasure experienced during the brief time it is passing down the throat, at the expense of a whole night of disturbed sleep and a weary waking in the morning.

DEFINING HIS POSITION.—The "Fat Contributor," while at Nashville recently, was requested to define his position on politics, which he did in a letter to "John Happy," of the Nashville Banner, as follows:

"I am aware of the necessity of knowing just where a man stands in these times which try men's 'soles'—as well as the upper leather. To begin with, I am an old Henery Clay Whig, of the Polk School I believe in the hard cider platform of 1840, during which I cast a somewhat colored vote for Jackson. I voted against the animation of Abraham Lincoln, and I am in favor of the impeachment of Jefferson Davis. I favored the Main Law until they fired on our flag together with some of our flagstones, when I went in for a vigorous prosecution of peace. I am in favor of woman's rights if it is a good-looking woman and she 'writes' to me. I don't know much about the Monroe Doctrine, and as for horse 'doctoring' I don't know anything at all. I wouldn't vote to oblige a Mormon to have more than one wife, and am opposed to introducing cholera into the territories. I go in for tax on waterfalls, and am willing to allow chignons representation on the basis of population."

A TIPPLER'S STRATAGEM.—Sanerant relates the following anecdote of Schwartz, a famous German painter. Having been engaged to paint the ceiling of the Town Hall at Munich, by the day, his love of dissipation induced him to neglect his work, and the magistrates and overseers of the work were frequently obliged to hunt him out of the tavern. As he could no longer drink in quiet, he stuffed an image of himself, left the legs hanging down between the staging where he was accustomed to work, and sent one of his boon companions to move the image a little two or three times a day, and to take it away at noon and night. By means of this deceit on, he drank, without the least disturbance, a whole fortnight together, the innkeeper being aware of the plot. The officers came round twice a day to look after him, and seeing the well-known stockings which he was accustomed to wear, suspected nothing wrong, and went their way, greatly extolling their new convert as the most industrious and conscientious painter in the world.

A plucky old fellow whose son was a student at one of the New England colleges, spent the day with him and stopped to tea. When his cup was filled he seized a bowl of salt, which he supposed to be sugar, and put the usual quantity in his tea. Sly glances and suppressed 'snickering' led him to suspect that something was wrong, but the old fellow who didn't like to be laughed at, worried it down, and putting on a face that was intended to make everybody think that he liked the 'dose of salts,' he called for another cup and upon receiving it, said to the head snickerer, 'Young man will you be kind enough to pass the bowl of salt?' The salt was passed, and amid the most breathless silence, he dipped a couple of spoonfuls into his tea, stirred it up, and tasted it with a look of apparent satisfaction. "Why Mr. ——," said the young man opposite him "do you drink salt in your tea?" "Always," answered the plucky old man opposite him with a great emphasis, and his pleasant manner.

He that would pass the latter part of his life with honor and decency, must, when young, consider that he shall one day be old, and not forget to remember when he is old that he was once young.

An exchange says: There is something sweet about little girls. The Louisville Journal adds, "And it grows on 'em as they grow bigger."

Hood speaks of a bird building its nest on the ledge over the door of a doctor's office, as an attempt to rear its young in the very jaws of death.

The wicked man likes to eat and drink, but the good eats and drinks to live.—Plutarch.

The belly is an unthankful beast, never requiting the pleasure done, but continually craving more than it needs.—Grotes.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONESS REMEDY

IN CANADA.

MESSRS. Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq. Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system; at night took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

Look, Read, and Learn,

THAT THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr. Lewis Josephus, of the Distinguishes Tribe of Shoshonees, British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

THIS all-possessing Great Indian Remedy is wanted, and in broad and emphatic language, we can safely say may be replied upon to make a permanent cure of all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, Digestive Organs, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurity of the Blood, excepting the third stage of Consumption. In the Western Country where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has indeed affected some of the most Marvellous Cures, ever recorded in the annels of Historical Medicine. Such being the case, in addition to its former renown and celebrity, we defy humanity to dispute the fact that this, the Great Shoshonees Remedy in connection with the Shoshonees Vegetable Restorative Pills, is the Remedy of Remedies of the 19th Century, and the greatest boon ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity.

SUGAR-COATED.

ARE a safe and reliable remedy in all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary people, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

CANCERS CURED!

By proper, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay is required, until the cure is complete. The moment a cancer is discovered, it should be cured, as it will cost less and is more speedily cured than tumors of longer standing, and there is nothing to gain, and everything to lose by delay. What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, eye-lid or elsewhere, or small wart or sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given to parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. No money required in advance, and none until the cure is complete.
